KILLS HER CUBS; TOO MUCH PUBLICITY

Denver, Colo.—Too much publicity killed our mountain lion cubs at the City park zoo the other day. Nellie, their mother, objected to the number of persons who stopped outside her den and peered curiously. To insure greater privacy, she took three of the cubs at dusk, dug a hole for each of them, dropped them in and pounded the ground over them.

The Hollow of Her Hand

by George Barr McCutcheon

COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY GEORGE BARR MCCUTCHEON; COPYRIGHT, 1912, BY DODD, MEAD & COMPANY

IN THE WORSHIPER

Reverence is Something Which Dwells in the Heart, and is Not of Material Things.

A burning bush in the desert, and God was there; the court of Solomon's temple, and God was there; a cave on the rock-ribbed mountain, and God was there; the plains of Bethlehem, and God was there; the caravan track from Jerusalem to Damascus, and God was there; the stone quarries of the Isle of Patmos, and God was there!

Reverence is not a thing of time or place; it is not inseparably connected with a day or an hour, isolated from the rest of the calendar; it is not to be discovered only in a building set apart from the other buildings. Reverence is an attitude of mind, a state of heart, a sensitiveness of soul to whatever is sacred, to whatever speaks of God. Undoubtedly there are times and places closely associated with moods and acts of worship, but the reverence inheres in the disposition of the person who worships.

Expressions of Reverence.

To have a nature that is quickly responsive to the presence of God is the first and major part of reverence; to act becomingly is the second part. The first is the same everywhere; the second varies in its form with latitude and longitude. Whether to remove the shoes or the hat, to stand or kneel, to speak or be silent, is a matter of country and custom. Each must express his reverence in his own way.

The soul that feels God—in the glow of the sunset, in the stately splendor of a great church, in the words of the Bible, in the helplessness of little children, in the flowers, in the severe simplicities of Puritan morality, in the anomalies of conventional worship, in the heroisms of self-sacrificing men, in the love of pure and generous hearts, in the mighty movements of national progress—the soul that feels God and responds, is the soul that is reverent.

Do not be ashamed of it, do not repress or hide or smother it, do not freeze it into the forms of passing fashion. Such moments of exaltation, such stirrings of pure emotion, are what constitute the wealth of the soul's life; without them we shall grow coarse or sterile—lightless, shapeless, hopeless.

Truth That Thrills.

The birds—say it out bravely and naturally as Jesus did—my Father feeds them; the lilies, my Father clothes them; the temple, my Father's glory—why disguise or evade it? The thrill comes, the spirit quivers with an awakening wonder, deep calleth unto deep, the ecstasy of spiritual discovery fills the heart; and it is ours, as truly as anything the palate tastes, the eyes see or the hands touch. Let us be natural in spiritual things.

There are times when it seems as if God could not speak to the mind; the prejudice and pride of partial knowledge stand in the way of receiving a divine revelation. But if there is one spirit that is always sensitive, tender to the slightest impression and listening for the faintest accent, then God will make himself known. Thus we shall find the true meaning of our other-worldly faith.

The Everlasting Father is trying to communicate with us through many channels; reverence is simply our readiness to receive the message in whatever form it may come.

GENTLE SPIRIT HAS POWER

One of the Best Signs of a Man's Religion is the Tone of His Voice.

One of the fruits of the spirit is gentleness. Do not think it is an indolent virtue, having neither influence nor power. It has an opposite quality. The mild power has an easy sway. Select from one's acquaintances a person of benign and tranquil demeanor and you feel at once he has an influence over you. You like to be with him. You incline to listen to him. If, however, he is loud, of tone and violent of manner, you are with him as little as possible. Why? Because his temper is animal. It doesn't touch a single melody in one's nature. He is harsh and discordant. That is not one of the fruits of the spirit which the apostle commends, the flesh which the apostle condemns, such as envyings, wrath, strife, etc. There is not one of the prescriptions of the Scriptures that banishes loudness and vociferation from its daily life. It may be counterfeited, but that is because it is of great worth. One of the best signs of a man's religion is the tone of his voice. If that is eruptive and volcanic he wanders from the true path.—Ohio State Journal.

All is God's. All that we have is God's. He made us, and not we ourselves. Every good gift and every perfect gift has come down from the father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow that is cast by turning. He gave us all the temporal goods we possess—houses, lands and flocks. And he also gave us his own son, the one gift that exhausted the infinite resources of heaven. Therefore all that we have of earthly good, or spiritual blessing, comes to us from God. We are his stewards.

Wasta. Every year I live I am more convinced that the waste of life lies in the love we have not given, the powers we have not used, the selfish prudence that will risk nothing, and which, shirking pain, misses happiness as well. No one ever yet was the poorer in the long run for having once in a lifetime "let out" the length of all the reins.—Mary Cholmondeley.

Exercise—Nature's physician.—Galen.

"I did not see the register at the time. I did not know till afterwards that we were not booked. Once upstairs, I refused to remove my hat or my veil or my coat until he brought my friend to me. He pretended to be very angry over his friend's failure to be there beforehand, as he had promised. He ordered a supper served in the room. I did not eat anything. Somehow I was beginning to understand, vaguely of course, but surely—and bitterly, Mr. Wrاندall. Suddenly he threw off the mask.

"He coolly informed me that he knew the kind of a girl I was. I had been on the stage. He said it was no use trying to work the marriage game on him. He was too old a bird and too wise to fall for that. Those were his words. I was horrified, stunned. When I began to cry out in my fury, he laughed at me but swore he would marry me even at that if it were not for the fact that he was already married.

"I tried to leave the room. He held me. He kissed me a hundred times before I could break away. I tried to scream. A little later on when I was absolutely desperate, I snatched up the knife. There was nothing else left for me to do. I struck at him. He fell back on the bed. I stole out of the house—oh, hours and hours afterward it seemed to me. I cannot tell you how long I stood there watching him. I was crazed by fear. I—I—

Redmond Wrاندall held up his hand. "We will spare you the rest, Miss Castleton," he said, his voice hoarse and unnatural. "There is no need to say more."

"You—you understand? You do believe me?" she cried.
He looked down at his wife's bowed head, and received no sign from her; then at the white, drawn faces of his children. They met his gaze and he read something in their eyes.

"I—I think your story is so convincing that we—we could not endure the shame of having it repeated to the world."
"I—I cannot ask you to forgive me, sir. I only ask you to believe me," she murmured brokenly. "I—I am sorry it had to be. God is my witness that there was no other way."

Mr. Carroll came to his feet. There were tears in his eyes.
"I think, Mr. Wrاندall, you will now appreciate my motives in—"
"Pardon me, Mr. Carroll, if I suggest that Miss Castleton does not require any defense at present," said Mr. Wrاندall stiffly. "Our motives were doubtless good. Will you be so good as to conduct us to a room where we may—may be alone for a short while?"

"There was something tragic in the man's face. His son and daughter arose as if moved by an instinctive realization of a duty, and perhaps for the first time in their lives were submissive to an influence that had never quite recognized before—a father's unalterable right to command. For once in their lives they were meek in his presence. They stepped to his side and stood waiting, and neither of them spoke.

Mr. Wrاندall laid his hand heavily on his wife's shoulder. She started, looked up rather vacantly, and then arose without assistance. He did not make the mistake of offering to assist her. He knew too well that to question her strength now would be but to invite weakness. She was strong. He knew her well.

She stood straight and firm for a few seconds, transfixing Hetty with a look that seemed to bore into the very soul of her, and then spoke.
"You ask us to be your judges?"
"I ask you to judge not me alone but—your son as well," said Hetty, meeting her look steadily. "You cannot pronounce me innocent without pronouncing him guilty. It will be hard."

Sara raised her head from her arms. "You know the way into my sitting-room, Leslie," she said, with singular directness. Then she arose and drew her figure to its full height. "Please remember that it is I who am to be judged. Judge me as I have judged you, I am not asking for mercy."

Hetty impulsively threw her arms about the rigid figure, and swept a pleading look from one to the other of the four stony-faced Wrاندalls.
They turned away without a word or a revealing look, and slowly moved off in the direction of the boudoir. They who remained behind stood still, motionless as statues. It was Vivian who opened the library door. She closed it after the others had passed through, and did not look behind.

Half an hour passed. Then the door was opened and the tall old man advanced into the room.
"We have found against my son, Miss Castleton," he said, his lips twitching. "He is not here to speak for himself, but he has already been judged. We have suffered from the conduct of one of us. Not one but all of us believe the story you have told. It must never be retold. We ask this of all of you. It is not in our hearts to thank Sara for shielding you, for her hand is still raised against us. We are fair and just. If you had come to us on that wretched night and told the story of my son's infamy, we, the Wrاندalls, would have stood between you and the law. The law could not have touched you then; it shall not touch you now. Our verdict, if you choose to call it that, is sealed. No man shall ever hear from the lips of a Wrاندall the smallest part of what has transpired here tonight. Mr. Carroll, you were right. We thank you for the counsel that led this unhappy girl to place herself in our hands."

"Oh, God, I thank thee—I thank thee!" burst from the lips of Sara Wrاندall. She strained Hetty to her breast.
"It is not for us to judge you, Sara," said Redmond Wrاندall, speaking with difficulty. "You are your own judge, and a harsh one you will find yourself. As for ourselves, we can only look upon your unspeakable design as the working of a temporarily deranged mind. You could never have carried it out. You are an honest woman. At the last you would have revolted, even with victory assured. Perhaps Leslie is the only one who has a real grievance against you in this matter. I am convinced that he loved Miss Castleton deeply. The worst hurt is his, and he has been your most devoted advocate during all the years of bitterness that has existed between you and us. You thought to play him a foul trick. You could not have carried it to the end. We leave you to pass judgment on yourself."
"I have already done so, Mr. Wrاندall," said Sara. "Have I not accused myself before you? Have I not confessed to the only crime that has been committed? I am not proud of myself, sir."

"Who was it?" he asked, in some awe, of a veteran stenographer who came up and sneered at him.
"Mrs. Challis Wrاندall, you little simpleton," said she, and for once he failed to snap back.

It is of record that for nearly two whole days, he was polite to every visitor who approached him and was generally worth his salt.

He hesitated a moment, opened his lips as if to speak, and then abruptly fell silent.
Sara smiled.
"Many minutes passed before the two Wrاندalls put in an appearance. She understood the delay. They were telephoning to certain legal advisers."

"What's this I hear, Sara?" demanded Leslie, extending his hand after a second's hesitation.
She shook hands with him, not remarking, somewhat doggedly, "You ought to get married. Chal didn't leave much for you to cherish. There's no reason why you should go on like this, living alone and all that sort of thing. You're young and beautiful and—"

"Oh, thank you, Leslie," she cried out sharply.
"You see, it's going to be this way: Hetty will probably marry Booth. That's on it. I take it. You're depending on her for companionship. Well, she'll quit you cold after she's married. She will—"

"She interrupted him peremptorily. "If Challis did nothing else for me, Leslie, he at least gave me you to cherish. Once more, good-by."
The elevator stopped for her. He strolled back to his office with a puzzled frown on his face. She certainly was inexplicable!

The angry red faded from her cheeks as she sped homeward in the automobile. Her thoughts were no longer of Leslie but of another. . . She sighed and closed her eyes, and her cheeks were pale.

Workmen from a picture dealer's establishment were engaged in hanging a full length portrait in the long living-room of her apartment when she reached home. She had sent to the country for Booth's picture of Hetty, and was having it hung in a conspicuous place.
Passing the open library door, Sara paused for an instant to peer within. Then she went on down the hall to her own sitting-room. The canary was singing glibly in his cage by the window-side.

She threw aside her furs, and, without removing her hat, passed into the bed-chamber at the left of the cozy little boudoir. This was Hetty's room. Her own was directly opposite. On the girl's dressing-table, leaning against the broad, low mirror, stood the unframed photograph of a man. With a furtive glance over her shoulder, Sara crossed to the table and took up the picture in her gloved hand. For a long time she stood there gazing into the frank, good-looking face of Brandon Booth. She breathed fast; her hand shook; her eyes were strained as if by an inward suggestion of pain.

She shook her head slowly, as if in final renunciation of a secret hope or the banishment of an unwelcome desire, and resolutely replaced the photograph. Her lips were almost white as she turned away and re-entered the room beyond.
"He belongs to her," she said, unconsciously speaking aloud, "and he is like all men. She must not be unhappy."

Presently she entered the library. She had exchanged her tailor-made for a dainty house-gown. Hetty was still seated in the big lounging chair, before the snapping fire, apparently not having moved since she looked in on passing a quarter of an hour before. One of the girl's legs was curled up under her, the other swung loose; an elbow rested on the arm of the chair, and her cheek was in her hand.

Coming softly up from behind, Sara leaned over the back of the chair and put her hands under her friend's chin, tenderly, lovingly. Hetty started and shivered.
"Oh, Sara, how cold your hands are!"
She grasped them in her own and fondly stroked them, as if to restore warmth to the long, slim fingers which

"My dear Mr. Wrاندall," she interrupted quickly. "I credit you with the desire to be fair and just to me. You have tried to like me. You have even deceived yourself at times. I—but why these gentle recriminations? We merely prolong an unfortunate contest between antagonistic natures, with no hope of genuine peace being established. I do not regret that I am your daughter-in-law, nor do I believe that you would regret it if I had not been the daughter of Sebastian Gooch."

"Your father was as little impressed with my son as I was with his daughter," said Redmond Wrاندall drily. "I am forced to confess that he was the better judge. We had the better of the bargain."
"I believe you mean it, Mr. Wrاندall," she said, a note of gratitude in her voice. "Good-by, Mr. Carroll will see you tomorrow." She glanced quickly about the room. "I shall send for certain articles that are no longer required in conducting the business of Wrاندall & Co."

With a quaint little smile, she indicated the two photographs of herself. "By Jove, Sara," burst out Leslie abruptly. "I wish you'd let me have that Gipsy Mab picture. I've always been dotty over it, don't you know. Rippling study."

Her lip curled slightly.
"As a matter of fact," he explained conclusively, "Chal often said he'd leave it to me when he died. In a joking way, of course, but I'm sure he meant it."
"You may have it, Leslie," she said slowly. It is doubtful if he correctly interpreted the movement of her head as she uttered the words.

"Thanks," said he. "I'll hang it in my den, if you don't object."
"We shall expect Mr. Carroll tomorrow, Sara," said his father, with an air of finality. "Good-by. May I ask what plans you are making for the winter?"
"They are very indefinite."
"I say, Sara, didn't you get married?" asked Leslie, surveying the Gipsy Mab photograph with undisguised admiration as he held it at arm's length. "Ripping! This is the picture."
She paused near the door to stare at him for a moment, unutterable scorn in her eyes.

"I've had a notion you were pretty keen about Brandy Booth," he went on amiably.
"Do you want me to misrepresent the goods and say they are fine when they are not?" asked the new salesman.
"Yes," sternly answered the unscrupulous dealer. "Always remember that our assets are good! He-sh-sh-sh."

Man on His Way to "Get Even" With Enemy Had the Thing All Planned Out.

You'd have known he was a medical man by his looks and by the medicine case he carried, but the man who bumped into him on the street was too excited about something else.

"Here, sir, what are you doing?" exclaimed the doctor as he recovered from the collision.

"Going to lick a man!" was the reply.

"But wait. Don't you know it's 90 degrees in the sun?"

"I don't care a darn!"

"And that fighting will raise your temperature to 140?"

"What of it?"

"A temperature of 139 means sunstroke and death!"

"Are you a doctor?" asked the man.

"I am."

"Then you are way off your base. The man I'm going to lick works in an ice house, where the temperature is only 60 above, and oh, jeez, wax, I will make him holler!"

"But—"

"Oh, I brought along my overcoat so I shouldn't take cold doing it! Thanks, doc—I'm all right!"

A few years ago, after an unusually pleasant evening, John Thornton, the vaudeville comedian, found himself at 5 a. m. lounging against a wall in Central Park, New York. In a few minutes a policeman came along and asked:

"What are you doing here?"

"Just watching the animals," said Thornton; "nothing more."

"Nonsense," said the officer, "the zoo where the animals are is several blocks from here."

"Not my kind," said the actor, slowly walking away.

"I'm open for conviction," said one lady. She liked her regular soap and washing powder. She tried RUB-NO-MORE just to see. Now you ought to see how easily she keeps house dirt-free with this "workless" dirt remover.

RUB-NO-MORE WASHING POWDER is a sudless dirt remover for clothes. It cleans your dishes, sinks, toilets and cleans and sweetens your milk crocks. It kills germs. It does not need hot water.

Capes in Present and Coming Fashions

EVERYONE looks to the Grand Prix to foreshadow the styles for fall, and the event is rarely disappointing to those looking for ideas. At the recent meet no one had trouble in absorbing the fact that the cape has made a triumphal entry into the modes today, and is destined to be a feature in costumes for fall. There are capes long and short, separate and attached to jackets or coats, and in all sorts of materials. And there are capes for all ages, as may be gathered from the picture of the French woman so frankly posing in the illustration given here.

The choice in materials is immensely wide. Capes to be worn with suits are of the same material as the skirt. White serge, for present wear, is shown with vest and cape attached, and similar models are made of the various fashionable cotton fabrics in white or black and white.

But the separate cape which is to do duty with any sort of dress is usually made of satin or silk and in the majority of instances it is black. It is often cut much shorter in front than at the back, and finished with a wide cape-collor.

Already (very rich and very chic in appearance) black velvet capes have made their debut, not as a style prom-

Net Waist and Hat for August

The hat is of black and white satin stretched over a buckram frame with an indented crown. An equally good effect results from covering a plain frame with the satin and adding a band of buckram, also covered, as a collar around the crown. A trimming suited to the late summer season finishes the design. It consists of little bunches of small fruits—cherries, berries, tiny peaches—set in glossy green foliage.

A black and white skirt of wash fabric is worn with the waist, and a belt of satin ribbon, in black and white stripes, like the silk of which the hat is made. White canvas shoes and lisle thread or silk hose finish the details of the toilette.

Net waists, besides being cool, are easily and safely laundered. One can hardly choose a more useful garment, for, after the summer is gone, they are available for wear under bodices that open at the front, where a touch of white is needed next the face.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Handkerchiefs in Sets.

Some of the shops are selling colored handkerchiefs in sets. The idea, it seems, comes from Paris. There are seven handkerchiefs in a set. Sunday's handkerchief is white, Monday's shows blue embroidery, Saturday's gold, Tuesday's rose, and Friday's lavender.

In Making French Knots.

It is much more satisfactory to use coarse thread in making French knots because the cord or thread need not be wound so many times around the needle and, therefore, is not so apt to twist and knot in the wrong place. It is always better to use untwisted cord for French knots for the same reason. French knots used as filler or outline are very effective for bed linen, such as counterpanes and shams.

While some of the current styles may be a bit immodest, it will be a hard job to induce the majority of women to become unfashionable.

Did This Pleasant Little Conversation Take Place During or After the Honeymoon?

He threw down his paper.

"I wonder if the colonel really means to try it again?"

"What did you say, dear?"

"If you'd been listening you wouldn't ask me."

"If you had said anything worth hearing I'd be glad to listen."

"How do you know you would?"

"Try it."

He glares at her and wisely says nothing. She picks up the paper.

"Dear me," she says, "I wish they'd settle it."

"Settle what?"

"The length of next fall's skirts."

He snorts.

"Is that all you can find in the paper?"

"I guess it's a good deal more important than the stuff you find."

"Do you mean to compare a paltry skirt to the stupendous living issues of the hour?"

"Oh, go jump into the River of Doubt!"

"What do you know about the River of Doubt?"

"As much as anybody knows. Bah!"

"Bah yourself!"

Whereupon he rises angrily and goes out on the porch and calms himself with a pipe. Cleveland Plaindealer.

Avoiding the Commonplace.

It was a gray winter afternoon; in fact, the street lamps were being lighted—the time known as entre chien et loup, when colors are undistinguishable. The hurried customer rushed into the ready-made clothing establishment and explained to the obliging proprietor that he wished to hire a black suit to wear at a funeral on the morrow. The next morning the mourner brought back the suit with maledictions on his lips. "I hired this suit for a black one last night," he cried, "and when I got it into the daylight, blessed if it wasn't a blue one! And I told you I wanted it for a funeral, too!"

"Well, sir," said the philosophic and Semitic proprietor, "don't you know that there's nothing so ordinary at a funeral as black?"

NEW IDEA

Helped Wisconsin Couple.

It doesn't pay to stick too closely to old notions of things. New ideas often lead to better health, success and happiness.

A Wis. couple examined an idea new to them and stepped up several rounds on the health ladder. The husband writes:

"Several years ago we suffered from coffee drinking, were sleepless, nervous, sallow, weak and irritable. My wife and I both loved coffee and thought it was a bracer." (Delusion.)

"Finally, after years of suffering, we read of Postum and the harmfulness of coffee, and believing that to grow we should give some attention to new ideas, we decided to test Postum."

"When we made it right we liked it and were free of ills caused by coffee. Our friends noticed the change—fresher skin, sturdier nerves, better temper, etc."

"These changes were not sudden, but increased as we continued to drink and enjoy Postum, and we lost the desire for coffee."

"Many of our friends did not like Postum at first, because they did not make it right. But when they made Postum according to directions on pkg., they liked it better than coffee and were benefited by the change."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkg.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages. Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. Made in the cup with hot water—no boiling. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same.

Maybe It Happened.

A shabby-looking man and a thin little shaver of a boy were standing with their backs against a wall along the public way. The man had a shade over his eyes and a card hung in front of him—bearing the legend, "Blind and Deaf."

The boy had a smile on his face as he listened to the street organ over the way playing "Everybody's Doing It," and then started involuntarily to whistle the chorus.

The man turned savagely to him and hissed:

"Shut that warble off and slide that grin off your face, yer little monkey! D'yer want people ter think we're happy?"

New Use for Germs.

An army officer may have to quit the service because he carries deadly germs, to which he is himself immune. It might be a good idea to keep him and let him be captured by the enemy the next time we have a war.

We can't all be happy or even allowed to choose our own way of being unhappy.

An Ounce of Prevention

Most people who enjoy a frequent drink of beer or liquor fail to realize its weakening effect on the kidneys.

Kidney weakness sets up backache, headache, rheumatic pain, nervousness, and disorders of the urine and if neglected leads to dropsy, gravel, and Bright's disease.

In the early stages kidney weakness can be corrected. Doan's Kidney Pills tone and strengthen weak kidneys and are used with success all over the civilized world. There's no other kidney remedy so well recommended.

A Michigan Case

Peter Loucks, retired farmer, Leelanau St., Frankfort, Mich., says: "Hard work and exposure brought on backache and gravel and for months I was miserable. Morning, I was so lame and tired, I could hardly get up and I had to use an instrument to help me pass the kidney secretions. My back ached terribly and so did my head. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me as soon as I took them and six boxes cured me completely."
