

FOR NEWS OF THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

COMPLETE ACCURATE TIMELY

FOLLOW THE REPORTS OF THESE MEN

WHOSE WORK YOU HAVE KNOWN FOR YEARS

ARTHUR SEARS HENNING To get the full panorama of the convention and the significance of convention strategy, read the dispatches of Arthur Sears Henning, chief of the Tribune Washington bureau.

ARTHUR EVANS The hopes, plans and maneuvers of the leading delegations, the activities of committees, reverberations from the unofficial conferences—these phases of the convention will be covered by this well known veteran reporter.

CHESLY MANLY Unemployment, relief, taxation, the budget, monetary and economic problems—these are some of the special issues which will be followed and reported upon by this experienced member of the Tribune Washington staff.

WHO will be the Republican candidate for the Presidency of the United States?

How will he be nominated?

What conflicts, maneuvers, and strategies will precede his selection?

To give you the answers to these questions, the Chicago Tribune will be represented by its own staff of competent news-gatherers at the Republican National convention which opens in Cleveland on Tuesday, June 9.

Chicago Tribune readers will get the news of the convention promptly. They will get it completely and without bias.

Reporting the news accurately and with full familiarity with men, issues and convention procedure, will be such well known Tribune writers as Arthur Sears Henning, Arthur Evans, Philip Kinsley, Parke Brown, Chesly Manly and Percy Wood.

Carey Orr and Clifford Raymond will interpret each day's developments and depict convention personalities through the media of cartoons and editorials.

And to bring you the superlative action and candid camera pictures for which this newspaper is noted, the Tribune will have a squad of its own expert photographers on the job throughout the Cleveland meeting.

Cheering, speech-making and balloting make up only a small part of a great political convention. What goes on behind the scenes, the reasons underlying each important maneuver, are far more interesting and significant than the surface activities.

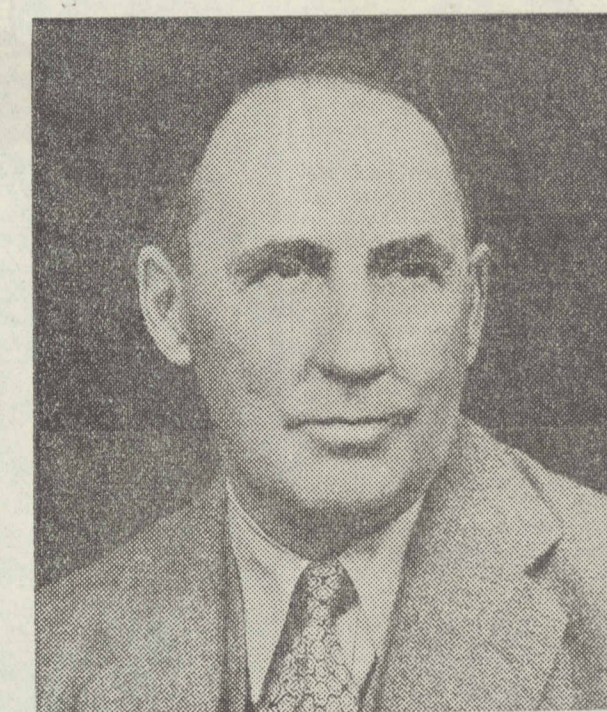

To get the convention in its entirety, to understand the motives of men and the meanings of issues, follow the Chicago Tribune's regular staff writers whose work you have known for years.

Chicago Tribune

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

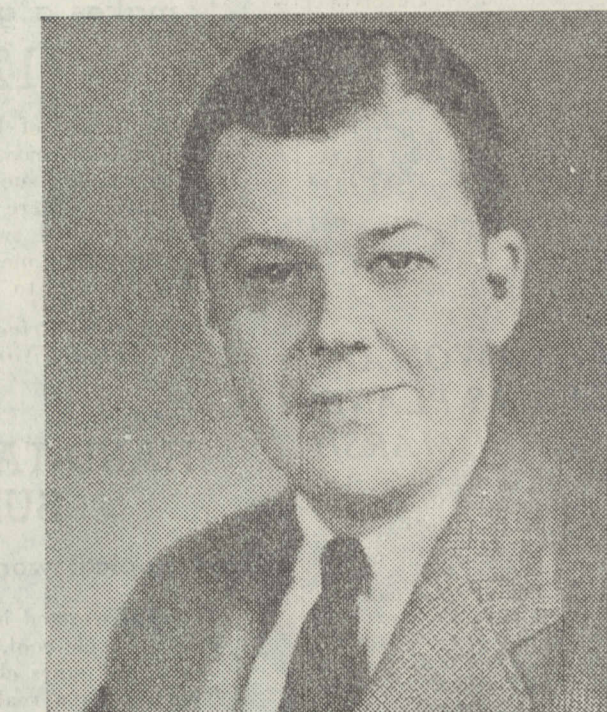

PARKE BROWN Some of the topics which will occupy the attention of this seasoned Tribune writer throughout the sessions are the fortunes of the Illinois factors, the interests of the Central States, and the activities of this state's delegates.

PHILIP KINSLEY The color, the undercurrents, and the drama of the convention—all will be woven into a vivid running story of day by day developments by Philip Kinsley.

CAREY ORR Daily masterful drawings from the pen of this celebrated Tribune cartoonist will present the moods and spirit of the audience, the conflicts of delegations, and the fundamental issues at stake.

PERCY WOOD The agricultural problem, the tariff—these and other related subjects will come under the watchful eye of this able Tribune reporter whose political writings are well known to readers.

CLIFFORD RAYMOND Major issues will be analyzed daily by this member of the Chicago Tribune editorial board, whose contributions to the editorial page of the Tribune have been quoted throughout the world.