

The Peach Crop on Main Street

By W. E. Hill

(Copyright: 1931: By the Chicago Tribune.)

The 1931 Cute. Kathryn, the small town Junior league girl, is going "Hey! Hey!" at a captivated male acquaintance, and going big with it. Junior league girls practically run the town social life, what with getting up fashion shows and garden fetes and such, and they have to be pretty captivating.

"She Was Only a Farmer's Daughter." Nelly has helped drive into town with a crate or two of eggs, but her white knickers are just as spotless as any on Main street.

The Oldtimers. "It gives me such a turn when I see one of these girls right out in the open on Main street in pa-jam-as! You never can tell nowadays whether a girl is just ready for bed or ready to go to a movie!"

Home Talent. The pajama girl and the conservative lady have both attended the same sale of yard goods. The conservative one is looking very snooty about it, too. However, the girl in the pajama outfit is giving back just as good as was sent.

The New Finger Wave. There's nothing like the "Dorothy Beauty Parlors," over Slorby's Cut Rate Drug store, for finger waving, as you can see if you look tensely at Robina's head of curls. She'll comb it out when she gets home and tomorrow it will simply drive the boys in town crazy!

August Chain Store Shoppers. These lovely girls are what the merchants along Main street are having to accustom themselves to these warm August days. The girls in the shorts are what is known as chain store hikers, and can mix right into bargain basements and dollar day sales without ripping or tearing anything.

Small Town Tennis. Janice has looked at too many pictures of what the girls at the Lido are wearing! Naturally, this just had to happen.

An Old Fashioned Girl. Carolyn likes the oldtime short dresses, as who wouldn't if they had elegant columnar supports like Carolyn's.

Main Street Greta Garbo. Verna is a great picture magazine fan and likes to imagine herself as the image of this or that favorite star. For the last ten days she has been Greta.