

OUTLINE CHART OF THE WORLD

NAVAL BASES, STATIONS ETC.
OF UNITED STATES, BRITISH EMPIRE, JAPAN AND FRANCE.

WHY THE UNITED STATES REJECTED THE ANGLO-FRENCH NAVAL COMPROMISE—This naval chart of the world shows the larger ships and submarines, those with great cruising radius, while permitting unlimited building of smaller or six-inch gun types. Even the ships of England's vast merchant marine could be converted on short notice into effective fighting units. Our geographical position, America must depend upon large fighting ships of great cruising area.

superiority of England and France over this country in naval bases and stations. The so-called compromise proposed to limit only the type of ship especially effective with their chains of frequent fueling bases. Even the ships of England's vast merchant marine could be converted on short notice into effective fighting units. Our geographical position, America must depend upon large fighting ships of great cruising area.
