WHEN a young woman set out on a week-end trip in the gay nineties she was equipped with clothes and luggage such as those worn and carried by the young woman at the right. Beside her stands a young woman dressed in the style of 1934. The models appeared with their contrasting dresses and traveling accessories at a recent merchandising convention in Chicago. Other models appeared in new fall and winter creations of the fashion experts.

An Iguana Visits the U. S.

UNLESS you have traveled in Central or South America you probably never have seen a live iguana, one of the large arboreal lizards of the southern isthmus and continent. F. Herrick-Herrick, adventurer and explorer, returned recently to New York with the six-foot specimen pictured here. With him in the picture is Miss Patricia Foster. The iguana, one of the few lizards in existence which can adapt itself to water, is found only in the new world.

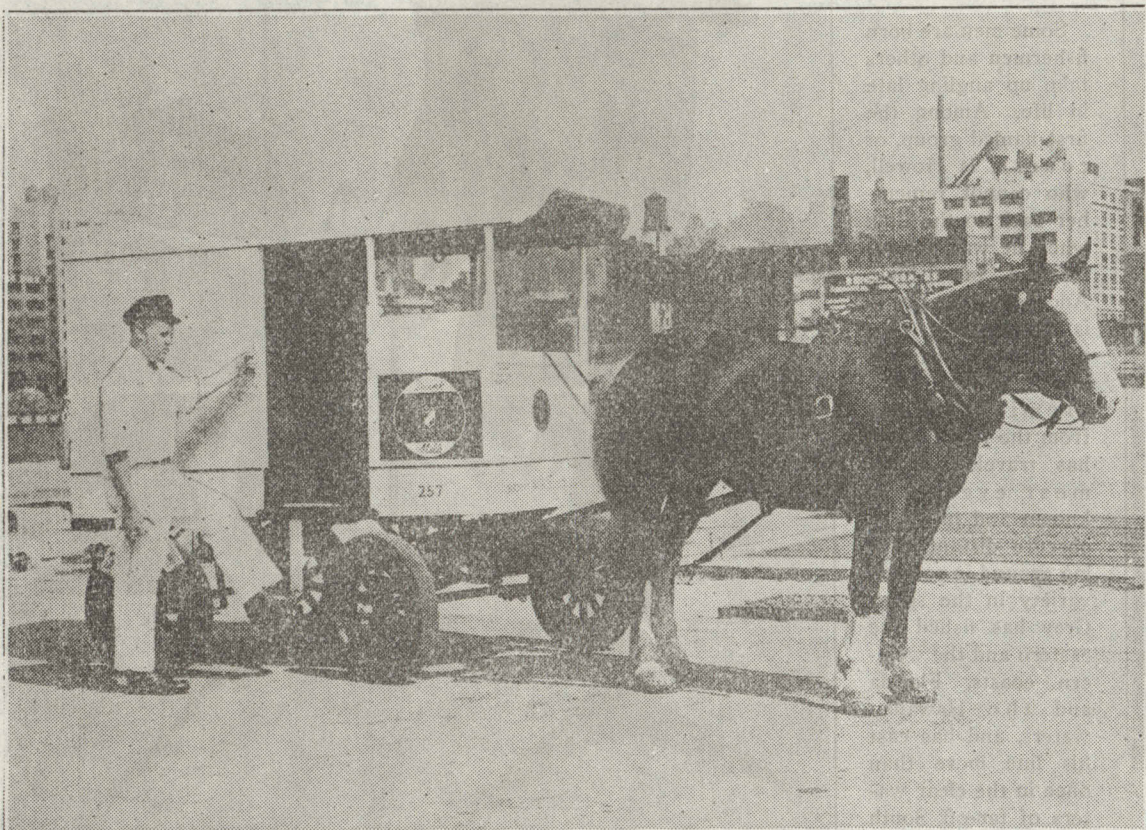

Permanent Beauty Patches

IF SHE ever decides she no longer cares for the decorations on her back, this Parisienne will be extremely sorry. Tattoo marks are easily applied with a needle, but the removal of them is painful and never very successful. According to the original caption for this picture, which came from Paris, the young woman is a devotee of a new fad—tattooed backs for beach parading decoration. Generally throughout the world, however, tattooing has come to be regarded as a barbaric practice. Skilful tattooing, as it is practiced today, originally was developed by the Chinese.

'Moo'—Here Comes the Milk Wagon

NEW YORKERS returning to their homes in the small hours of the morning soon may be startled by hearing a soft "moo" and imagine that a cow is loose in the neighborhood. In reality the noise will be the warning horn of an approaching "noiseless" milk wagon. A Gotham dairy is planning to equip all of its delivery wagons soon with pneumatic rubber tires, and the hoofs of the horses with rubber shoes to eliminate the early morning clatter of milk wagons, against which many sufferers from insomnia have complained for years. The wagons will have warning horns with the sound of a cow's "moo."

In the picture at the left, the "noiseless" milk wagon, equipped with pneumatic rubber tires; above, a closeup of one of the horse's rubber shoes, provided by a New York dairy.

STIFF, SORE MUSCLES

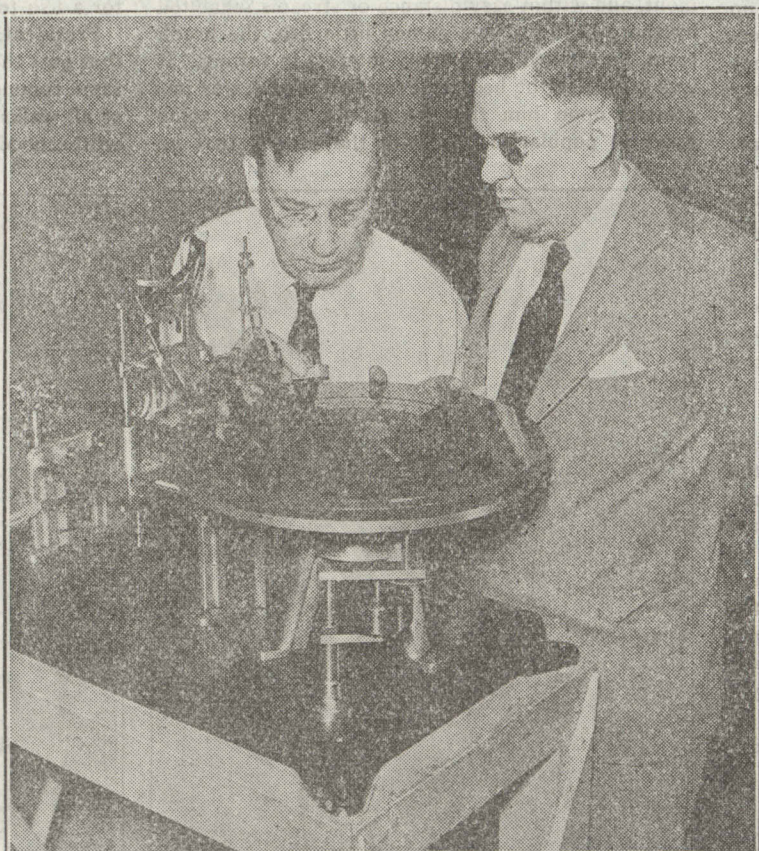

Burst those chains with "Ben-Gay"... it penetrates deep, fast!

"Ben-Gay," the original Baume Analgesic, is a sure, quick, deadly enemy of pain. At the first twinge, rub it on the aching parts. It goes through skin, flesh, muscle to the very spot of the pain. It stays there until the pain disappears. "Ben-Gay" has a hyposensitizing (pain-relieving) action never equaled by any of its many imitators. So, if you want sure relief, insist on the box with the red "Ben-Gay."

BLIND persons soon will be able to "read" simply by putting on a phonograph record and starting their talking machines as the result of a new recording invention by Edward R. Harris of Hollywood, Cal. His invention makes possible the recording of 85,000 words on two 16-inch discs. That number of words is the length of the average novel.
