TWO BIG FIRES IN DETROIT SUNDAY

ONE THOUSAND ANIMALS LOSE LIVES WHEN STOCK SHEDS BURN.

MANY BUILDINGS IN DANGER Paper Company's Building Is Destroyed By Fire Caused By Bolt of Lightning in Fierce Storm.

Detroit—Trapped in their pens, more than a thousand dumb animals went to their death Sunday evening in a force fire that totally destroyed the stock sheds of the Sullivan Packing company, Michigan and Beecher avenues.

The blaze spread to a row of houses on Beecher street, burning back fences and sheds, and threatened to ignite the main plant of the Sullivan company; the Edison Illuminating company's branch, and the Calvary Presbyterian church.

Three alarms were sent in before enough fire apparatus reached the scene to stem the flames, which, fanned by a brisk breeze, swept through the board sheds and carried blazing shingles and splinters into the surrounding neighborhood.

Paper Company Burned Out. Several tremendous bolts of lightning, in a storm that swept over Detroit about 2 o'clock Monday morning, started a fire that completely destroyed the Chop-Stevens Paper company's building at 12-18 East Woodbridge street, burned out police and fire signal boxes, and seriously interfered with the D. U. R., Edison and telephone company's wires.

BLAME PLACED ON STORSTAD Commission of Inquiry Reports On Empress of Ireland Disaster.

Quebec—The commission of inquiry that investigated the sinking of the Empress of Ireland in the St. Lawrence May 29 with a loss of more than 1,000 lives, announced its decision Saturday, holding that the collier Storstad, which rammed the Empress, was responsible for the disaster.

The principal point which the court was called upon to decide was whether the responsibility for the tragedy was divided or whether it rested solely on the officers of one of the ships. Lord Mersey said that the members of the court had taken pains to get all the enlightenment possible on this phase, and that, after deliberation over the evidence, they had come to the conclusion that the Storstad was in fault because she had changed her course after fog had settled down upon the river. Up to the time the fog appeared no fault could be found with the seamanship of either set of officers.

Another Holdup at Escanaba. Escanaba, Mich.—Two bandits Saturday held up two Danforth farmers as they were going home. The robbery was committed within 80 rods of the North Escanaba Soo line station, which has been held up five times in six months, the last time being two weeks ago when the agent was shot.

Highwaymen got nothing from the farmers and disappeared in the swamps.

Supreme Justice Lurton Is Dead. Atlanta City, N. J., Associate Justice Horace Hermon Lurton, of the United States supreme court, died suddenly at a hotel here Sunday from heart failure, superinduced by cardiac asthma. He was 70 years old.

Five of the seven Saginaw Chinese arrested on the charge of smuggling aliens into this country have been released from the Bay City prison on bail.

Governor Ferris has been asked by the sheriff of Oscoda county to issue requisition papers for the return of William Scully, now under arrest in Louisiana. It is alleged that Scully disappeared in 1912 while he was county treasurer, taking with him $800 belonging to the township.

Saginaw—Nineteen years ago Ira Whitney, a retired farmer of Saginaw worked at Merrill as a drain digger. He was given an order for $52.25 for his labor by the drain commissioner. There was no money in the drain fund, and he could not collect his wages. He put the order away and Friday he cashed it.

SOME CHERRIES FROM GRAND TRAVERSE REGION

Traverse City, Mich.—The largest shipment of cherries in history of this region was made Saturday night, when 12 carloads were shipped from this point, six to Detroit, five to Chicago and one to Grand Rapids. This will be about the daily average during the remainder of the season. Shipments from here last week amount to 3,000 cases, which netted growers $25,000.

FERRIS CONSENTS TO MAKE THE RACE

GOVERNOR YIELDS TO WISHES OF SUPPORTERS AND WILL BE CANDIDATE. STATEMENT GIVEN MONDAY

Lansing, Mich.—Governor Ferris has at last capitulated to the urgent demands of the democrat leaders of Michigan and his friends throughout the state, as an announcement was made from the executive office Monday afternoon that he would accept the nomination on the democratic ticket again this fall.

On numerous occasions the governor has declared that he did not want to make the race again this fall, and Mrs. Ferris, who is in a critical condition at Big Rapids, urged the governor to remain out of the fight in order that he might spend as much time as possible with her. Last Friday Governor Ferris said that he would urge the democrat state central committee at the meeting held here Tuesday to select another candidate, but Monday afternoon his private secretary brought a signed statement from Big Rapids in which formal announcement of Ferris' candidacy is made.

The statement follows: "After a careful examination of the petitions for my nomination in the primaries, after receipt of numerous telegrams and letters from all parts of the state, and after due consideration of my home duties and duties to the state, I have decided to become a candidate for nomination as governor of Michigan. If I am nominated, I shall not be able to give a large amount of time to a campaign, because the demands of the executive office will receive my first and chief consideration."

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFS

Herold Beeler, 20, was drowned, and John Blackwell rescued when a launch was overturned by swells from a freighter at Port Huron.

Edgar Slater, of Ypsilanti, reported to the police that when he returned home two men who had been hiding in his wardrobe pounced on him and took $38 from his pockets.

Mrs. Martin Waskewitz, 45 years old, was killed Sunday, when lightning struck her farm barn, 12 miles north of Midland. Her daughter, Hilda, who stood beside her, was not hurt.

Because of so many disastrous fires in Port Huron during the last few months, the city commission has ordered larger water mains laid and connected with every manufacturing plant in the city.

Mrs. Charles O. Burnham, of Ann Arbor, has filed suit against the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Railway Co. for $25,000 damages, because of the death of her husband in the recent wreck near Jackson.

Bruce and Nell Mead, brothers, drowned in Pine river near St. Clair Friday night, one in an unsuccessful effort to save the other. A third boy, Roy Cleland, saved himself after he had tried in vain to rescue the brothers.

Only 92 districts will be barred from sharing in the primary school funds this year because they have a surplus balance of primary money. When the first apportionment was made in 1912 492 districts were barred.

Odd Fellows of Kalamazoo, Van Buren and Allegan counties will unite in one association if plans under way are carried out. It is believed an improvement in lodge conditions can be brought about by a more thorough organization.

NEW HAVEN IS CONDEMNED

Washington—That the monopoly theory of the New Haven road was unsound and mischievous; that its directors were "criminally negligent"; and that a substantial part of the stockholders' money wasted can be recovered, was the gist of the interstate commerce commission's report Monday to the senate on the New Haven case.

The report is regarded as the most condemnatory document ever issued by the interstate commerce commission.

The commission declares the New Haven directors consciously violated the federal anti-monopoly laws.

No attempt has been made to fix the responsibility for the New Haven transactions as between President Mellen and J. P. Morgan, but the report condemned the "control" generally.

DEAN SHAW COUNTS THE BEES

Population of Honey Makers in Michigan Is 1,000 Times That of People.

East Lansing, Mich.—There are approximately 1,000 times as many bees as there are people in Michigan, according to a "count" of the honey bee population of the state, which has been conducted at the M. A. C. in convention with the recent survey of Michigan agricultural conditions by Dean R. S. Shaw.

The third drowning Benton Harbor in four days occurred Wednesday night when Geo. Bell, 15, went to his death while swimming in St. Joseph river.

Cadillac's city water has been declared unsafe by the state board of health, and all users have been notified to boil their water. Recently thousands of fish died in the lakes from which the city water is procured.

The claim of Mrs. Mary Fox of Arcadia, against the defunct Fox & Mason Furniture Co., of Corunna, was disallowed in bankruptcy court at Bay City, Friday afternoon. She asked $20,000, claiming it was due her on notes issued by the company.

COMMISSIONER'S REPORT BRINGS INVESTIGATION

Washington—Commissioner Davies of the bureau of corporations in his report President Wilson says that the timber lands of the United States are in the hands of a few men. Among other things the report says, "In the upper peninsula of Michigan 45 per cent of the land is held, mostly in fee, by 32 lumber owners." This and other features of the report have led Secs. Redfield and Houston to plan a joint study by their departments of the supply and exploitation of the country's timber.

ACCIDENT BOARD REPORT

First Six Months of Year Show Nearly Eight Thousand Cases Completed and Payments Made.

Lansing, Mich.—According to figures prepared by the industrial accident board, 5,787 cases have been closed and payments for compensation completed from January 1 to June 30. Of this number 3,936 workmen were incapacitated for a period of less than eight weeks; 1,365 were disabled for eight weeks or longer; 440 received injuries which necessitated the amputation or loss of some member, such as finger, toe, eye, etc. Of the completed cases on which payments have been reported, 46 were fatal.

These cases involve the payment of $427,233.73. The cost of medical attention has been reported in only 2,688 of these cases. This number shows a cost of $75,974.86. These figures do not include deferred payments in total disability cases, nor fatal cases other than the 46 reported. Payments of compensation in the latter classes will extend over a period of from six to 10 years, and as fatal cases to the number of 179 have been reported to the board there is a deferred liability of no inconsiderable amount.

WORKING FOR NEW ROAD

Battle Creek, Mich.—Lansing and Battle Creek are working together on a plan for a good road to connect the two cities and to cut off 15 miles of the present route. A good road has been begun from Battle Creek to Bellevue, which will cut part of the distance. The Chambers of Commerce of the two cities will ask the state legislature for appropriation for the road as a state truck line. If the state won't give enough to cover the total costs, Calhoun, Ingham and Eaton counties will chip in for the balance.

MICHIGAN NEWS IN BRIEF

FIRST REPORT OF NEW DEPARTMENT

BURR LINCOLN TELLS OF WORK DONE IN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Lansing, Mich.—Deputy State Dairy and Food Commissioner Burr Lincoln, head of the department of weights and measures, Saturday filed the first annual report of the department with Gov. Ferris. That Michigan will see a complete overturning of its weights and measures system during the coming year, in addition to what has already been done, is gathered from the report.

One of the great evils and unscrupulous dealer practices in Michigan is to sell commodities by the box, basket, crate, bag, etc., instead of by measure or by weights, according to Lincoln's report to the governor. For illustration, he takes berries. These, he says, are sold and advertised by the box instead of by the quart. These boxes, generally holding a liquid quart, instead of a dry quart, makes a difference of four and one-half quarts to the bushel.

The state department has tested out the equipments of 10 cities and seven counties since the new law went into effect in this state, comparing them with the state standards.

The present law makes the appointment of county sealers optional with the boards of supervisors of the several counties. Only eight counties have taken advantage of the law. St. Clair county appointing a county sealer, combining the appointment with the city of Port Huron, making in all nine county sealers. The counties are: Bay, Chippewa, Grand Traverse, Menominee, Washtenaw, Ontonagon, Alger, Isocoe, St. Clair and Alpena.

The report shows conclusively that the work of the department has been of much credit, as hundreds of scales, weights, milk jars, baskets, measures, etc., have been condemned.

The department is now preparing to test all sugar beet scales in the state, and the methods employed in weighing and taring the beets. Many complaints have reached the department from producers of sugar beets, and a rigid inspection will be made this fall.

The state's equipment of standard weights and measures is the finest in the United States.

PRISON SHOWS GOOD PROFIT

Instead of Being Expensive to State Institution Earns $50,000.

Jackson, Mich.—The prison board of control and Warden Simpson in reviewing the business of the last year, as shown by the receipts and disbursements and inventory of the amount of property on hand, figure that the institution has made a profit of $50,000 during the 22 months ending June 30.

In arriving at this conclusion they figure the prison farms at their estimated cash value, including the improvement made to the farm land and buildings. It is maintained that for the first time in the history of the institution it has been self-supporting. At times it has been necessary to borrow money to liquidate obligations incurred during the year, but not a dollar of the state's appropriation for current expense in the state treasury has been asked for.

PLANS FOR BETTER BARN

East Lansing, Mich.—In the belief that much of the tuberculosis prevalent among Michigan cattle may be due to insanitary housing conditions, the department of farm mechanics at the Michigan Agricultural college has inaugurated a campaign for better barns, which, in its field, is similar to the movement which, a few years ago, swept the country in the effort to check the white plague. Under the direction of Prof. H. H. Musselman, of the college, plans for a number of model barns have been drawn and these will be furnished to farmers free as part of the "better barns" campaign.

MICHIGAN NEWS ITEMS

Fire, supposed to have been started by traps, destroyed three barns on the farm of Warren Hinkley, dairyman, about two miles east of Flushing Friday. Three calves were burned to death. Loss about $4,500.

If there were no such thing as a display in the world we might get on better than we do, and might be definitely more agreeable company than we are.

TESTED RECIPES.

Before the grapefruit are out of the market, or at any season when they may be bought, the amber marmalade is a most delicious one to prepare.

Take one each of grapefruit, orange and lemon. Wash and scrub the fruit well; cut in shreds, removing the seeds and stringy portion of the pulp. Put to soak overnight in three quarts of water. The next day cook the peel well covered until perfectly tender, then stand away another night. In the morning add ten half pint cupsful of sugar and cook until it jells when tried in a cold dish. Put into jelly glasses and cover for use at any time. The color is beautiful, and the flavor is not too bitter, the objection so many make to orange marmalade.

Creamed Potatoes With Green Peppers.—Peel enough potatoes to make a quart after they have been cut into dice. Remove the seeds from two green peppers and cut them in rings. Put the pepper and "dice" potatoes into a stew pan and cover with boiling water. Pour off the water after 15 minutes and sprinkle the vegetables with flour, salt and pepper. Turn into a greased baking dish and cover with rich milk or cream; dot with butter and cook until nicely brown.

Maple Biscuit.—Make a rich biscuit dough, roll out a half inch thick, spread with grated maple sugar and chopped nuts, roll up and cut as you would a jelly roll, and bake in a hot oven. These may be served with cream as a dessert or with tea they make a most appetizing little cake.

Mock Eggs on Toast.—Arrange a slice of gold cake on a plate, place the half of a peach on each slice and surround the peach (leaving the yellow edge of the cake uncovered) with sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

Sandwich Filling.—This is rather an uncommon filling—Chop all the ingredients quite fine. One small onion, nine olives, a sour pickle, a green pepper; add a cup of grated cheese and mix with enough of the mustard dressing taken from the chow-chow pickle jar to spread.

Let no man out of a weak conceit of sobriety, or ill-applied moderation, think or maintain, that a man can search too far or be too well studied in the book of God's word, or in the book of God's works; divinity or philosophy; but rather let men endeavor an endless progress of proficiencies in both.—Bacon.

HELPFUL HINTS.

To be ready with gifts for special occasions like birthdays and Christmas time have a book with a page for each person to be remembered. Keep a list of things to buy or make and cross them off when they are ready. This will make the present mean more to both, and will do away with needless hurry.

A toy watering pot is very convenient for spraying plants. Keep a small board with a square of Bristol brick on it with a cork. When the steel knives are washed rub with the brick and cork and they will always look well.

A dish mop is a great saving on the hands, as water can be used much hotter and the process is finished much quicker.

Equal parts of boiled oil, vinegar and turpentine make a good furniture polish.

Since blankets and comfortables are much more expensive than sheeting it pays to buy enough sheeting to fold back at least a quarter of yard over the bedding to keep it from being soiled. The wide hem is always at the top, so one need never fear that the fold of the sheet will be carelessly placed at the head.

For the woman who loves to do fancy work let her have at hand a basket with the work easy to get at when an informal call is made. To pick up and do a few stitches while visiting. It is surprising what an amount of work may be done in odd moments. It is said that Hugo wrote many books, writing 15 minutes at a time before breakfast.

A piece of zinc placed where the feet will fall on it is said to be a sure cure for the sleep-walker. It wakes him every time, as his feet touch the cold zinc.

Practical dresses for the housemother who likes to look well are made of white cotton crepe, well shrunken before making up. These need only to be washed and dried and they are fresh and ready for wearing again.

Disappointments are wings that bear the soul skyward. Success comes in cans; failure in carts. Affection is the only remedy for diseased souls and evil characters.

DISHES FOR SULTRY DAYS.

During the heated term let fresh fruits and vegetables have a large place in the menu and nuts take the place of heavy meats, as they will be found both satisfying and economical.

Egg Cocktails.—These are a most delicious appetiser. For each person take one teaspoonful of lemon juice, two drops of tabasco sauce, half a teaspoonful of horseradish, one teaspoonful of tomato catsup and a salt-spoonful of salt. Mix together and add the egg beaten to a foam. Serve in tall glasses with a long spoon.

Beet Mayonnaise.—Bake medium-sized beets in their skins, when tender plunge into cold water, rub off the skins and rub the beets through a sieve or vegetable ricer. To a cupful of the pulp add two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a half-cupful of oil or melted butter. Season with salt and pepper, beat until smooth. Serve with cold meat.

Chicken With Potato.—Lightly whip one cupful of cold mashed potato, add the beaten white of an egg, a table-spoonful of lemon juice and a half-cupful of oil of boiled dressing and a cupful of diced cold chicken. Mix well and serve on lettuce leaves with salad dressing.

Fruit Soup.—Sprinkle half a cupful of sugar into a quart of boiling water, add the grated zest of a lemon and a small stick of cinnamon, cook for half an hour. Remove the cinnamon and add a quart of canned cherries, bring to the boiling point, cool and serve with wafers.

We have careful thoughts for the stranger. And smiles for the sometimes guest. But oft for "our own." The bitter tone. Though we love "our own" the best. Ah, lips with the curve impatient, Ah, brow with that look of scorn, 'Twere a cruel fate. Were the night too late To undo the work of the morn.

HOT WEATHER DISHES.

When entertaining on a hot day a most delightful beginning to any meal is fruit. There are so many attractive ways of presenting it that one need not enumerate. If you wish a cold soup, here is one worth using: Iced consommé, simply chill it and add to each quart two well-pounded canned pimientos, which will give both color and flavor.

Chaudroid of Salmon.—This is literally hot cold salmon. Take the contents of a can of salmon or an equal amount of cooked fish, remove skin and bones and separate into flakes with a fork. If the canned fish is used rinse with water to remove the oil. Mix one teaspoonful of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of mustard, a few grains of cayenne. Add one egg beaten lightly, 1½ tablespoonfuls of melted butter, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Cook—over hot water until the mixture thickens like custard. Remove from the heat and add three-fourths of a tablespoonful of gelatin which has been softened in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Strain and add to the fish, mix well and turn into molds or a large mold. Surround with cucumber sauce when serving.

Cucumber Sauce.—Beat until thick a half-cup of cream, add a teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of pepper and gradually two tablespoonfuls of vinegar; then add one cucumber, pared and chopped fine and well drained.

Horseradish sauce is also delicious for fish. Use two or three tablespoonfuls of freshly grated horseradish and the same amount of cream, a teaspoonful of sugar, salt and vinegar to taste.

Nellie Maxwell.

"Oh, Hello, Hello, Hello!" Morris Feldman of 307 Washington street, Brooklyn, was in the men's court on a charge of peddling without a license, says the New York Tribune. Patrolman McMahon said he found the prisoner at Fourth avenue and Fourteenth street selling parquets. "Hello, oh, hello," said a small yellow bird, climbing out of Feldman's pocket. "What's that?" demanded Magistrate House. "Hello, hello," said the parrot cheerfully. The magistrated smiled and regarded the bird more kindly. But the moment he turned to resume the case the same syllables, differently accented, smote his ear. "Hello, oh, hello!" "Feldman, I fine you two dollars," snapped the magistrated.

TAFFETAS ALL LOVELY

DESIGNERS WOULD SEEM TO HAVE WROUGHT WONDERS.

Easily the Favorite Material for Calling Gowns and Deserves All the Popularity Which Has Been Accorded It.

Some of the most effective summer calling costumes show a combination of taffeta with chiffon and odd touches of embroidery, writes Lillian Young in a letter from Paris to the Washington Star. As the embroideries come mostly in strange, even garish, colors, they have, of course, to be used with discretion even in this season when delicate, harmonious colorings have given place to bolder treatments.

And as for the taffetas—all that the designers promised of them has been fulfilled, and more. They have never been so lovely. Delightful things that were never thought of in the old days of this material are accomplished, and its popularity is increasing every day. The silks themselves are so beautiful that even a moderate amount of ingenuity is sufficient to transform them into ravishing frocks, suits, or hats, or coats, for they are put to many purposes. No other fabric lends itself with such grace to unique trimming effects.

Taffeta is the Favorite Material for Calling Gowns.

or unusual designs. With no other material has originality such free play. Each individual maker works out her own schemes, as she would not feel inclined to take the liberty of doing with satins or worsteds.

A charming idea was developed in the model sketched, which reproduces a calling costume of hydrangea blue taffeta and chiffon to match. The latter made its appearance only in the second flounce of the tunic, which, with the skirt proper, was mounted to a hip-length foundation of china silk. This, in turn, being covered by the interesting upper tunic flounce of taffeta. It was laid in box folds under the belt, with the spaces between slightly gathered and the end of each box fold was oddly scalloped and effectively, though simply embroidered in blue and rose colorings.

The blouse was cut with elbow sleeves and in front and back the material was gathered a little on the line of the shoulders; then covered with a scalloped and embroidered medallion of the tunic border. The V-neck was filled in with white chiffon ruffling, and a crushed girde of black satin drew the fullness of the blouse in at the waist line and was caught up under the bust in front and tied in a flat bow, the space just below being filled in with a section of embroidered taffeta.

FOR SERVING AT LUNCHEON

Quaker Gray Best Carb for Hostess Who Will Personally Wait on Her Guests.

After luncheon or before, if the general housework is expected to wait on the luncheon table, she will change to an afternoon dress. This can be black, if it is preferred, or it can be of any light color. The very newest thing is Quaker Gray. The correct afternoon apron is short and bibbed and there must be collar, cuffs and headpiece to match the apron. The smartest thing is to have apron, cuffs, collar and headpiece made of white cable net. Black ribbon about two inches wide is run through the belt of the apron and tied at the back of the waist.

A maid dressed in Quaker gray sateen with collar, cuffs, apron and headpiece of white net suggests efficiency and contentment in appearance.

Smartening Black Frock. To brighten and smarten a black frock in satin or crepe de chine, there is nothing equal to golden-colored material on the collar, the cuffs and the neck-end. Depending entirely upon the age of a woman and the occasion for which she needs the frock, these golden touches must be applied. The collar, the cuffs and the neck end may be wholly of gold lace veiling cloth of gold; the satin or crepe may have gold motif and medallion incrustations, applique, or there may be merely bands of gold cloth.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By E. O. SELLERS, Director of Evening Department, The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

LESSON FOR JULY 19
BLIND BARTIMAEUS.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:46-52.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb shall sing; for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert." Isa. 35: 5, 6.

On our Lord's journey "towards Jerusalem," the place of sacrifice, a place of power was sought by his disciples, Mark 10:37. This lesson is an illustration given to those who accompanied Jesus how they too may reach a place of power, viz., through service and sacrifice.

Matthew 20:30-34 tells us that there were two who made the appeal, but Mark seems to have thought that Bartimaeus was worthy of special mention. The healing mentioned by Luke 18:35 suggests that in that case it occurred as Jesus was entering and not leaving Jericho. Mark is telling of one man, Luke of another.

Man's Nature.
I. Bartimaeus Begging, vv. 46-48. The passing through Jericho rebuked the beggar. Very likely the disciples joined in this rebuke. This certainly shows the fact that none of them fully comprehended the Lord's teaching as suggested in Mark 10:45. Bartimaeus is an illustration of man by nature. His home, Jericho, was the city under "a curse" (Josh 6:17), and is a type of this world cursed by sin. He was blind, see II Cor. 4:4; Rev. 3:17. His rage suggest Isa. 64:6 and Phil. 3:9. If the rebuke was mainly by the disciples it was that they might save the master during these strange days. Great and marvelous were the works and teachings he was performing, but these were the things that called forth such a wayward service. It was a glad message to Bartimaeus, "Jesus of Nazareth passeth by." There was no one else who could help him. Some one had told him of the power of Jesus. Now his opportunity is at hand, he must not miss it. Jesus never passed that way again. Bartimaeus began by crying out, Rom. 10:13; he called while Christ was near enough to hear, Isa. 55:6. His cry was that of conscious need, it was direct, it was insistent. He called Jesus "Son of David" e. g., the Messiah, although the people had said "Jesus of Nazareth," see Matt. 9:27; 15:21-22. His cry for "mercy" is rebuked. Many today are so stiff and formal as to frown upon any religious enthusiasm or earnestness. It was not beneath the dignity of Jesus to be disturbed by a blind beggar. Though poor in purse Bartimaeus was rich in faith for he answered those who rebuked him by crying "the more a great deal." He would not be put off.

TO DECORATE DINING ROOM
Pottery and Chinaware Should Be Selected With a Good Deal of Taste and Discretion.

If you have a blue dining room and have some really good Japanese or Chinese porcelain, or china in blue and white, use it, and use nothing else, unless it be some interesting little Japanese or Chinese knickknaps in brass—a gong or a tiny idol perhaps. Wedgwood is a beautiful plate-rail decoration if it is used alone; but unfortunately, there are few who possess enough of it to furnish a whole plate rail.

If modern pottery is used, it is well to choose the whole furnishing of the plate rail at once. There is a certain brown and cream colored ware in the market now that could be used effectively in the room where yellow or brown predominates. The ware is decorated with peasant scenes.

There are many good designs in royal doulton of various sorts that can be chosen. Only they should be selected with a definite idea in mind of the other pieces with which they are to rank and of the room they are to decorate.

Silver and Gold Laces.
Silver and gold laces, woven with an extremely open mesh and showing large flower designs, are favored for trimming the evening frocks of the more expensive class.

Tassels of silk or beads of unusually large proportions appear on suits, afternoon frocks and evening costumes. The latter are adorned with handsome white silk tassels.

Buckles play an important part in trimming the pretty frocks. They are jeweled with brilliants or colored stones and enameled in designs which suggest the dainty Dresden china patterns. Other buckles are embroidered with heavy silk or braid, or fashioned of silk in odd design.

SUMMER BAG

White moire with clusters of opalescence.

On Summer Days.
A sweeter coat and cap that are lovely, and seem exactly planned for the outdoor girl or woman in the summer are knitted of silk in mauve and silver-gray. The coat is gray with a belt at the back, and cuffs, neck and front border in the mauve. The gray cap has a deep round band of mauve with the points of the square crown caught down on the band by mauve silk buttons. The colors reversed would be good, too.

Trading Stamp Will Gets on a Judge's Nerves

DETROIT, MICH.—Probate Judge Hanley absent scribbled the above sentiment on his blotter pad as he listened to the contest of the will of Hattie C. Koszeska. Hattie, by her last testament, left her entire earthly treasures, consisting of about $1,300 in trading stamps, to be divided equally between her husband, Julius, and her mother, Mrs. Matilda Brock. By dint of questioning, Judge Hanley learned that the trading stamps were worth a parlor rocker, a soup tureen and a shaving mug, or, by different combining, would get for the lucky holder a penwiper, a set of false teeth and a shoehorn.

"Your honor," said Julius, "my mother-in-law must have used undue influence on my wife to get her to bequeath half of these trading stamps to anybody but me. I want the will declared void on that ground."

Judge Hanley scribbled another couplet as he listened to the oration of Julius. It read:

It's fun to spite a mother-in-law, Especially when it's by the law. "My wife spent the best years of her life collecting those trading stamps," continued Julius. "Many is the happy evening she and I spent counting them over."

Bucolic pleasures clashed with art. But never loosened Cupid's dart. That was what Judge Hanley scribbled at this juncture. But the mother-in-law now had her inning. She said they were soap trading stamps and that she had helped her daughter to get them.

The soap was soon used up in lather. That's what got the stamps, I gather. So the judge scribbled, but the testimony was by that time all in and he rendered judgment.

"This is the cheapest will contest that has ever been brought in Wayne county," he said. "I admit the will to probate, and, further, if the will be knocked out, the husband and mother of the woman would divide the trading stamps under the statute."

Old Chippewa Indian Chief Views Wonders of City

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—John Smith, or Wa-be-ne-gaw-wes, for more than a hundred years chief of the once powerful tribe of Chippewa Indians, who is one hundred and twenty-eight years old, as he reckons it, and whose existence as a boy 116 years ago is vouched for by government records, has left for his tepee.

He came here to see before death the great city that has risen in his lifetime where once the wilderness was unbroken. The last of the great Indian chieftains of the country, bent and shriveled by age, still is able to walk about, and all his faculties have been retained.

Two small bright eyes in the depths of a face so seamed and wrinkled and withered that no words can visualize it looked out on the city. "Too many wagons," said the old chief. "The solitude of the northern woods called him and he suffered from homesickness. To Charlie Brunell, or 'Little Cloud,' who, with his wife and six-month-old baby, came along with the old chief, he complained of the noise.

"Old, old," he said in English. "But he lapsed into the Chippewa tongue and spoke through an interpreter when he said: "My people are going. Soon I will go. I came to see Minneapolis before I die."

In the great Indian uprising of 1862, the most historic warfare incident in Minnesota, he with other runners went north after the New Ulin massacre, to warn the white people of their danger. Other runners fell, pierced by Sioux arrows, but Wa-be-ne-gaw-wes got through and his friendliness for the whites and his efforts in their behalf mark a part of the history of that time. "Now my people are dying, my youth is gone," he said. And he is very sensitive on one point, for last winter while hunting he broke his nose. "Blood run cold like squaw," he said.

How any man so bent and withered still can stand erect and still bear the slightest noise and see a small object at a great distance is a wonder, but many things contributed to it.

Like the working of a piece of old mottled rubber was his face when Charlie Brunell asked what he believed most contributed to his long life. The small, beaklike eyes began to twinkle away back in his head, the tip of the nose bent down to meet the chin, the mouth opened, and the great contributing cause came out in one loud English word: "Foker."

Bees Own a Street; Stop Business and Traffic

CINCINNATI, O.—Sycamore street in the vicinity of Sixth street was practically deserted the other day, because of a swarm of bees which, after attempting to establish a colony at St. Xavier's college, were routed by students there and made their miserable for pedestrians, school children and factory employes in the vicinity. Business was practically at a standstill until the bees could be gathered into a box and taken away.

Conductors and motormen on the pay-as-you-enter cars which operate on Sycamore street had the laugh on their comrades who man open summer conveyances, although some of them got stung before the lesson was learned. Teamsters made but one attempt to reach the intersection of Seventh street and Sycamore, long detours being the order of the day after the first tryout. Pedestrians got wise on the way home and business men along Sycamore street used its back entrances in going to and fro.

The bees under the leadership of their queen took the liberty of swarming on one of the windows of the third floor of St. Xavier college. Some one discovered them and proceeded to rout them with water. The bees attacked a car and forced the passengers and crew to take flight.

Fred Dueker, with his son Irwin, with a common old shoe box as a trap, gathered in all the bees without any trouble, the youngster handling the bigger part of the job. With the departure of the bees, peace again reigned on Sycamore.

While this was going on, Corporal Sterly and Officer Somhorst were on their way to police headquarters, limping painfully, but happy. They carried a large box in which they had as prisoners a queen bee and her swarm that had descended upon the occupants of a basement at Canal and Vine streets. Both officers showed swollen parts of their body as proof of the stings received. Before the officers succeeded in gathering in this second swarm, the bees had invaded a restaurant and caused the diners to flee in terror.

Ancient Game of "Snipe" Hunting Is Revived

NEW YORK.—The ancient and honorable game of "snipe hunting" has been revived and in this enlightened vicinity, too. The reviver is Jack Ehrler, a bookkeeper at the Guardian Savings and Trust company. Lest there be some folk who are not acquainted with the delights and joys of "snipe hunting" we will elucidate. For hunting the wary snipe, a dark night is selected. The hunters repair to a dense woods. They circle through the woods and drive the snipe toward the center where one man stands ready to catch them in a bag. The sport comes when every one beats it for home, leaving the one man to hold the bag until he comes to.

Jack was visiting on a farm near Hudson recently and some one proposed that the bunch go snipe-hunting. Jack grew quite enthusiastic, even to the possibility of and quite selfishly declared that he would hold the bag. He just would not allow any one else to do it. And the more unskillful members of the party let him have his way. The bag was placed in the depth of the woods with logs placed alongside to form a runway, so the snipe could not miss the bag in the dark. You know snipe cannot see well at night. He was armed with a lantern to attract the snipe. About 2 a. m. Mr. Ehrler arrived home, after having become lost in the woods, chased by dogs and irate farmers whom he awoke to find out where he was. He would not have this story become known at the bank for anything, so please help us to keep it quiet.

Perhaps the tax payers were abundant that so few attended the school meeting last year, and decided to be on hand this year. At any rate there was about 50 present when the gravel was sounded by Secretary Davis and his report which showed that there are 200 children of school age in the district, that is 23 less than last year. 200 of these have attended school the past year. There were 49 non-resident pupils attended. The average cost of education was $29.88 an increase of $1.68 over last year. The following teachers have been engaged for the coming year at salaries named: Geo. A. Smith, Superintendent, $1100 00; Marie Kneibhofer, Principal, 650 00; Lois M. The Hollow of Her Hand

by George Barr McCutcheon

He did not once interrupt her. All the time she was speaking he was studying the profile of her face as if fascinated by its strange immobility. For the matter of a full half-hour he sat on the rail, his back against a post, his arms folded across the breast of the thick ulster he wore, staring at her drinking in every word of the story she told. A look of surprise crept into his face when she came to the point where the thought of marrying Hetty to the brother of her victim first began to manifest itself in her designs. For a time the look of incredulity remained, to be succeeded by utter scorn as she went on with the recital. Her reasons, her excuses, her explanations for this master stroke in the way of compensation for all that she had endured at the hands of the scornful Wrاندalls, all of whom were hateful to her without exception, stirred him deeply. He began to understand the forces that compelled her to resort to this Machiavellian plan for revenge on them. She admitted everything: her readiness to blight Hetty's life forever; her utter callousness in laying down these ugly plans; her surpassing vindictiveness; her reflections on the triumph she was to enjoy when her aims were fully attained. She confessed a genuine pity for Hetty Castleton from the beginning, but it was outweighed by that thing she could only describe as an obsession! How she hated the Wrاندalls! Then came the real awakening: when the truth came to her as a revelation from God, Hetty had not been to blame. The girl was innocent of the one sin that called for vengeance so far as she was concerned. The slaying of Challis Wrاندall was justified! All these months she had been harboring a woman she believed to have been his mistress as well as his murderer. It was not so much the murderer that she would have foisted upon the Wrاندalls as a daughter, but the mistress!

She loved the girl, she had loved her from that first night. Back of it all, therefore, lay the stern, unsuspected truth: from the very beginning she instinctively had known this girl to be innocent of guilt. Her house of cards fell down. There was nothing left of the plans on which it had been constructed. It had all been swept away, even as she strove to protect it against destruction, and the ground was strewn with the ashes of fires burnt out.

She was shocked to find that she had even built upon the evil spot! Almost word for word she repeated Hetty's own story of her meeting with Challis Wrاندall, and how she went, step by step and blindly, to the last scene in the tragedy, when his villainess, his true nature was revealed to her. The girl had told her everything. She had thought herself to be in love with Wrاندall. She was carried away by his protestations. She was infatuated. (Sara smiled to herself as she spoke of this. She knew Challis Wrاندall's charm!) The girl believed in him implicitly. When he took her to Burton's Inn it was to make her his wife, as she supposed. He had arranged everything. There came the truth. She defended herself.

"It came upon her, in the road on that wild night, Brandon, at the place I pointed out. Can you picture her as I have described her? Can you picture her despair, her hopelessness, her misery? I have told you everything, from beginning to end. You know how she came to me, how I prepared her for the sacrifice, how she left me. I have not written to her. I cannot! She must hate me with all her soul, just as I have hated the Wrاندalls, but with greater reason, I confess. She would have given herself up to the law long ago, if it had not been for exposing me to the world as her defender, her protector. She knew she was not morally guilty of the crime of murder. In the beginning she was afraid. She did not know our laws. In time she came to understand that she was in no real peril, but then it was too late. A confession would have placed me in an impossible position. You see, she thought of me all this time. She loved me as no woman ever loved another. Was not I the wife of the man she had killed, and was not I the noisiest of all women in her eyes? God! And to think of what I had planned for her!"

This was the end of the story.

The words died away in a sort of whimpering wail, falling in with the wind to be lost to his straining ears. Her head drooped, her arms hung limply at her side.

For a long time he sat there in silence, looking out over the darkening water, unwilling, unable indeed, to speak. His heart was full of compassion for her, mingling strangely with what was left of scorn and horror. What could he say to her?

At last she turned to him. "Now you know all that I can tell you of Hetty Castleton—of Hetty Glyn. You could not have forced this from me, Brandon. She would not tell you. It was left for me to do in my own good time. Well, I have spoken. What have you to say?"

"I can only say, Sara, that I thank God for everything," he said slowly.

"For everything?"

"I thank God for you, for her and for everything. I thank God that she found him out in time, that she killed him, that you shielded her, that you failed to carry out your devilish scheme, and that your heart is very sore today."

"You do not despise me?"

"No. I am sorry for you."

Her eyes narrowed. "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

"You don't understand. I am sorry for you because you have found yourself out and must be despising yourself."

"You have guessed the truth. I despise myself. But what could be expected of me?" she asked ironically. "As the Wrاندalls would say, 'blood will tell.'"

"Nonsense! Don't talk like that! It is quite unworthy of you. In spite of everything, Sara, you are wonderful. The very thing you tried to do, the way you went about it, the way you surrendered, makes for greatness in you. If you had gone on with it and succeeded, that fact alone would have put you in the class with the great, strong, virile women of history. It—"

"With the Medicias, the Borgias and—" she began bitterly.

"Yes, with them. But they were great women, just the same. You are greater, for you have more than they possessed: a conscience. I wish I could tell you just what I feel. I haven't the words. I—"

"I only want you to tell me the truth. Do you despise me?"

"Again I say that I do not. I can only say that I regard you with—yes, with awe."

"As one might think of a deadly serpent."

"Hardly that," he said, smiling for the first time. He crossed over and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Don't think too meanly of yourself. I understand it all. You lived for months without a heart, that's all."

"You put it very gently."

"I think I am right. Now, you've got it back, and it's hungry for the sweet, good things of life. You want to be happy. You want to love again and to be loved. You don't want to be pitied. I understand. It's the return of a heart that went away long months ago and left an empty place that you filled with gall. The bitterness is gone. There is something sweet in its place. Am I not right?"

She hesitated. "If you mean that I want to be loved by my enemies, Brandon, you are wrong," she said clearly. "I have not been chastened in that particular."

"You mean the Wrاندalls?"

"It is not in my nature to love my enemies. We stand on the same footing as before, and always shall. They understand me, I understand them. I am glad that my project failed, not for their sake, but for my own."

He was silent. This woman was beyond him. He could not understand a nature like this.

"You say nothing. Well, I can't ask you to understand. We will not discuss my enemies, but my friends. What do you intend to do in respect to Hetty?"

"I am going to make her my wife," he said levelly.

She turned away. It was now quite dark. He could not see the expression on her face.

"What you have heard does not weaken your love for her?"

"No. It strengthens it."

"You know what she has done. She has taken a life with her own hands. Can you take her to your bosom, can you make her the mother of your own children? Remember, there is blood on her hands."

"Ah, but her heart is clean!"

"True," she said moodily, "her heart is clean."

"No cleaner than yours is, Sara."

She uttered a short, mocking laugh. "It isn't necessary to say a thing like that to me."

"I beg your pardon."

Her manner changed abruptly. She turned to him, intense and serious. "She is so far away, Brandon. On the other side of the world, and she is full of loving for me—How am I to regain what I have lost? How am I to make her understand? She went away with that last ugly thought of me, with the thought of me as I appeared to her on that last, enlightening day. All these months it has been growing more horrible to her. It has been besting her all the time. All these months she has known that I pretended to love her as—"

"I don't believe you know Hetty as well as you think you do," he broke in. "You forget that she loved you with all her soul. You can't kill love so easily as all that. It will be all right, Sara. You must write and ask her to come back. It—"

"Ah, but you don't know!" Then she related the story of the liberated canary bird. "Hetty understands. The cage door is open. She may return when she chooses, but—don't you see?—she must come of her own free will."

"You will not ask her to come?"

"No. It is the test. She will know that I have told you everything. You will go to her. Then she may understand. If she forgives she will come back. There is nothing else to say, nothing else to consider."

"I shall go to her at once," he said resolutely.

She gave him a quick, searching glance

"She may refuse to marry you, even now, Brandon."

"She can't!" he cried. An instant later his face fell. "By Jove, I—I suppose the law will have to be considered now. She will at least have to go through the form of a trial."

She whirled on him angrily. "The law? What has the law to do with it? Don't be a fool!"

"She ought to be legally exonerated," he said.

Her fingers gripped his arm fiercely. "I want you to understand one thing, Brandon. The story I have told you was for your ears alone. The secret lives with us and dies with us."

He looked his relief. "Right! It must go no farther. It is not a matter for the law to decide. You may trust me."

"I am cold," she said. He heard her teeth chatter distinctly as she pulled her thick mantle closer about her throat and shoulders. "It is very raw and wet down here. Come!"

As she started off along the long, narrow pier, he sprang after her, grasping her arm. She leaned rather heavily against him for a few steps and then drew herself up. Her teeth still chattered, her arm trembled in his clasp.

"By Jove, Sara, this is bad," he cried, in distress. "You're chilled to the marrow."

"Nerves," she retorted, and he somehow felt that her lips were set and drawn.

"You must get to bed right away. Hot bath, mustard, and all that. I'll not stop for dinner. Thanks just the same. I will be over in the morning."

"When will you call?" she asked, after a moment.

"I can't go for ten days, at least. My mother goes into the hospital next week for an operation, as I've told you. I can't leave until after that's over. Nothing serious, but—well, I can't go away. I shall write to Hetty tonight, and cable her tomorrow. By the way, I—I don't know just where to find her. You see, we were not to write to each other. It was in the bargain. I suppose you don't know how I can—"

"Yes, I can tell you precisely where she is. She is in Venice, but leaves there for Rome, by the Express."

"Then you have been hearing from her?" he cried sharply.

"Not directly. But I will say this much: there has not been a day since she landed in England that I have not received news of her. I have not been out of touch with her, Brandon. Not even for an hour."

"Good heaven, Sara! You don't mean to say you've had her shadowed by—by detectives," he exclaimed, aghast.

"Her maid is a very faithful servant," was her ambiguous rejoinder.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Disturbing News.

He walked home swiftly through the early night, his brain seething with tumultuous thoughts. The revelations of the day were staggering; the whole universe seemed to have turned topsy-turvy since that devastating hour at Burton's Inn. Somehow he was not able to confine his thoughts to Hetty Castleton alone. She seemed to whirl into the background, despite the absolute he had been so ready, so eager to grant her on hearing the story from Sara's lips. Not that his resolve to search her out and claim her in spite of everything was likely to weaken, but that the absorbing figure of Sara Wrاندall stood out most clearly in his reflections.

What an amazing creature she was! He could not drive her out of his thoughts, even when he tried to concentrate them on the one person who was dearest to him of all in all the world, his warm-hearted, adorable Hetty. Strange contrasts suggested themselves to him as he strode along, head bent and shoulders hunched. He could not help contrasting the two women. He loved Hetty; he would always love her, that he was positive. She was Sara's superior in every respect, infinitely so, he argued. And yet there was something in Sara that could crowd this adored one, this perfect one out of his thoughts for the time being. He found it difficult to concentrate his thoughts on Hetty Castleton.

How white and ill Sara had looked when she said good night to him at the door! The memory of her dark, mysterious eyes haunted him; he could see them in the night about him. They had been full of pain; there were torrents of tears behind them. They had glistened as if burnished by the fires of fever.

Even as he wrote his long, triumphant letter to Hetty Castleton, the picture of Sara Wrاندall encroached upon his mental vision. He could not drive it out. He thought of her as she had appeared to him early in the spring; through all the varying stages of their growing intimacy; through the interesting days when he vainly tried to translate her matchless beauty by means of wretched pigments; up to this present hour in which she was revealed, and yet not revealed, to him. Her vivid face was always before him, between his eyes and the thin, white paper on which he scribbled so eagerly. Her feverish eyes were looking into his; she was reading what he wrote before it appeared on the surface of the sheet!

His letter to Hetty was a triumph of skill and diplomacy, achieved after many attempts. He found it hard to say too much, and quite as difficult not to say too little. He spent hours over this all-important missive. At last it was finished. He read and re-read it, searching for the slightest flaw; a fatal word or suggestion that might create in her mind the slightest doubt as to his sincerity. She was sure to read this letter a great many times, and always with the view to finding something between the lines: such as pity, resignation, an enforced conception of loyalty, or even faith! He meant that she should find nothing there but love. It was full of tenderness, full of hope, full of promise. He was coming to her with a steady, fast, enduring love in his heart, he wanted her now more than ever before.

There was no mention of Challis Wrاندall, and but once was Sara's name used. There was nothing in the letter that could have betrayed their joint secret to the most acute outsider, and yet she would understand that he had wronged everything from Sara's lips. Her secret was his.

He decided that it would not be safe to anticipate the letter by a cablegram. It was not likely that any message he could send would have the desired effect. Instead of reassuring her, in all probability it would create fresh alarm.

Sleep did not come to him until after three o'clock. At two he got up and deliberately added a postscript to the letter he had written. It was in the nature of a poignant plea for Sara Wrاندall. Even as he penned these said, and there was no little significance in the way she put it. She held the letter in her hand, but he had failed to notice it before. Now he saw that it was a crumpled ball of paper. He was obliged to wait for a minute or two while she restored it to a readable condition. "He was in London when this was written," she explained, turning to the window for light. She glanced swiftly over the first page until she found the place where she meant to begin. "I suppose Hetty Castleton has written that we met in Lucerne two weeks ago," she read. "Curious coincidence in connection with it, too. I was with her father, Col. Braid Castleton, when we came upon her most unexpectedly. I ran across him in Paris just before the aviation meet, and got to know him rather well. He's a fine chap, don't you think? I confess I was somewhat surprised to learn that he didn't know she'd left America. He explained—it quite naturally, however. He'd been ill in the north of Ireland and must have missed her letters. Hetty was on the point of leaving for Italy. We didn't see much of her. But, by Jove, Sara, I am more completely gone on her than ever. She is adorable. Now that I've met her father, who had the beautifully misfortune to miss old Murrayroyd's funeral, I can readily see where the saying 'blood will tell' applies to her. He is a prince. He came over to London with me the day after we left Hetty in Lucerne, and I had him in to meet mother and Vivian at Claridge's. They like him immensely. He set us straight on a good many points concerning the Glyn and Castleton families. Of course, I knew they were among the best over here, but I didn't know how fine they were until we prevailed upon him to talk a little about himself. You will be glad to hear that he is coming over with us on the Mauretania. She sails the twenty-seventh. We'll be on the water by the time you get this letter. It had been our intention to sail last week, but the colonel had to go to Ireland for a few days to settle some beastly squabbles among the tenants. Next year he wants me to come over for the shooting. His gun's going back to India for two years, you may be interested to hear. Two years' leave. Lots of influence, believe me! We've been expecting him back in London since day before yesterday. I dare say he found matters worse than he suspected and has been delayed. He has been negotiating for the sale of some of his property in Belfast—factory sites, I believe. He is particularly anxious to close the deal before he leaves England. Had to lift a mortgage on the property, before he could think of making the sale. I staked him to four thousand pounds, to tide him over. Of course, he is eager to make the sale. 'Gad, I almost had to beg him to take the money. Terribly proud and haughty, as the butler would say. He said he wouldn't sleep well until he had returned the filthy lucre. We are looking for him back any hour now. But if he shouldn't get here by Friday, we will sail without him. He said he would follow by the next boat, in case anything happened that he didn't catch the Mauretania."

Sara interrupted herself to offer an ironic observation: "If Hetty did not despise her father so heartily, I should advise her to look farther for a father-in-law, Brandon. The colonel is a bad lot. Estates in the north of Ireland! Poor Leslie!" She laughed softly.

"He'll not show up, eh?"

"Not a bit of it," she said. "He may be charged in prison and loss in Leslie's books. This part of the letter will interest you," she went on, as if all that had gone before was of no importance to him. "I hear interesting news concerning you, my dear lines, he shuddered at the thought of what she had planned to do to Hetty Castleton. Starting hard at the black window before him, the pen still in his hand, he allowed his thoughts to dwell so intimately on the subject of his well-meant postscript, that her ashen face with its burning eyes seemed to take shape in the night beyond. It was a long time before he could get rid of the illusion. Afterwards he tried to conjure up Hetty's face and to drive out the likeness of the other woman, and found that he could not recall a single feature in the face of the girl he loved!

When he reached Southlook in the morning, he found that nearly all of the doors and windows were boarded up. Wagons were standing in the stable yard, laden with trunks and crates. Servants without-livery were scurrying about the halls. There was an air of finality about their movements.

"Yes, sir," said Watson, in reply to his question, "we are in a rush. Mrs. Wrاندall expects to close the house this evening, sir. We all go up this afternoon. I suppose you know, sir, we've taken a new apartment in town."

"No!" exclaimed Booth.

"Yes, sir, we've, sir. They've been decorating it for the past two weeks. Seems like she didn't care for the old one we had. As a matter of fact, I didn't care much for it, either. She's taken one of them expensive ones looking out over the park, sir. You know we used to look out over Madison avenue, sir, and God knows it wasn't hinderspirin'. Yes, sir, we go up this afternoon. Mrs. Wrاندall will be down in a second, thank you, sir."

Booth actually was startled by her appearance when she entered the room a few minutes later. She looked positively ill.

"My dear Sara," he cried anxiously, "this is too bad. You are making yourself ill. Come, come, this won't do."

"I shall be all right in a day or two," she said, with a weary little gesture. "I have been nervous. The strain was too great, Brandon. This is the reaction you might say."

"Your hand's hot, your eyes look feverish. You'd better see your doctor as soon as you get to town. An ounce of prevention, you know."

"Well," she said, with a searching look into his eyes, "have you written to her?"

"Yes. Posted it at seven o'clock this morning."

"I trust you did not go so far as to—well, to volunteer a word in my behalf. You were not to do that, you know."

He looked uncomfortable. "I'm afraid I did take your name in vain," he equivocated. "You are a wonderful woman, Sara," he went on, moved to the remark by a curious influence that he could not have explained any more than he could have accounted for the sudden gush of emotion that took possession of him. She ignored the tribute. "You will persuade her to come to New York with you?"

"For your sake, Sara, if she won't come for mine."

"She knows the cage is open," was her way of dismissing the subject. "I am glad you came over. I have a letter from Leslie. It came this morning. You may be interested in what he has to say of Hetty—and of yourself." She smiled faintly. "He is determined that you shall not be without a friend while he is alive."

"Les isn't such a rotter, Sara. He's spoiled, but he is hardly to be blamed for that."

"I will read his letter to you," she girl. My heartiest congratulations if it is all true. Brandy is one in a million. I have hoped all along to have him as a full-fledged brother-in-law, if that's the way you'd put it. Father writes that every one is talking about it, and saying what a fine thing it is. He has a feeling of delicacy about approaching you in the matter, and I fancy it's just as well until everything is settled. I wish you'd let me make a suggestion, however. Wouldn't it be wise to let us all get together and talk over the business end of the game? Brandy's a fine chap, a corker, in fact, but the question is: has he got it in him to take Challis' place in the firm? You've got to consider the future as well as the present, my dear. We all do. With his artistic temperament, he might play hob with your interests, and ours too, for that matter. Wouldn't it be wise for me to sound him a bit before we take him into the firm? Forgive me for suggesting this, but, as you know, your interests are mine, and I'm terribly keen about seeing you get the best of everything. By the way, wasn't he a bit gone on Hetty? Passing fancy, of course, and not deep enough to hurt anybody. Good old Brandy!"

"There is more, Brandon, but it's of no consequence," she said, tossing the letter upon the table. "You see how the land lays."

Booth was pale with annoyance. "By Jove, Sara, what an insufferable ass he is!"

"The shoe pinches?"

"Oh, it's such perfect rot! I'm sorry on your account. Have you ever heard of such gall?"

"Oh, he is merely acting as the family spokesman. I can see them now in their solemn conclave. They think it their indisputable right to select a husband for me; to pass upon him, to accept or decline him as they see fit, to say whether he is a proper man to hang up his hat and coat in the offices of Wrاندall & Co."

"Do you mean to say—"

"Let's not talk about it, Brandon. It is too silly."

"They feel to discussing her plans for the immediate future, although the minds of both were at work with something else."

"Now that I have served my purpose, I suppose you will not care to see so much of me," she said, as he prepared to take leave of her.

"Served your purpose? What do you mean?"

"I should have put it differently. You have been most assiduous in your efforts to force the secret from me. It has been accomplished. Now do you understand?"

"That isn't fair, Sara," he protested. "If you'll let me come to see you, in spite of what the gossips and Mr. Redmond Wrاندall predict, you may be sure I will be as much in evidence as ever. I suppose I have been a bit of a nuisance, hanging on as I have."

"I admire your perseverance. More than that, I admire your courage in accepting the situation as you have. I only hope you may win her over to your way of thinking, Brandon. Goodbye."

"I shall go up to town tomorrow, kit and bag. When shall I see you? We have a great deal left to talk about before I sail."

"Come when you like."

"You really want me to come?"

"Certainly."

He studied her pale, tired face for a moment, and then shook his head. "You must take care of yourself," he said. "You are unstrung. Get a good rest and—forget certain things if you can. Everything will come out all right in the end."

"It depends on what one is willing to accept as the end," he said.

SWISS COWS FEAR NO ONE

A Traveler Up in the Mountains Wrote Cards on the Back of One Bovine.

A traveler in Switzerland cannot fail to be impressed by the kindness with which the people treat their cattle—a kindness and consideration which extends to all animal life, wild or domesticated.

One beautiful August morning when up in the Scheidegg pass I strolled out to a pasture to get a better view of the mountains. Some kind soul had placed a good bench at a point of vantage, and I sat down to enjoy the beauty of the Jungfrau and the whole wonderful chain of which this famous peak is a part.

It was one of those high mountain pastures in which the grass lasts only seven or eight weeks in the hottest part of the summer. I had noticed a herd of cattle feeding near by, but paid no attention to them. After a time I began writing messages on post cards for my friends back in America. Suddenly a fine young cow came up from behind and swung her head over the back of the bench in a most hospitable fashion as much as to say, "I'm very glad to have you visit us, and hope you enjoy our mountains!"

I assured her that Teddy was never more delighted than in campaign time, and that also I was happy to make her acquaintance. As I rested my arm upon her full, clean neck and patted her head, a bull came along, stopped close by, and gazed kindly at me. I could not understand his language, but I am sure he was saying something like this: "I'm just as glad to see you as she is; it is good we can all be happy-together this fine day, and by the way (coming up closer) if it is not intruding, I'd like to have my nose patted, too."

Then came another cow, and others, till finally one cow stopped directly in front of me, so close that her side, rubbed against my knees and I was unable to continue my writing. Thereupon I stood up and wrote three or four postal cards on her back, using it as a sort of writing desk. She took it all in good part, chewed her cud contentedly and never budged.

It was evident that that herd of cattle did not know what it was to be kicked or clubbed. Brutality was unknown to them, even brutal words. A human being was a friend; they knew no strangers.

Swiss children from their earliest years are taught to be kind to all animals. It is a part of the national habit of thought. The Swiss are the best dairymen in the world. They know that it breeds not only better cattle, but it breeds better people—Judson King, in Farm and Fireside.

Woman of Mystery Dead.

The famous "white lady," who never missed a day of the Dreyfus trials, has just died at Hyeres, France, aged sixty. About a month ago she arrived at Bornes and complained to the mayor that people were endeavoring to abduct her with the view of ultimately securing her property. As there was no evidence of any such plot the mayor merely advised her to make a will, and send a notary to her lodging, but when he reached it he found that the lady had departed with Doctor Pettit for Hyeres. She took the Villa Mathilde, where she has just died. Her real name was Mme. Joutroy d'Abbas. The procurator of Toulon immediately had seals affixed, and ordered a careful inventory of the objects in her traveling bag, which she always carried and which is supposed to contain about $50,000 in money and at least $150,000 in jewels. This, however, remains to be proved.

FOUND PAGE TOO STRENUOUS WANTED HUSBAND TO LOAF

Father Had to Have Rest if He Was to Continue His Companionship With Son.

Only Then Was He Agreeable, Tested Wife—Sought Divorce From Her Silent Spouse.

We read of him in three places in the dispatches of the day. The first case was where a man kissed his wife against her will, which made her so mad that she had him arrested for assault and battery, and the court sentenced him to thirty days in jail.

Next case was where a woman had her husband arrested for getting drunk and abusing her. When before the court, here is what she said: "My man's a fine man when he's sober. The trouble is he earns money and spends it on liquor. The only time he's behaved himself was when he wasn't working and got no money. I have an income and can support the family. I wish you'd make him quit work."

"All right," said the judge, and he sentenced the husband not to work for thirty days.

The third case was a suit for divorce, where the wife charged that her husband would not speak to her. He would eat his meals without a word, then sit down with a paper and read without looking at her or speaking to her. So it has been going on for a long time. Of course the court granted the wife a divorce. Having a silent, sour husband around is intolerable.—Ohio State Journal.

More Money in It.

"I can say this much for dentists." "What is it?"

"You seldom find one who has a grasping nature."

"No."
