

The STYLE PARADE at LONGCHAMPS

This dark blue silk suit from Mainbocher is the Parisienne's pet ensemble for Longchamps. The blouse is white lawn embroidered with white flowers and ruffled to give the smart bosomy look. The Mainbocher hat is white silk.

Patou chooses true blue, the blue of kings, for this wool coat with a ruffled question mark collar. This collar begins at the left side of the neck and ends on the left hip. The hat is also from Jean Patou.

The stripes of this black and white georgette frock from Lucien Lelong are made of roses. The dress is worn under the red coat seen at the extreme right.

Molyneux suits the smart woman with this rose wool suit, having a knee-length jacket, collared with blue fox, a rose printed crepe de chine tunic and a straight skirt. Pleated ruffles trim the tunic. Molyneux banks the hat with white roses.

This is the smart Directoire tailleur from Schiaparelli, made of creamy beige woolen, with a jacket that is fitted and hip-length and a skirt that ends at an Empire waistline where the striped silk bodice begins. The hat is Talbot's Directoire sailor.

Lelong gives this red coat the 1932 version of the leg o' mutton sleeve. The bow collar and sleeves are trimmed with astrakan. The hat is Talbot's Marvellous, from the Directoire.
