

GANGLAND!

Every Sunday, James O'Donnell Bennett Adds Another Chapter to His Story of Chicago's Gang Wars—in Your Sunday Tribune

It began when someone murdered Dean O'Banion, the florist, back-slapper and killer, while another man shook his hand. The series continues through the reigns of half-a-dozen beer-running, high-jacking, quick-shooting chiefs, and sees each of them exiled or dead. It witnesses automobiles careening side by side through darkened streets, while a stream of fire and lead pours from one into the other. It follows riddled men—in caskets covered with flowers—to the gunman's grave.

It is James O'Donnell Bennett's "Gangland," the true yet incredible tale of what has happened in the underworld of Chicago during the last five years. The story of a war—and a war in which no one asks nor gives quarter—it tells of spies, of snipers, of scouting parties, pitched battles, a massacre!

Nothing more absorbing has come from James O'Donnell Bennett's versatile and expert pen. Read it every Sunday—when you have lots of time to read—in your

Chicago Sunday Tribune

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

THE SONG IN MY HEART

LYRICS BY LILLIAN ROSEDALE
GOODMAN
WRITER OF "CHERIE I LOVE YOU"

MUSIC BY H. LEOPOLD SPITALNY

H. LEOPOLD SPITALNY

dy of mine, When they are sing - ing birds know the words of my song, And this mel - o - It's a mel - o - dy di - vine, All the
In my heart there's a song all day long,
CHORUS

To my la - dy - ed there. fair.
And it rest - ed there. fair.
love, It found my heart - o - dy
sing, A mel - o - dy bout on the air, I love you my heart wants to love ev - ry where,