Some politicians have said that President Taft would call congress together for the purpose of settling the question of intervention in Mexico, claiming that this is his only hope for being elected. More as if the United States ought to send an army into Mexico to protect her citizens as if Europe, who has never sent an army into Mexico to protect her citizens, would not do so. How long will Europe wait to see our people with the Monroe doctrine from protecting their interests while we do nothing to bring into order our own affairs? It is not our business to see that with two or more bands pillaging north and south and making life miserable for all foreigners the Mexican government is unable to maintain order. If the United States does send an army into Mexico let that send it to end forever the trouble that has continued there so many years. Let the flag go there to stay.

Too Much Waste
It was the opinion of the late millionaire, Darius Ogden Mills, that there was too much waste in this country and that the value of money could be practised without a loss of self-respect or injury to the physical condition, and he pointed the way in practical fashion.
In This Country
as a people are so prosperous that we don't think enough of the future. We enjoy the present fat years and forget that lean ones may come.
Mr. Mills believed in helping people to help themselves. We do also and to help you to get ahead in money matters we will pay you 3 cents a year for every dollar you deposit for that time in our bank.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. It will tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If, however, the passage of urine is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

An Ohio Case

Fred W. Henson, of Henson, Ohio, says: "For 15 years I suffered from kidney trouble. I had a constant pain in my back, and I was unable to do any physical work. I tried many remedies, but I was unable to get any relief. After doctors had failed, I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me completely."

ANGRY FISH BITES ANGLER

Brooklyn Man, the Sufferer, Sends Head to Pasteur Institute, Fearing Rabies.

Whether a fish can have hydrophobia is a question that Fred Henry of Hancock street, Brooklyn, would like to have settled, and for that reason he has sent to the Pasteur Institute in New York the head of a pickerel that bit him at Swartswood lake recently, says a Newton (N. J.) correspondent of the New York Press. Henry was fishing in a boat that was a trifle leaky and he took off his shoes and socks. His first catch was a pickerel weighing three pounds. When he yanked the fish it flopped around in the bottom of the boat in a lively fashion.

As Henry was bating up again he felt a sharp pain in one of his feet, and, looking down, saw that the pickerel had made a jump and fastened its teeth in his toe. He tried to kick the fish away, but the pickerel held on and Henry had to use the handle of his landing net to pry open the fish's jaws before he got free of it. The toe started to swell where the teeth had punctured it, and Henry became worried. He says he thinks it possible that the pickerel may have had hydrophobia and, as a precautionary measure, he sent the head to the Pasteur Institute.

West No. Place for Consumption.

Physicians in all of the eastern states will be asked by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis to stop sending consumptives in the last stages of tuberculosis and without sufficient funds to the southwestern part of the United States in search of health. While it is impossible to tell accurately how many consumptives there are at present living in the states of Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, southern California, and Western Texas, it is probable that no less than ten percent of the 6,000,000 people in this territory have tuberculosis themselves, or have come to the west because some member of their family had had it. Every year, the health authorities estimate, not less than 10,000 consumptives, hopelessly diseased, come west to die. For these cases, the climate of this section of the country can do nothing, and they are compelled to die in strange surroundings and thousands of miles from home and friends. The National Association points out further that advanced cases are too poor to provide the proper necessities of life, and they are either starved to death or compelled to accept the meager charity which this part of the country affords.

A FOOD CONVERT

Good Food The True Road to Health.

The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve stomach trouble keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.

Indigestion—dyspepsia—is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.

When this state is reached, to resort to tonics is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash diminishes his power to move the load.

Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain, in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.

"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:

"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an advertisement I tried Grape-Nuts food, and, after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved."

"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every day."

"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls as the cereal part of a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Cereals, Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkg. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE GREATEST GANG OF COUNTERFEITERS.

THE days immediately following the Civil war were the halcyon days of the counterfeit. The country was fairly flooded with bogus bank and treasury notes. No man, when he received a bill, could tell whether it presented it at the bank when it would be accepted or not. When the famous Forbes gang began to put their output on the market the bank teller might not have known another of the same serial number; for that was the only means by which a Forbes counterfeit could be detected.

It is not likely that another gang similar to the Forbes crowd ever will arise in the United States. The counterfeiters of today are photographers, who bear the same relation to the high-class maker of steel plates that the coin molder does to the old-time crook who cut his own steel dies. The silk threads, the secret process paper and the excellence and activity of the United States secret service have also served to render the finer forms of counterfeiting a lost art. Therefore it is interesting to review the rise and fall of the greatest of them all, the Forbes gang.

I know Ned Ormsby, one of the members of the gang, well; a quiet, dignified little man, gray about the temples, and when he told me the following story the pallor of the federal penitentiary was still upon him.

NED ORMSBY'S YARN.

"The Forbes gang of counterfeiters," said Ned Ormsby, "was without doubt the greatest gang in their specialty ever got together. The gang, as it was at first made up, consisted of Ed Forbes, 'Little Jack' Vaughn, Sam Stetson, Curley Peters and myself. We were all in the same Georgia regiment, and enlisted in Atlanta, expecting to go through until the end of the war, which was considered in the south would not be very far off.

"We kept banging away with guns for a couple of years and got pretty sick of it. The scraps we got into were not such jokes as we had imagined they would be. The Yankees, who we had thought would be soft marks for the southern gentlemen, turned out to be dandy fighters. Besides, there was no money in war, as it was being carried on. Forbes told us one day that he was going to quit. This hit us all just right and we quit with him.

"I did not know that Forbes had any purpose in giving up war as a profession until we got well clear of the lines. We were not deserters, because we had all served for a longer time than our enlistment called for. We went on the bum for a few weeks, and then Forbes gave out the scheme that he had been studying over for a long time. This was nothing less than to flood the south with bogus counterfeit Confederate notes. He believed that the south would be successful, and that we would not have any difficulty in rolling in millions of dollars. The game looked like a cinch, and we did get up a stock of bills representing enough money to buy a small outfit. The Confederates won their final battle, but the fool turned out to be tainted with foolishness, and we were badly left in the end.

"Our glorious scheme was knocked to smithereens when Lee surrendered. The air which went north with a pretty large-sized stock of property, which we disposed of at good prices. We came out pretty large winners, but it made us sick when we thought of what it might have been."

"We reached New York in the course of our travels, and everything seemed to be becoming everybody had money to burn, and we jumped in to get some of it. Forbes put up a job to get possession of several government printing plants. The job would have been successful if 'Little Jack' Vaughn, who was as clever an artist in his line as ever broke stone for the state, hadn't got drunk in the Washington and given enough of the snap away to throw us down." Forbes was the maddest man you ever saw when he heard of Vaughn's fool trick, and he hunted for 'Little Jack' for a month for the purpose of killing him. Vaughn kept out of the way until Forbes got cooled off, and then he joined the rest of the gang.

"But you could not keep Forbes down with a few little setbacks, and it did not take him long to get on the move again. He hired a house in Flatbush, L. I. It was in the outskirts of the village, and we all went there to live. There had to be some excuse for a lot of men living in a house with a couple of negro servants, so we had a sign painted and hung over the front gate, inscribed, 'Bureka Club.' In order to stop suspicion we invited several of the influential citizens to dine with us, and we treated them like lords. They would swear by us through thick and thin. We were all the time quietly perfecting our counterfeiting plant. Curley Peters, who was a photographer, and Sam Stetson, an engraver, were kept busily at work getting out the plates.

"They had some new trick that they were experimenting on for a long while, and, after a lot of failures, they found what they were after. Plates were made for the bills of a dozen or more banks, and Forbes, who was a good judge, said that they were the finest plates ever used to stamp bogus money. Peters was very reticent about the way the plates were made, and, as it was none of our business, we didn't care. Taken at the very worst, Peters was only a half-hearted crook. He came of a very good family in Georgia. "When the plates were about done I went with Forbes and got three presses, which he had sent to a vacant store in Harlem, and removed them ourselves to the ranch in Flatbush, so no questions would be asked. The only delay we met with was in getting paper similar to that used by the government. I tried to make connection with several big firms in Massachusetts, but they were all dead leary about going into the scheme, although we offered them big money.

"Forbes and I finally took a trip to England and found a paper manufacturer who was willing to make after we had given him a good price for his work that was highly robbery. But we had to get the goods at any price and gladly paid him his figures. We got the paper through the custom house under a false invoice, with the aid of an inspector who was not above taking money for favors, and after keeping it in a storage warehouse for several weeks we sent it to Flatbush. The paper was as good as the genuine paper, and it did not take us long to start the presses. Stetson was a practical printer, and fixed the colored inks for the different plates. Then we all took a turn at the presses, and a fellow could not help having a thrill of delight at the plates of beautiful bills were started up in the cellar.

"We kept the presses moving until we had about $2,000,000 in money. After all the bills had been rejected that showed any defects, the good ones were aged by a colored fluid. We were now ready for the real business to begin. A careful comparison of the counterfeit with a magnifying glass did not show the slightest difference from the genuine. So confident was Forbes of the money that we sent one of the bills to a bank to have its genuineness tested. It came back all right.

"Instead of trying to push the queer in small lots, as is commonly done by shoemakers, we divided the money into five parts, and the members of the gang took equal share and went respectively to New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and St. Louis. Then we put out the money in government and railroad bonds of the gilt-edged sort, and got rid of all the money. We made the biggest life on record, and sold the bonds in London inside of a month."

DETECTIVE ARNOLD TELLS IT.

"It is a very difficult thing," said Operator Arnold, formerly of the United States secret service, "to get rid of a large amount of counterfeit money in this country without detection, because of the safeguards which are thrown around the genuine notes. The plan of protecting money has received the greatest attention from the treasury officials, and marks and characters have been put upon the bills which it is intended shall escape the counterfeiters' notice. It would not be policy to tell what any of these marks are, but it will not be giving anything away to say that defects are put into bills sometimes in order to testify to their genuineness. This is done on the supposition that if a counterfeit goes to work on a bill and discovers what may seem to be a slight defect he will correct it, and by doing so will furnish evidence of his crooked work."

"I was put to work upon a gang of counterfeiters, however, which beat the government at its own game. The treasury department received notice of a counterfeit from Boston of a $100 bill on the First National bank of that city. The bill in question aroused suspicion because the serial number was duplicated. There was nothing else about the bill that would excite suspicion. In the vignette of Lincoln on the bank note an intentional defect had been made in one of the lines in the forehead and it was reproduced in the counterfeit, and a warning was sent out calling attention to it.

"Within two weeks we had plenty of work on our hands, for the banks, in scrutinizing bills, after receiving notice, discovered several other counterfeiters of different banks. Reports came to Washington from New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis and other places of the finding of counterfeiters. It became very evident that the country had been flooded with the bogus money by a very shrewd gang of counterfeiters. A comparison of all the bogus bills indicated that they had all been made by the same hand, for they were just as good as the genuine bills, with the exception of the duplicate serial number and letter.

"The fact that the bogus money had appeared in different parts of the country at about the same time showed that there had been concerted action in getting rid of them in large batches by the gang, but this alone did not give any clue to the operators or their headquarters. So far as we knew they might have been located in any one of five large cities. Secret service officers were put to work in these cities with the intention of working back from the time the money was put out.

"In every city where the thieves did business they bought bonds and securities which could be disposed of anywhere, from bankers and brokers who were experts in detecting bogus money. In each city we got a good description of the man who bought the bonds, and it showed that it was a different man in each place. The descriptions were good so far as they went. Naturally the government printing bureau came under suspicion because of the quality of the work, and every man at work in that department was examined with a searchlight.

Well, we wasted a lot of time proving the innocence of government employees, but the work turned out to be of some value, after all.

"While I was working in Washington I came across Richard Osgood, an ex-secret service operator, and he told me a yarn which came from his military servant girl. The girl, who was good looking and a bit of a flirt, had formed the acquaintance of a white man whom she knew only by the name of 'Little Jack.' He had become confidential with her and had dropped a hint that he would soon own part of the government printing office. The girl the next day reported to Osgood what she had heard.

"Osgood, not being very friendly with the secret service people on account of his dismissal, thought over the matter for a day before reporting the story. When the secret service operators went to look for 'Little Jack' he had 'flown the coop.' "This information might mean much or little. Investigation showed that this fellow, under another name, had been in the company of some of the government engravers. While they did not know him, and that he had made no dishonest proposals to them. But who was 'Little Jack'? This query kept going through my mind day and night for several days, and then the name of 'Little Jack' Vaughn, the New Orleans card sharp, flashed upon my memory. He had been mixed up with several swindles in the south, and I sent to the chief of police in New Orleans to see if he could get me his picture. 'It might be only a waste of time,' I thought, but I could not tell. It never does to miss any chances in my business. In about a week I got a picture from New Orleans of 'Little Jack' and the mulatto girl said it was the same fellow she had seen.

"The next step was more important. The description of the man who had passed the bogus money in Philadelphia referred to him as being under the average size. I took the picture to the broker who I saw him, and he said 'Little Jack' was the man, without doubt. Then we learned from the south the names of some of the gang that 'Little Jack' trained with, and that he had been in the counterfeiting business during the war. But where were 'Little Jack' and his partners? A large reward was offered for the capture of the gang, and a description of some of the bonds which had been bought was sent to all the financial centers of this country and Europe, with a description of 'Little Jack.' We got word from London that a man answering his description had disposed of a lot of bonds in that city, and we communicated with Scotland Yard.

"We worked steadily on the case for a week, and found out a lot of information about the gang. We were reasonably certain that Ed Forbes was at the head of it, but did not have the positive proof of the man. While racking our brains to clear up the business, a cablegram was received from Scotland Yard to the effect that a man who answered the description of 'Little Jack' had taken passage on the Cunard steamer Scotia, and was apparently alone. The Cunard pier was then in Jersey City, and I was there when the steamer arrived with several other operators. I recognized 'Little Jack' in spite of his full beard and English make-up. I did not recognize any of the other passengers as crooks, but those who looked the least bit crooked were followed by an operator to their hotel, and left under surveillance until their identity was cleared up.

"I shadowed 'Little Jack.' He had charge of some barrels of wine consigned to J. M. Kearns, Flatbush, L. I. The gauger, in examining the wine, found that there was some foreign body in one of the barrels, and I had the barrel opened, with the consent of the collector. I found an hermetically sealed box fastened to the bottom of the barrel. On opening it I discovered a dozen perfect counterfeit plates of bank notes. The plates were returned to the Flatbush. I went with it, and found that Mr. Kearns lived at the 'Bureka Club.' When I delivered the wine, I saw 'Little Jack' and Ed Forbes in the house, and concluded that the gang had returned to this country to begin operations again with a new set of plates.

"I raided the place in the evening and captured Ned Ormsby, Ed Forbes, 'Little Jack' Vaughn, Sam Stetson and Curley Peters. All of them received long terms in the federal penitentiary.

WHY HOSTILITY TO GARDENS

There Seems to Be an Antipathy Among Americans to Anything That Shields the Porch.

There prevails among many of us an actual hostility toward gardens, upon which I have mused not a little. One would suppose that a people so devoted to the cult of fresh air, so given to piazzas and "sleeping porches," would be quick to afford themselves so simple a luxury.

I cannot believe the objection oftenest made to me, that mosquitoes prevent the enjoyment of a garden. True as it is in part, it is true only for certain seasons and for certain hours of the day. Mosquitoes never yet kept any one who really wanted a garden from having one.

Neither do I put much faith in the altruism of those who protest against walls because they prevent outsiders from enjoying one's own grounds. It would be entirely possible to make a defense of walls on the highest psychological basis. Nay, what could be more delightful than to have an outraged community by the hand and point out that a glimpse of green through an open gate, a vine hanging over a coping, a tree peering above a hedge, suggests more to the inquiring mind than the most unobstructed view? But I suspect that the real milk in that cocoon is a fear lest from the spectacle of the street and of neighboring rockers—H. G. Dwight in the Atlantic Monthly.

Motor Cars and Mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes, flies and gnats of every description are said to be more numerous in Paris this year than ever before. It has become a veritable invasion. The explanation usually given is that the swallows are much fewer this summer, and also that the ubiquitous sparrow is notably on the decrease. Nobody can find a reason for the desertion of the swallows, but the reason of the scarcity of sparrows is not far to seek. The enemy is mechanical traction, which is supplanting the use of the horse. Before long, horses will practically have disappeared in Paris, and when their wagons go there will disappear one of the principal staples of food for the Paris "pierrot" who is taking wing for the country in search of the grains of cats and barley once so plentiful on the boulevards and avenues.

He also had a terrible breaking out on his face which was gradually growing worse. The eruption was like pimples which developed into sores when he scratched, which he did almost constantly. Baby would almost scratch himself raw.

"I had used several different kinds of salve, none of them helping in the least bit, when I saw the Cuticura advertisement in the paper and it made me think of the good results my sister had when she used it for her children. I had only used Cuticura Soap and Ointment about two weeks before I noticed that the sores were almost entirely gone, and it must have been a month of six weeks he was troubled before I began the treatment. He worked get easy when I would put the Cuticura Ointment on him. Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured him and he has a clear complexion now." (Signed) Mrs. W. H. Hughes, Dec. 31, 1911.

Robert Browning's Will.

Diligent search is being made at Florence, Italy, for the will of Robert Browning, son of the famous poet, but so far it has not been found. The fact that there apparently is no will is causing considerable gossip, as the property, of which there is a good deal, both in Asolo and Florence, will pass to his wife, who was Miss Coddington of New York, and from whom he lived apart for years, owing to incompatibility of temper.

Browning's property in Florence included Casa Guidi, where he spent his childhood days. When his mother died the property passed out of the family, and was acquired by him a few years ago.

The Love in Fiction and Life.

A periodical devoted to the drama pleads for plays based on some emotion other than love. The difficulty in producing such plays is that every play must have a hero, and in making a hero the playwright, as well as his audience, almost inevitably adopts the view expressed 2,000 years ago by a scribbler of the dead walls of Pompeii: "He who has never loved a woman is not a gentleman."

Don't Poison Baby.

Forty Years Ago almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and a few drops too many will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mott, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. Agnes V. Sweetland, of Omaha, Neb., says: "Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boardman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."
