

PAT SPINS EPIC
OF 'THE BRAVEST
MAN IN THE WAR'

Silent About Own Flying,
Depicts a Comrade's
Heroic Death.

Without a rustle, as quiet as a phantom, Spad 10,000 feet up, and with just as much pep, Pat Maloney slipped into this Tribune office yesterday and planted his feet under the old desk for a visit with the old gang. They're all back now—and they're fighting it all over again.

But this Pat [his full name is J. Loy Maloney] is different. He has a pair of R. M. A. wings and three gold overseas service chevrons, and his pilot book shows 360 hours in the air, 150 of which were over the lines. He was with the famed 94th aero squadron—Eddie Rickenbacker's own. But Pat won't talk about one Lieut. J. Loy Maloney.

"I'm Back—That's Enough."
"I did a little flying over the lines," he said. "I didn't set out to win the war single handed. I didn't shoot straight and neither did the boches. I'm back—that's enough."

Pat was one of the first to go. He went to Post Sheridan—then to a ground school in Champaign, and then to Rantoul. With fifty hours of flying he went to England, through to France, where he received his scout training. Then he joined up to Eddie Rickenbacker's squadron. From that time on it was flying over the lines, day in and day out.

He was pressed for "news" of his exploits.

"Well, I didn't do a darn thing, but I can tell you a story about a hero—a real hero, the bravest man in the war," said Pat.

A Real Hero's Story.
"His name was Frank Luke Jr., he lived in Phoenix, Ariz., before the war, and he was probably the most brilliant flyer we had."

"He would fly over our balloon officers and drop a note telling them he would knock down a blimp at a certain time—and at that time down would come the bag."

On Luke's last trip up, he made the most sensational flight in history. He had dropped a note saying two German balloons would be crashed. They were, and then his plane went bad and he had to pump by hand, which means handling the stick, the gas and all the guns with one hand. He saw two balloons knock down an American scout, so he went up and knocked down the boches. On his way back he saw seven German planes, so he went up and shot them down. Luke got the ship, but he was shot down himself.

On June 19, 1918, he was shot down by a German plane. He was killed, but his plane was not. It was shot down by a German plane. He was killed, but his plane was not. It was shot down by a German plane.

But he killed eight men, then set his ship down on the ground and whipped out his automatic. He hit three boches when they came up to capture him—and they bumped him off. When he died he had eighteen victories to his credit and was keeping his helmet hanging.

That was asked for personal stories. "Haven't any—but the 94th had the record," he continued. "We had eight aces, the first American ace, the first American victory over a boche, the last victory over a boche, and a total of sixty-six victories."

Now Pat is going to secure news for the W. G. N.

Did you know he married in England? Ah, yes, to Miss Elida G. Blackburn of Winchester. She's in the states with her husband.
