Unselfish New Yorkers Give Their Blood Freely NEW YORK.—Those who recently watched young men and women and even children crowd into Dr. Abraham Zingher's office at Willard Parke hospital were convinced that unselfishness is commoner than most feeple believe. They were there to give their blood for the sake of sufferers they had never seen. These men and women and children were all cripples: They were well-now, but each had-a limp arm or a shortened leg resulting from an attack of infantile paralysis some time, perhaps many years ago.

Without hope of reward, except satisfaction that comes from all physicians' appeal for the life fluid of poliomyelitis patients. which has been discovered to benefit those just stricken down and still truggling against the terrible fever in the neute stages. One of the men from whom blood was taken had both a twisted leg and velocity, with resultant fogs, were handicaps to be overcome. The extent of the mill district, the great number of stacks in restricted areas, the imme quantity of smoke producing fuels consumed, the characteristics of the high volatile coal natural to the district, and the variety of boiler and metallurgical furnaces, were in part responsible for the dense smoke that used to cover the city like a pall, making it necessary to use artificial light in midday. avestigators of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, University of Pittsburgh, discovered that Pittsburgh's annual loss, due to smoke nul same, was at least $10,000,000. The agitation for smoke abatement crystallized into a great civic movement in which all the industries of the city were urged to join. On March 1, 1913, the city council passed several ordinances relating to the regulation of production and emission of smoke and enlarging the scape of the bureau of smoke regulation, organized some time before.
