Moxley Conservation Lesson No. 8 ME J.MOXLEY

CCIENTIFIC conservation of foods is the selection of foods based on their economy, quality and energy units.

Moxley's Margarine costs on an average less than an equal amount of other spreads for bread, cream cheese, roast beef, fowl, meat stew, etc., and yet has more energy units than any of these.

To use Moxley's Margarine is true Conservation—true economy.

In addition to its superior food values, Moxley's Margarine is delicious to the taste, pure and wholesome. Rich Pasteurized cream and milk enter largely into its making. It is the favorite spread for bread.

In churning Moxley's Margarine only the highest grade materials obtainable are used so it is rich cream white. Your dealer will give you, free, a capsule of pure vegetable color, the same as used in fine creamery, which when thoroughly worked into the margarine will color it a golden yellow.
