

THE BEGINNING AND END OF A FATAL FLIGHT—Capt. Yoshinori Nagoya, Japanese flyer, lost his life when the plane he was testing for a trans-Pacific flight crashed into a creek near Floyd Bennett field, Brooklyn, N. Y. At the left is a picture of the plane as it took off, at the right is seen the smoldering wreckage of the ship, which crashed with such force that the motor pinned the pilot in his cockpit. (Tribune and Associated Press photos.)

THE FEMINIZATION OF INDUSTRY reaches Greenland. This young Eskimo girl is seated at a modern machine in a fish canning factory in the continental island of the arctic. (Acme photo.)

BARNEY OLDFIELD, veteran race driver, who is engaged in the construction of an all-American racing automobile with which he hopes to recapture the speed record, is seen here at the wheel of one of the world's oldest automobiles. This machine, a steamer, built by Achille Philon of France, was exhibited at the Chicago world's fair in 1893 and can still make seven miles an hour. (Wide World photo.)

THE CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN—Agnes Doss, gymnast of the Sells-Floto circus, is pictured at the left in one of the acrobatic postures of her aerial act, and Bumpy Anthony and Billy Rice, two of the clowns of that aggregation, are seen at the right. The circus opens a Chicago engagement next Saturday.

AN OIL TANKER AFIRE—Six hours after a fire caused by an explosion aboard the tanker Stuart had been extinguished a second explosion took place. This picture, taken just after the second disaster to the craft at Tremely, N. J., shows the pillar of smoke rising from the doomed vessel. (Tribune photo.)

NIKI, FLAPPER, AND GENIE—Mrs. Edith Ambler of Canton, O., is awarded $10 for this picture. Each week The Tribune pays this sum for a dog photograph printed in this section. All such pictures submitted for publication should be addressed to the Roto Editor, Chicago Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago. No pictures will be returned.