They never seem satisfied, however, with its flickering, o in a very little while always buzz back to the strong glow of the arc. They just naturally stick around it, not because they do a lot of thinking, but because its bright ness attracta; them.

Here's a thought that, occurred to me when passing that corner the other of night:

The dealer who will make his stores so attractive, that people naturally turn to it as THE place of town, where things are always reliable and where things are always rated from the lamp poet's flicker.

And do you know the best way one earth to make your store most attractive? Good advertising is the answer with emphasis on the "good." To be good, advertising must be truthful, so if you advertise; must be fruthful, so if you advertise to impress people twith the fact that they are welcome in your store man the lamb post's flicker.

It is possible and they does make a con this week on a trot line a store is at one of the transfer junctions in a city. "People do a good deal more shopping on bright days than they do on gray ones. I have beaten the weather twice, though. "The first time was when I was a lectric lighting concern. Everything was lit was materially the most of the minute of the windows of an electr come at all times, and your stock must really be as fine as you say it is.

If your store can't stand for good advertising now, fix things up and then go at the advertising strong. Use newspaper apace systematically, with new copy for each ad. Always have a good window display and change them as frequently as possible.

Then when people get into your store, where they are made to feel welcome and at home, don't you think and children, and see that it has a modern as the signature of linguistic that is held up at my corner waiting for the next car to come along. So at quite an expense I erected a very large and capacious canopy in front of my store, and every time it rains you will see many persons hop off the cars with transfers in their hands and make for my awning.

So I said to myself, there is no reason why I shouldn't be able to snare the great traveling public that is held up at my corner waiting for the next.
