

WILLIAM EDGAR BORAH is serving his fourth term as senator from Idaho. His advocacy of strict adherence to the eighteenth amendment and Volstead act rates him high up among the reformers.

SMITH W. BROOKHART, senator from Iowa under the Republican banner, is one of those who take delight in sticking pins in the seats of the mighty. He lives up to his middle name, which happens to be Wildman.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

THE GREAT COMMONER, the late William Jennings Bryan, might be termed the trail blazer for most of the present-day reformers. In his later years he became a leader of the fundamentalists—the religious conservatives.

(Photograph from P. & A.; copyright by Hartscock.)

A DRY CHIEF, the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, Indiana superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league. He is said to have been in the movement to unite the league, the klan, and others into a so-called reform organization.

AND THE GENTLEMAN FROM INDIANA, Senator James E. Watson, seems to classify, with the others of this group, as a reformer. He's very dry, at least; and once he was state president of a church league.

(Photograph copyright by Harris & Ewing.)

REMEMBERING THE MAINE—On the thirtieth anniversary of the tragedy that precipitated the Spanish-American war crowds gather for memorial services at the mast of the ill-fated battleship in Arlington cemetery, across the Potomac from Washington.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

HERE'S THE TYPICAL REFORMER, a composite photograph of the five pictures shown at the top of the page. It might make an interesting comparison with the composite photo of United States army generals which was published in this section last Sunday.

AND CUBA JOINS IN REMEMBERING—A Cuban army airman drops a floral tribute on the Maine monument in Havana, likewise on the thirtieth anniversary of the sinking of the battleship, attesting the island republic's gratitude for the independence won on the battlefield.

(Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

The great door clanged shut!

... and the two adventurers were locked in a room of the ancient castle, left to probable starvation. Hanbury and Chandos had accompanied their friend, Mansel, to the wilds of this Austrian forest in search of a beautiful young girl who was held for ransom. High adventure they had thought it—and now it had come to stark tragedy. And all the time the lovely Adele was imprisoned elsewhere in the gloomy castle.

A thrilling tale of the daring devotion of three modern London knights who set out on a medieval adventure.

PERISHABLE GOODS By Dornford Yates

Starts in the Magazine Section of Today's Tribune And Continues Every Sunday!

6 FAMOUS GIBSON PHOTOGRAPHS $5

Babyland

Where tiny tots come to laugh and play—Where happy natural expressions become permanent records With Photographs

Photographs Live Forever GIBSON STUDIOS 58 EAST WASHINGTON Phone Central 3982

Open Sundays Present This Ad at Time of Sitting

BRIMS A BIT WIDER, FOR VARIETY

The Bovey employs Copper & Copper's chifon felt in setting the pace for tailored trimness. The silk belting ribbon bands are two toned. There's every shade in every head size for $19.50. Others are priced from $15 to $25

For Sale at Michigan Ave. at Monroe Street

You Can't Help Loving 'Em!

Irrepressible KIDS! Imitating heroes, teasing the poor little rich boy, worrying their families to death! Everyone in the neighborhood hates to see them coming—but they can't help loving 'em. Make their acquaintance today—

KIDS—by Bert Green

A FULL PAGE COMIC IN COLORS In Today's Tribune!

VIEW OF NORTH LOBBY—HOTEL SHORELAND

THE inviting warmth and stately beauty of the Shoreland lobby is indicative of the luxury of appointments and lavish spaciousness that prevails in Hotel Shoreland apartments. Here is splendor tempered with good taste. Luxury in true refinement. A hotel-home that reflects the standards of those who know and appreciate better living. At Hotel Shoreland you will find a new

Hotel Shoreland

At the Lake . . . just north of 55th St.

M. Schwarz, Manager. Phone Plaza 1000