

MAKING A BIG ARMY CAMP

San Antonio, Tex., May 4.—The army is making a big army camp here, and it is not a camp in the ordinary sense of the word. It is a camp for the army of the future, a camp for the army of the world.

The camp is being built on the site of the old army post, and it is being built in a hurry. The army is making a big army camp here, and it is not a camp in the ordinary sense of the word.

$23,000,000 RAILROAD TO REACH MINE

THE PORT OF CORDOVA

A LOFTY peak of almost pure copper in the mountain ranges of the Copper River district in Alaska is to be transported to a smelter at Tacoma, Wash. The first shipment of 2,000 tons of broken ore was shipped recently by a railroad just completed from Cordova on the southern coast of Alaska to Kennicott, about two hundred miles inland, where the mine is located.

The mine cost its owners about one million dollars, the railroad with equipment calls for an expenditure of some twenty-three million dollars. To the prospectors who originally located the copper lode now called the Bonanza, the property was practically worthless without a railroad. They could not get the copper to market. In fact, without capital they could not mine the ore, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the hardy pioneers who discovered the deposit could meet the legal requirements of the United States government and pay for the assessment work from year to year.

The law demands that $100 worth of work shall be done on each claim every year by any one taking up mining rights in Alaska. This demand meant not only the cost of labor, for which the liberal estimate of ten dollars a day is allowed for each man employed, but it necessitated carrying supplies of food from Valdez along a hazardous and narrow horse trail for a distance roughly calculated at two hundred miles.

The discouragements, sufferings and tragedies which followed this trail trip through the wilderness, in the winter months when the fierce blizzards of Alaska swept for days at a time down the Copper River valley, piling the snow ten to twenty feet deep in gulches, are hard of at the camp fireside today and have caused many a checkmate (newcomer in Alaska) to turn back before he has crossed the summit.

reference to the property. He did not believe their story. Clark thought they were crazy. In Montana borinite and copper glance are not found on the surface, but at depth. The formation in Alaska is entirely different. The Bonanza outcrop is a freak in a way. It is like a great blow-out from subterranean forces—a dome built upon the cathedral range of such imposing appearance, with its weather-stained green sides glistening in the sun, that it can be seen for a great distance. The copper is found in other parts of Alaska at the contact, where a layer of limestone rests upon a supporting basis of greenstone.

Senator Clark afterward sent an expert copper mining engineer to look over the field, but the Bonanza had been sold meantime to the Havemeyers of New York and Norman Schultz and James H. Ralph of Pittsburgh, who made a fortune in oil and steel. Smith, Warner and their associates received about $23,000 each for their interest.

The Bonanza was now becoming the wonder of the copper world. Experts for the Guggenheims made repeated examinations and those copper magnates bought the property, paying, it was said, about one million dollars. Then the transportation problem was tackled in earnest. The last spike in the railroad from Cordova to Kennicott, was driven this spring.

Contractor Heaney, who built the White Pass & Yukon railroad, carried out the plans for the Copper River railroad under the direction of Chief Engineer Hawkins. The difficulties to be overcome were stupendous. To avoid the two huge glaciers which form ice walls for miles along the Copper river, it was necessary to cross the river twice by bridges of steel costing millions of dollars to build. In places the cliffs of rock were blown out and leveled to make a roadbed for the rails, and the track runs along the edge of deep canyons through which the river waters rush in mad torrents or fall in boiling rapids to a lower level.

MOTIVES THE NATURALIST

By HENRY F. COPE By LAWRENCE ALFRED CLAY

"TEXT" Thou didst well that it was in thine heart. I Kings, 5:18. By their motives men are both measured and made. These are the motors, the engines of our humanity. Fortune may offer many allurements and fate may seem to lay many a lash on our shoulders, but when and how we shall reach the goal and whether that goal be worth the race depends on the character and power of the ideals and desires within us. Many a life lies by the wayside, on the junk heap that on superficial examination seems to be an admirable piece of mechanism. It lies there because it is just that and no more, out of mechanism, intricate, adjusted, polished, but powerless. It values for lack of a sufficient dynamic force, a power and motion of its own.

Efficiency is a splendid thing, wholly desirable and essential, but life demands also sufficient motive as well as mechanism. Schools and daily experience give us the training in efficiency, but from within must arise the dynamic forces, the motives, passions, aspirations, and real powers of the personality. The sum of our motives makes the purposes of our lives and this determines the course we go, the work we do, the character we have, and the destiny that is ours. The deepest need of every life is a passionate purpose in living, an end and goal that calls forth all the possibilities and enlists all the powers.

Life's purpose depends on its philosophy; that is your aim and goal will depend on your interpretation of the meaning of life, on the answer which you make to life's significance. What is the meaning of it all to you? Is it but accident or chance? Then you will drift without purpose. Is it like a great blow-out from subterranean forces—a dome built upon the cathedral range of such imposing appearance, with its weather-stained green sides glistening in the sun, that it can be seen for a great distance. The copper is found in other parts of Alaska at the contact, where a layer of limestone rests upon a supporting basis of greenstone.

Senator Clark afterward sent an expert copper mining engineer to look over the field, but the Bonanza had been sold meantime to the Havemeyers of New York and Norman Schultz and James H. Ralph of Pittsburgh, who made a fortune in oil and steel. Smith, Warner and their associates received about $23,000 each for their interest.

The Bonanza was now becoming the wonder of the copper world. Experts for the Guggenheims made repeated examinations and those copper magnates bought the property, paying, it was said, about one million dollars. Then the transportation problem was tackled in earnest. The last spike in the railroad from Cordova to Kennicott, was driven this spring.

In places the cliffs of rock were blown out and leveled to make a roadbed for the rails, and the track runs along the edge of deep canyons through which the river waters rush in mad torrents or fall in boiling rapids to a lower level.

Poor Bunny was having a hard time of it, and it frightened him the more as the girl approached. He bounded this way and that and into the air, but the snare held and he cried and whimpered and feared for his life. When the girl had come closer and began to call him poor thing and exclaim that it was a burning shame, the captive huddled down and stared at her with his great big eyes. She was stroking it with her hand when a boy of twelve came running to shout: "He's mine! He's mine! I set the snare for him last night!"

"Up he came, and was about to lift the rabbit in his arms when Miss Gertrude gave him a push and demanded: "What business have you snaring the poor creature?" "Business! Business!" he repeated. "Why any one can catch rabbits any time they want to! He's a daisy, and the fellow will pay fifty cents for him. Gee, but I'm in luck!"

"What fellow, as you call him?" "He's at the tavern. We want me to catch all the rabbits and quails and birds I can." "Then he's a villain!" "He don't look like one." "I don't care how he looks! Any man that will hire a boy to trap such poor innocent things as rabbits is a villain, and you can tell him I said so!"

"I will, when I carry this to him." "But you won't carry it! You keep hands off! It shall have its liberty!" "If you let my rabbit go, I'll bluster the lad." Miss Gertrude picked up Bunny, loosened the wire around his leg and watched while he disappeared in the bushes. Then she said to the boy: "You call at the house in about two hours and I'll give you the fifty cents, but if I hear of you catching another rabbit, or if you capture a bird of any sort I'll make you trouble!" "Maybe you own the earth!" called the lad after he was thirty feet away. "You can tell that villain I do!"

She hunted for other snares, and she found three and destroyed them. After a couple of hours she started for home. Just as she left the woods she passed a young man entering a stranger, and the manner in which he raised his hat and his deferential bow told her that he lived in the city. He was staying in the village with some relative for a few days, probably, and out for a stroll, the same as she had been.

Miss Gertrude Ainsley put on her hat that sunny spring day and walked down the road and over the creek and up into the woods on the hill. There were stately elms and beeches and maples; the spice-bush gave out its scent; there were violets under foot everywhere, and the robins and bluebirds seemed to welcome an intruder. There were paths running here and there, and as the girl took one of them she heard a queer sound from the brush on her right, and investigated to find a rabbit caught by the leg in a snare.

"But of course he is!" was the reply. "Would any one but a villain hire a boy to murder a poor rabbit? If he catches a robin a bluebird or a quail I'll—I'll—!" Miss Gertrude clenched her hands and breathed hard and left it to be understood that something very terrible would happen to the cross-eyed and red-headed man. Next morning she went up to the woods again. She went in the forenoon because she suspected that boy would set snares over night and visit them early. She walked the paths and found four, and the wires were thrown far away. They had snared no victims.

As she was on her way home she met the young man of the day before. She looked at him more closely this time, and she liked his appearance. Surely he was a gentleman. The boy was not seen until mid-afternoon. Then he brought another note, and as he delivered it she said: "I was lying up there in a brush-heap this forenoon when you destroyed the snares, and oh, wasn't the awful man-awful mad when I told him of it!"

And the note read: "Miss Ainsley, I must again politely request that you cease to meddle with my affairs." The same name was signed as to the other, but the "sincerely" was lacking. Carroll Denton was no longer sincere. He was grumpy. A reply was sent as promptly as he fore. It consisted of a few stirring words: "And I must repeat that you are a villain!"

It was afternoon of the next day when Miss Gertrude went up to the woods again. Almost at once she beheld a robin with a broken wing fluttering about. She had picked it up and seated herself on a log and was spring over it when a soft voice at her elbow said: "Please give it to me. I think I can do something for it."

"It was the young man. He took the bird, made a brief examination and said: "The wing is broken but I can use splints and make it sound again after a bit. Nature is very kind to animals and birds. Hope that old maid won't bear of this. She'll say I used a club on the bird and call me more villains." "What old maid?" was asked, forgetting that she was facing a stranger. "A Miss Ainsley. She's close on my trail!"

HER FIRST GREAT EFFORT

Mr. Newlywed Did Not Complain When Cough Syrup Was Used for Pudding Sauce.

The newly-weds had just completed their bridal tour of Canada, and as the blissful honeymoon had ended without a hitch, all that remained for the happy pair was to begin life in their little suburban home.

This they did, and Edwin and Angeline were about to dine together one evening. The sweet young wife had prepared a dinner with a supreme effort to make it one to be remembered all their lives. Surely he would not forget this, mused the wife, as she timidly rearranged several knives and forks which her husband had disarranged with his sleeve.

Like a brave man and a good husband he bravely stuck to his task, declaring that he had never tasted anything like it, and he praised his wife for her expert cooking.

"Really, darling," she cooed, "is your word of honor, do you like what I've provided and cooked for you?" "Like it!" he answered. "Why, I never tasted anything like it in my life," expressing a shudder.

"Everything from soup to pudding" she persisted.

"Yes, sweetest, every mouthful," she added. "O, darling, how relieved I am!" she added. "I was afraid that you would complain. You see I quite forgot to order the strap for the pudding sauce. I had to get something, so I took your cough syrup. But I was afraid you'd taste it."

PROFIT IN "BATTLE RELICS"

Greater Part of Mementoes Said to Have Been Found on World's Great Fighting Fields Are Spurious.

A careful observer who has visited many of the world's great battlefields declares that the greater part of the mementoes of which there seems to be an inexhaustible supply, are wholly spurious; but so well are they simulated that the average visitor is content. Pieces of shell are made by casting hollow spheres and cracking them with a sledge. The fragments are then treated to a bath of diluted nitric acid and allowed to gather rust in the open air.

The appearance of verdigris is easily procured, when desired, by the use of copper in solution. The writer was shown several baskets full of pieces of shell, all of which seem to be at least 30 or 40 years old. The acid has slightly honeycombed the edges and they looked exactly as if corroded by long burial beneath the soil. Such trines

Dread of Outdoor Air.

Why is there such a dread of outdoor air in the sleeping room? Science has made great advances in hygiene. In many hospitals children suffering from disease of the respiratory system are taken up to cots on roofs and there attended by nurses in ulsters. Open air and tent life are part of the recognized treatment of tuberculosis nowadays.

A Parting Injunction.

Some years ago, when going west was more of an undertaking than at present, a young man was leaving his home in Vermont for Illinois. The family was gathered to say farewell, and not without tears. The grandfather took the young man by the hand and said: "Now, John, remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy; and look out for rattlesnakes, and be careful that nobody steals your watch."

Easily Spared.

A German in a sleeping car was unable to rest on account of the snoring of fellow travelers on each side of him. Finally, he got up and stopped still. "Please!" he called out to the next German, "you is det!"—The Housekeeper.

Very Well.

"You say she did well?" "Yes, she was engaged to a spendthrift but married a millionaire."

Norvell Farmers' Club.

The Norvell Farmers Club met at the pleasant home of Mr. & Mrs. V. E. Roberts April 29, with a good attendance. The forenoon session resulted in the re-election of the old officers for another year. C. P. Holmes, president; D. S. Fuller, vice president; Mrs. Clyde Beckwith, secretary; F. C. Beckwith, treasurer; Mrs. Wm. Bay, chairman of menu committee. Lewis Kimble and D. S. Fuller were appointed on the program committee.

After an enjoyable repast the meeting was called to order by President C. P. Holmes and Mrs. Cleon First opened the program with instrumental music followed by prayer by Wm. Lowry. Roll call was quite well responded to with current events, interest being shown along the line of pure food laws, parcels post, local option, different bills in the legislature and the principles upon which Gov. Osborn is acting were mentioned and seemed to be very generally admired.

Select reading by Miss Elma Holmes bearing upon Arbor Day was full of sentiment and called forth some discussion. The recitation by Beulah Bay was well recited and enjoyed by all. The question for discussion, "Should we favor the sale of the old fair ground, the organizing of a new agricultural society, and purchase of new ground," was generally passed upon. From the number of ideas expressed on the subject the conclusion to be drawn is that few of the farmers are interested in the question. After the expressing of ideas some discussion followed but seemingly much on one side. Other subjects that seemed to be on the minds of some were brought up. The reciprocity bill was dwelt upon and Dr. E. N. Palmer's idea seemed to be the sentiment of many that no one could tell the result until it should be tried out. He also thinks that the American people and the American farmer can get along under the low tariff or under a high tariff but that to let well enough alone. More money is invested and prices are better when things are settled and capitalists can depend somewhat upon the future prospects of things.

Cold storages were also spoken of and nearly all agreed with Mr. Halleday that they are a good thing for the farmers but much abused. Mr. Fuller and Mr. Lowry think there should be some bill passed to regulate them preventing the holding of products past the point of usefulness and the liable injury to the health of the people compelled to use them.

The executive committee reported the following program for the next meeting to be held May 27, at 1:00 o'clock at the home of Mr. & Mrs. Will Bay. Roll call, Thought bearing upon Decoration Day; music, Beulah Bay; paper, Mrs. V. E. Roberts; vocal music trio; discussion, Pruning and spraying, opened by Mr. D. S. Fuller; music, Miss Roberts and Mrs. First.

Washtenaw County.

Postmaster Charles Gauntlett of Milan has been reappointed. His salary is $1,600 a year. Senator Townsend made the appointment claiming that Gauntlett's term expired in February, while he was yet congressman. Mr. Wedemayer did not protest.

Among the jurors drawn for the May term of circuit court are: Frank Teachout, Cambridge; C. J. Robison, Clinton; John Leaning, Franklin; Ira Wilson, Raisin; W. F. Fisher, Tecumseh; Chas. D. Binns, Woodstock.

The Methodist church was well filled with people last Sunday evening who were pleased with Prof. John R. Allen's talk on Turkey. He told many things that were new to most of the people as but little is known of the manners and customs of those far eastern people. He said that Constantinople had no street lighting system, no telephones, no express wagons, no drays no mail delivery. They use a crooked stick for a plow and agricultural pursuits are conducted as in ancient times.

Cut this out and save it for reference as it will not appear again. IT IS Not What You Pay
THAT MAKES A BARGAIN
But What You Get

Suppose you buy a Monument from one of the many outside agents and it fails to give satisfaction, you pay your good money for a stone that looks all right when erected, but later on, after six months or a year, it fades and checks, who will pay for your disappointment, when you have found out too late what you have bought, will the agent make good your loss?

We Have Never Heard of One Doing So.

We stand back of every piece of work we sell and will gladly replace any work that proves unsatisfactory just as long as we are in business. We cannot afford to sell you an inferior article as we depend on our reputation for straight dealing and honest value. Your good opinion and recommendation of us is worth a lot more than the extra profit we would make by using inferior material.
