POWERS ATTEMPT TO PREVENT WAR

CONFLICT BETWEEN AUSTRIA AND SERVIA ALARMS EUROPE.

ENGLAND HAS PEACE PLANS

Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs Attempts to Arrest Hostilities by Conference, With-Austrian Ambassador.

London-An engagement between Austrians and Servians is reported to have occurred on the Danube, but no details are available, and it is not believed to have been of importance. Meanwhile, diplomacy is proceeding with energy along two separate lines to avert the war if possible, and if that is impossible, to localize the con-First, Sir Edward Grey, the British secretary of state for foreign affairs, has proposed to the powers a plan for joint mediation, which, it is stated. France and Italy already have

Sir Edward Grey explained in the house of commons his idea, which was that the four powers, Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy, cooperate in an endeavor to arrange the dispute between Austria and Servia on the basis of Servia's reply to 'the Austrian ultimatum. This reply he re garded as the foundation on which friendly and impartial powers should be able to arrange an acceptable settlement.

Should the Britsh foreign secre tary's efforts fail to avert war, it is expected he will endeavor by some means to prevent complications by confining the hostilities to Austria and

The second line of diplomatic en deavor, from which even more is hoped, is taking place at St. Petersburg, between the Russian minister of foreign affairs, Sergius Sazonoff, and the Austrian ambassador. It is understood that M. Sazonoff is making strenuous effort to bring about a direct understanding, and that a solution on these lines would be more agreeable to Germany than Great Britain's conference proposal.

The Russian emperor has poned his intended visit to Finland, in order to remain in the capital during the crisis. It is said Russia is urging Servia to give Austria the fullest possible satisfaction for the assassination of the Grand Duke and his

It's not imagination on my part." said Leslie with conviction, failing utterly to recognize the obvious. "I supto visit me for six weeks of so. We became rattling good friends before we parted. My Jove, you should hear him on old Lord Murgatroyd's will! The quintessence of wit! I couldn't take it as he does. Expectations and all that sort of thing, you know, going up like hot sir halloon and bursting in plain view. But he never squeaked. Laughed it off. A British attribute, I dare say. suppose you know that he is obliged to sell his estate in Ireland?"

Hetty started. She could not conceal the look of shame that leaped into her eyes.

"I-I did not know." she murmured. "Must be quite a shock to you. Sit down, Brandy. You look very picturesque standing, but chairs were made sit upon-or in, whichever is proper. Booth shrugged his shoulders. "I think I'll stand if you don't mind.

"I merely suggested it, old chap fearing you might have overlooked the possibilities. Yes, Miss Castleton, he left us in London to go up to Belfast on this dismal business." There was something in the back of his mind that he was trying to get at in a tactful manner. "By the way, is this property

"I know nothing at all about it, Mr. Wrandall," said she, with a pleading glance at her lover, as if to inquire what stand she should take in this distressing situation.

"If it is entailed he can't sell it." said Booth quietly.

"That's true," said Leslie, somewhat dubiously. Then, with a magmanimity that covered a multinde of doubts he added: "Of course, I am only interested in seeing that you are properly protected. Miss Castleton I've no doubt you hold an interest in the estates."

"I can't very well discuss a thing know absolutely nothing about," she said succinctly. "Most of it is in building lots and factories in Belfast, of course. It was more in the nature of a question than a declaration. "The old family castle. isn't very much of an asset, I take it.' "I fancy you can trust Colonel Castleton to make the best possible deal in the premises," said Booth drily.

"I suppose so," said the other re "He is a shrewd beggar, I'm convinced of that. Strange, however, that I haven't heard a word from him since he left us in London. I've been expecting a cablegram from him every day for nearly a fortnight, letting me know when to expect him."

"Are you going to California this winter for the flying?" asked Hetty. Sara entered at that juncture they all sat down to listen for half an hour to Leslie's harangue on the way the California meet was being mismanaged, at the end of which he de-

"Do you know, Brandy, old fellow,

Booth's sarcastic smile was hidden hy the dusk. He made no pretense of openly resenting the meanness o spirit that moved Leslie to these caddish remarks. He merely announced in a dry, cutting voice:

"I think Miss Castleton is to be con gratulated that her injury is no greater than nature made it in the beginning." What do you mean by 'nature?'

"Nature gave her a father, didn't

"Obviously." Well, why add insult to injury?"

"By Jove! Oh, I say, old man!"
They parted at the next corner. A Booth started to cross over to the Plaza. Leslie called out after him:

You're learning, Leslie," said Booth, taking the hand the other held out to him.

While the painter was dining at his club later on in the evening, he was exiled to the telephone. Watson was on the wire. He said that Mrs. Wran- Tollow. dall would like to know if Mr. Booth could drop in on her for a few minetes after dinner, "to discuss a very important matter, if you please, sir. I should feel so much easier if the whole world knew," said she earnestly. Sara heard the girl's words as she stood in the door. She came forward with a strange—even abashed—smile, after closing the door behind her.

"I don't agree with you, dearest when you say that the world should know, but I have come to the conclusion that you should be tried and ac quitted by a jury made up of Challis Wrandall's own flesh and blood. The Wrandalls must know the truth."

CHAPTER XXI.

The Jury of Four.

The Wrandalle sat waiting and won-dering. They had been sent for and they had deigned to respond, much to Mr. Wrandall, in a low, incredulous their own surprise. Redmond Wran dail occupied a place at the head of wife. Vivian and Leslie, by direction, took seats at the side of the long table which had been cleared of its mass of books and magazines. Lawyer Car-roll was at the other end of the table, perceptibly nervous and anxious. Hetty sat a little apart from the others, a rather forlorn, detached member of the conclave Branden Booth, pale-faced drew up a chair alongside Carroll, facing Sara who alone re mained standing, directly opposite the

"It is the mildest term I can command," said Sara. "I shall be as brief as possible in stating the case, Mr. Wrandall. You will be surprised to as the wife of Challis Wrandall and. as I regard it, the one most vitally concerned if not interested in the dis covery and punishment of the person who took his life-I say I have taken it upon myself to shield, protect and defend the unhappy young woman who "We can fix that," said he confident-accompanied him to Burton's inn on. "Sara can live with us if she feels that night in March. She has had my constant, my personal protection for more than twenty months."

The Wrandalls leaned forward in their chairs. The match burned Les lie's fingers, and he dropped it without sppearing to notice the pain. What is this you are saying?" de manded Redmond Wrandall. When I left the inn that night, after seeing my husband's body in the little upstairs room, I said to myself that the one who took his life had unwittingly done me a service. He was my husband; I loved him, I adored him To the end of my days I could have gone on loving nim in spite of the cruel return he gave for my love and loyalty. I shall not attempt to tell you of the countless lapses of fidelity on his part. You would not believe me But he always came back to me with the pitiful love he had for me, and I forgave him his transgressions. These things you know. He confessed many things to you, Mr. Wrandall. He humbled himself to me. Perhaps you will recall that I never complained to you dehim. What rancor I had was

You may now understand what I mean when I say that the girl who went to Burton's inn with him I considered her guiltless at the time On the contrary, I looked upon her in quite a different way. I had no means of knowing then that she was as pure as snow and that he would have de spoiled her of everything that sweet and sacred to her. You see I put it mildly. I have hated all of you, Mrs. Wrandall, even as you have hated me. Today—now—I do not feel as I did in other days toward you. I do not love you, still I do not hate you. I do not forgive you, and yet I think I have come to see things from your point of view. I can only repeat that I do not hate you as I once did." She paused. The Wrandalls were too deeply submerged in horror to speak. They merely stared at her as if stupefied; as breathless, as motioness as stones. "There came a day when I observe the Sabbath.

"I think Sunday sught to remain that some people call 'dull,' " said J. smsay MacDonald, M. P., speaking at Leicester. He appealed to religious institutions to see that Sunday is not secularized. People talked a lot of nonsense about the Scottish Sabbath, and did not know what they were talking about. If they were trained to appreciate the Scottish Sabbath-it would take some amount of training—they would not be sorry if they had it. All the talk about turning Sunday into a day of recreation was humbug and dangerous. In trying to do it they were beginning at the wrong end of the stick. They should not sacrifice the blessings they had got.

He looked forward to the time when everybody would have sufficient time for recreation during the secular days of the week. An enlightened democracy should value a day of spiritual rest so much that their hands would be lifted up against any man or movement that desired to secularize the Sunday.--London Chroniclè.

Bear Committed Suicide. The big black bear, "Bob," of the menagerie in Central park, New York, committed suicide in the presence of a large number of spectators a few days ago. Mr. Snyder, the head keeper, says that the animal recently stopped taking food, and in other ways showed signs of remorse at having strangled his mate. The other morning Bob climbed to the top of the rocky ledge in the rear of the den and deliberately threw himself backward to the asphalt flooring below, a distance of 20 feet. He broke his neck and died in a few minutes.

Paris that if he possessed such town he should be tempted to burn it down, for fear it Truly Paris is of interest to all men. To the student it is a vast university, from the Sorbonne to the Bibliotheque, Ste. Genevieve. To the leasure seeker it is one wide world of pleasure, from the Moulin Rouge Maxim's. To the Bohemian it is all Bohemia, from the Latin quarter the outer boulevards. To the devotees of fashion, it is an exquisite exposition of finery from the Rue dela Paix to Longchamps. To the lover of the drama it is one great stage. And the lover of horses can

ETER THE GREAT said of | taurants the life of the city seems to focus for a time. Everyone's purse, everyone's taste in cooking, is catered One can find in Paris restaurants would absorb the rest of his like the Cafe Riche, on the smart Bou levard des Italiens, where a dinner costs $20 a head, or one can obtain an excellent student meal at 30 cents in a side street off the Boulevard St.

Germain. The tree-enshrouded Champs Elysees will be ablaze: the myriad opalescent globes of the Ambassadeurs. the Alcazar the Horloge and those of the Cirque d'Ete will have become illuminated as if by magic and now at a distance glow fireflies amid the thickly foliaged trees. If it be an opera night, the opera house will be lit up and have its mounted guards with their gleaming accoutrements.

But Paris is also a city of sound humanitarianism, which does more for its workmen, its children and its poor than almost any other city in the world. It supplies its poor children with schooling, shoes and food, it taxes every theater ticket ten per cent for a public fund which furnishes every year 15,000 free beds in hos pitals and as many more in asylums.

This fund has also built a maternity hospital where no questions are asked It furnishes free medicines for the sick poor, collects a per diem from the employer of an injured workman, and spends $10,000,000 yearly for benevo lence.

A public pawn shop, the famous Mont de Piete, which advances funds in any amount at six per cent on any and every sort of security, from a house to a flatiron, has been in existence for more than a century.

Among the numerous hospitals and almshouses is La Salpetrise, for women, with 78 acres, and Bicetra, for men, with 3,600 beds. The Hospice des Enfants Trouves, or foundling hospital, provides for the infants brought to it until they reach the age of maturity. The Creches, or public nursersies, receive the infants of poor women at cost of four cents a day.

The educational facilities of Paris are marvelously complete. A system of kindergartens, "ecoles maternelles." is provided for children between the ages of three and six, next follows the "ecoles enfantiles," which are the transition from the kindergarten to the primary, and then the primary schools for children below the age of

WAR AGAINST ARMY WORMS IS BEING PROSECUTED BY M. A. C.

MANY FIELDS ARE DAMAGED

Prof. Shoesmith Has Discovered New Crop Particularly Suited to the Stiff Clay Soils of Michigan

[By Gurd M. Haves 1

East Lansing, Mich.-War has been declared by the M. A. C. department of entomology against the army worm, which theatens to lay wasts the grain crops in the Thumb and central Mich igan agricultural districts. Instructions as to how best to check the invading pest have been telegraphed to all the affected districts in the hope that the worm may be stopped before it works further havoe, though the losses suffered by farmers, are said to have already mounted to thousands of dollars.

"The worm cannot be stopped in those fields in which it has already appeared," declared Professor Petithead of the college department of entomology, "but it can be prevented from going further. The best thing for the farmer to do is to plow two or three furrows around those fields in which the worm is at work. It has been proved that the insect will not cross a furrow, because it seems to be averse to climbing, but as a measure of safety, it is better to plow two or three furrows, so that if one is passed, the worms will fall into the

"In the beet and chickory district poisoned bait can also be used effec-tively. The bait can be made by mixing one pound of paris green with 20 pounds of bran and a half gallon of molasses. To this should be adde some water and three oranges, rinds and all, which have been ground up. This mixture, which is sufficient for five acres of land, can than be spread by broadcasting. The worms eat it

"Where the ground is too sandy for furrowing successfully, tarred boards or strips may be laid around the edges of fields which the insects have in-

According to Professor Petit the army worm is always present in Michigan, but the late cold, wet spring was unusually suited to its propagation and was at the same time detrimental to the tachina fly, the parasitic enemy of the worm which in ordinary years checks the pest by preying upon it.

The insect crop-destroyer looks like a caterpillar. Three generations are produced a year, and it is usually the second which is harmful, though the third generation, which is produced in September, or thereabouts, is also destructive at times. The worms are particularly fond of oats and corn though they will eat other grains if they have to. They work at night, so that namely their presence is not observed until after they have done much damage. When one field is destroyed, the worms move in a body to the next, a characteristic which has given them the name "army." It is this habit of the worms, also, which enables thecking of their progress by plowing furrows about fields in which they are present.

A crop suited to many of the light sandy and stiff clay soils of Michigan, which are at present unproductive in of the farm crops department of M. A. C. This crop, according to a bulletin which has fust been written on the subject by Professor Shoesmith, is the white-flowered biennial sweet clover, well known in many sections of the state as a roadside weed, but heretofore little used for agricultural purposes. It is the opinion of the M. A. C. crop specialist that many thousands of acres of Michigan lands now lying idle can be made profitable i the hitherto neglected clover is introduced.

In his discussion of clover, which may make valuable large areas which are now barren, Professor Shoesmith stated:

"In light sandy soils that are unproductive in common field crops sweet clover may be used as a cheap organic and nitrogen content. There are likewise many stiff clay soils which are badly depleted that might be devoted to the growing of sweet toxicated by drinking so-called patent

Hog cholera, which in 1913 caused a loss of more than a million dollars to Michigan farmers and materially raised the price of pork chops, is again assuming alarming proportions in many counties according to messages which have been received by Dr. Ward M. Giltner, head of the department of bacteriology at M. A. C. The disease is said to be making particularly disastrous inroads upon porkers in Kalamazoo, Calhoun, St. Joseph, Hillsdale and Jackson counties. As a means towards helping farmers check the ravages the college has mailed out 70,000 hog cholera bulletins setting forth methods for fighting the

The college is also laving in a sunply of hog cholera serum, which may be had by farmers upon application. The serum-making operations at the college, however, have been greatly nampered of late by lack of pigs suited to the work.

Reports from Branch county, where M. A. C. and United States experts are engaged in an anti-cholera cam paingn, are in striking contract to those from neighboring districts. Since the specialists began their work, ravages of the disease in Branch have been appreciably checked. From the experience gained in this campaign the college men expect ere long to be able to greatly aid farmers throughout

The change in the source from which Michigan, and the United States in general, is drawing its immigrants is working to the detriment of agriculture in the opinion of Dean R. S. Shaw, head of the department of agriculture at M. A. C. Dean Shaw's belief has been given expression in a bulletin which is just being issued by the college. The flood of newcomers from southern Europe, Russia and Austria, he declared, is but adding to the congestion of our cities rather than aiding in agricultural production.

According to the college publication, 149,790 Michigan farmers are native white, 58,224 are foreign born white farmers, 640 are negroes and 306 are Indians. The foreign whites, the report continues, have not only adjusted themse.ves to American conditions, speedily and satisfactorily, but the enerations emanating from northern European immigrants, when educated in American schools, have developed into splendid types of citizens, charac terized by industry, honesty and religious tendencies.

The countries which have contributed the largest number of farm operators to Michigan are said to be Ger many, Sweden, Norway, England, Ire land, Austria, Denmark and Russia, in the order named. The fact, however, that immigrants are coming principally at present from southern Europe, rather than from the northern European districts, is said to be affording little help to agricul tural development. In 1913 it was found that 75 per cent of the immigrants came from Russia, Austria and Italy, while only 25 per cent came from Great Britain, Norway, Sweden Denmark and Germany.

WHAT MAKES GOOD HOSTESS

Ability to Entertain Lavishly is a Very Small Part of Her Qualifications.

A talent for originality is not sufficient to make a good hostess-that goes without saying. It is not the mountebank who wins the genuine praise of the initiated, but the real wit who has the gift of magnetism-that is, of sympathy with what is human and lasting-and can touch the heart of an audience. Is it not the drama that can move to tears that remains on the boards the longest? And is it not the woman who loves her kind who keeps their affection, who draws people to her whether she is rich in this world's goods or fortune turns its back and leaves her little resource beyond her delightful personality?

Mme. Recamier received her friends with the same grace in her shabby brick-floored little room-all that re verses allowed her-as when she had queened it in her almost royal mansion in the Faubourg Saint-Germaine. Nor did they gather less eagerly there than in her beautiful home, because she retained in her poverty the same charm, the same qualities that had made her the most sought woman in Paris

The equal taxation measure, putting railroads, telegraphs and express companies on the same basis as other property, has alone saved the owners of farms, homes and other property over $2,000,000 annually. The prison binder twine plant has reduced the cost of twine to Michigan farmers nearly one-half, thereby saving them, yearly, hundreds of thousands of dollars.

That the voters know and appreciate these things is shown by the fact that in 1910 his plurality over his democratic opponent was 45,000 more than was Osborn's, who was elected governor, and 6,000 more than Ross, who was elected Lieutenant Governor. Again in 1912 he was elected by a plurality of 55,000 greater than Mussulman, who ran for Governor on the same ticket, and 10,000 more than Ross, who was Petit Croix is a customs post on the Lorraine frontier. The Uhlans participating in the attack comprised the advance guard of the German army advanceing from Metz, with Nancy as the objective.

News that they were en route had been brought to the commander of the French customs guard by an aviator who reconnected from the outposts late Sunday.
