Many women who put up quantities of their own food each year have long wished for a way to can such vegetables as asparagus more successfully. Processing asparagus in the pressure cooker for the required length of time has produced a soft stalk not up to the commercial canner's standards.

Because home methods of canning aren't ever as precise and controlled as commercial procedures, authorities have always recommended longer processing times for home canned foods, just as a margin of safety.

Now, as a result of three years of research by the bureau of human nutrition and home economics, it has been found that processing times for nonacid vegetables and for meats and poultry can safely be shortened and that lower processing temperatures can be used in some instances. Better vitamin retention and better texture and flavor of the canned product are the advantages.

Canned Asparagus, 1947 Method

Here are the new directions for canning asparagus:

Wash carefully; trim scales and break off tough ends. Cut into 1 inch pieces. Cover with boiling water and boil 2 or 3 minutes. Pack hot to within 1/2 inch of the top, using pint jars. Fill jar to within 1/2 inch of top with boiling cooking water, add 3/4 teaspoon salt, adjust lids and process at 10 pounds pressure for 25 minutes. (Former time recommended, 35 minutes.)

To can in tin, pack hot to within 1/2 inch of the top, fill to top with boiling cooking liquid, add 1/2 teaspoon salt to each No. 2 can, seal and process at 10 pounds pressure for 25 minutes.

The new directions suggest 20 minutes for processing asparagus in tin, but home economists for one of the big manufacturers of tin cans and canning equipment are reluctant to top off the extra 5 minutes. Formerly 30 minutes was the recommended time.

Home canning of corn, lima beans, beets, and asparagus should be done in pint jars, because the same research showed that for safe canning in quarts, it was necessary to increase the formerly recommended times for processing these particular vegetables. For example, instead of the 40 minutes at 10 pounds pressure formerly suggested for asparagus, the new directions call for 55 minutes, long enough really to spoil texture and flavor. Certain types of spoilage bacteria aren't killed in 40 minutes in quart sized jars, the research showed. Sterilization is much faster in the pint jars.

A word of warning: It is not wise blindly to shorten processing periods for vegetables without following specific directions, as procedures for the various vegetables may differ considerably. Send to Washington for the government bulletins or call your food editor for the new time tables. When in doubt, it is wiser to follow your last year's method, provided it insists upon pressure cooking. It is not safe to use any other method for canning any vegetable except tomatoes.

From 1 Yard

This apron is almost as pretty as a dress, with its ever-protective, figure hugging top, and wide skirt. Added attractions are the two utilitarian, fan shaped pockets and the rickrack trimming. No. 2196 comes in one size and requires 1 yard of 35 inch material and 4 yards of rickrack. This casual, button-on dress is slim and so slenderizing. It has a big, convertible collar, cap sleeves, and two patch pockets. No. 2630 is cut in sizes 12 to 20, 36 to 44. Size 36 requires 3 1/2 yards of 35 inch material.

Defends Sugar Control; Urges Canning Bonus

Washington, June 9 (AP)—An agriculture department official proposed today to give housewives an extra 15 pounds of sugar a person this year if they need it for home canning.

The proposal was made to the house banking committee by James H. Marshall, chief of the sugar branch. He said that an extra allotment would be better than lifting household rationing entirely.

There will not be enough sugar, he said, to give everybody in the country an additional 15 pounds, but if the law clearly says that the extra sugar is intended exclusively for home canning, probably no more than half the nation's housewives will take it. Regular ration stamps are good for 35 pounds a person during the year.

Marshall told the committee that a bill lifting sugar rationing for household consumers "would eliminate checks on wholesalers and retailers and might make rationing ineffective for small industrial users."

Marshall's suggestion was proposed as an amendment to a bill by Rep. Kunkel (R., Pa.) which would make available for home canning as much sugar as is needed "only upon a showing of need" for it. Marshall said the "showing of need" requirement would involve "red tape" and delay. Another bill by Rep. Gamble (R., N. Y.) would end rationing of sugar for home consumption.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, June 9—When you read this, I'll be in Chicago for Col. Robert R. McCormick's centennial celebration for THE TRIBUNE. It'll be my first nonworking visit to that fabulous city on Lake Michigan. I'll take it easy while my staff carries on in Hollywood during my three day absence. . . . What happy memories I have of Chicago! It was there that I first heard Gall-Curel sing "The Bell Song"—and met Mary Queen. Mary didn't have the finest voice in the world; but she carried herself like a queen; so everybody thought she was one. . . . I was playing in Chicago when the Benson Shakespearean players came there from England. A Tribune critic went to work on them. His brilliantly satirical clippings I kept for years. . . . While in Chicago, I never missed visiting the Art Institute, where I found one Corot painting that rested my soul. It still does. . . . It was at the world's fair in Chicago that I first met Tyrone Power. He was working in a small replica of a movie studio. His job was to show members of the audiences how to act our parts. I said, "Why aren't you doing this in Hollywood?" He replied, "I can't get in there. I was only born in Hollywood." . . . My trip thru the Armour company plant, and meeting Ex-President George Eastwood and Fred Specht, the present head, was a delightful experience. So was the last Republican convention, especially the night when Tom Dewey was nominated Presidential candidate. I attended the convention with the late, great Capt. Joe Patterson and his wife, Mary. . . . A year ago I was in Chicago with Tom Breneman for his goofy hat contest. Now I go back for the great celebration for THE TRIBUNE.

Out of Place
Texas must have another mad on at Hollywood, "The Fabulous Texan" is being shot in Arizona. But then "Green Grass of Wyoming" is being filmed in Utah. . . . Ed Gardner, like so many other actors, has gone in for painting. He can't find a place to exhibit his canvases; so he's taking space on a Santa Monica pier, where his pictures can compete with the sea gulls. . . . Bob Hope, who's off to heaven knows where next week, has promised Bob Welch, producer of "Pale Face," that he'll be back here the day the picture starts, July 15. Bob Welch is wondering. He's having difficulty even getting Bob on the telephone to see if he still expects to keep that promise. . . . Greg Peck is nursing a charlie horse collected in a game of "catch" with Director Elia Kazan. . . . Orson Welles is thinking of taking "Macbeth" to Broadway after he's finished filming the play. I asked why he didn't put it on the stage here. He replied, "I still feel like Hollywood is enemy territory." . . . Alfred Hitchcock's daughter, Pat, was graduated from Marymount school here and will continue her dramatic education in the east.

Missing the Boat
Eric Pommer, who went to Germany a year ago to look after our film interests there, returned here for a week's visit. He told me that things in Germany are pretty grim. Said he, "We've allowed the Russians to take the lead in film production. The biggest studio in Berlin is in their sector; and during the past year they've turned out 300 million feet of film. Most of it is going to Russia, along with other movie equipment. . . . This year, the Russians plan to produce 18 pictures, in which German actors and the German language will be used. They've already made six feature length films in Germany. We've just started shooting on our first. But we've done a good job of dubbing American films with the German language. Playing over there now are: "Adventure" with Clark Gable; "The Little Shop Around the Corner" with Jimmy Stewart and Margaret Sullivan; and "Random Harvest" with Greer Garson and Ronnie Colman. . . . But we should be making more pictures with German actors who were not Nazis. Some of the best of them waited without heat and little food during the winter for us to get started. When they work for the Russians, they get plenty of food and wood to burn." Seems to me we're missing a great opportunity to re-educate the German people.

THE QUESTION
If a child obtains part time work should his allowance be discontinued? [Asked at Riverdale.]

THE ANSWERS

Lois Stomp, 14, Riverdale—If a child has enough initiative to get a job I think he should be allowed to keep the money he earns and have his allowance money too. But I think his allowance should be put in the bank for him. He should be allowed to do whatever he wants with the money he earns.

Robert Hell, 15, Riverdale—An allowance is an amount of money that parents give to children because they don't earn any money for themselves. When a child gets a job and starts earning money I don't think he should expect financial aid. He should continue to do whatever tasks his family asks without expecting pay.

Grace Strand, 12, Riverdale—I think the child should still get the allowance, at least up to a certain age. Of course, it would depend upon how much he earns while working part time. If it were a lot of money I think the child would be proud that he didn't depend upon his folks for an allowance and shouldn't accept any.
