PATRIOTISM.

What is patriotism? Is it a narrow affection for the spot where a man was born? Are the very clouds where we tread entitled to this ardent preference because they are greener? No, sir; this is not the character of the virtue, and it soars higher for its object. It is thus we obey the laws of society, because they are the laws of virtue. In their authority we see, not the array of force and terror, but the venerable image of our country's honor. Every good citizen makes that honor his own, and cherishes it not only as precious, but as sacred.—Fisher Ames.

PEACE MEDALS FOR INDIANS

Those Struck by Philadelphia Association in 1757 Are Now Treasured as Relics.

The first peace medals manufactured in America, for promoting friendly relations with the Indians, were struck in 1757 by a Philadelphia association, composed chiefly of the Society of friends. One of the first issued had on the obverse side the head of King George II, and on the reverse the sun, an Indian sitting at a campfire, and a white man offering him a pipe of peace. After the Revolution such medals always bore the head of the president in office at the time of its manufacture. One struck in 1792, bearing the profile of George Washington, was presented to Red Jacket, chief of the Iroquois and last of the Senecas.

A silver peace medal, of the Jefferson medallion type, found in an Indian grave on the banks of the Clearwater river, Idaho, in 1899, was one used during the famous Lewis and Clark expedition, from the mouth of the Mississippi to where the Columbia empties into the Pacific. Many such medals were given to Indians on the trip. The one found in Idaho is in the American Museum of Natural History. The Jefferson medal differed in design from that issued by Washington. It was made in bronze of three sizes. The smallest was also struck in silver. All sizes bore the same design. On the obverse side was a bust of Thomas Jefferson, and on the reverse clasped hands, pipe and battle ax crossed, and the legend, "Peace and Friendship."

"Really, I don't think the medical profession has done as much to relieve suffering as some others," said her husband.

"What, for instance?" asked the wife.

"Well, piano tuners."

DREAM ENDS

This Is No Age for Visions Such As the Huns Saw And Tried To Make Reality.

"So ends Germany's great adventure. The greatest dream of world-empire ever dreamed is shattered. The representatives of a nation that sought to rule the earth from Versailles assembled at Versailles to receive their doom.

The ruler who thought himself greater than Alexander or Caesar or Napoleon is summoned to the bar for trial and punishment, like any other criminal. The nobles who expected power and wealth and fame from the great enterprise are turned to confusion and anger at the bigging of antagonists they despised, and are held in dishonor in their own land. The people who boasted themselves a race of supermen are condemned to be hewers of wood and drawers of water for the civilization they assailed.

The mightiest war machine ever created is broken and shattered. The boundaries that were to be extended have shrunk. The colonies that were to increase until they encircled the earth are lost. Industry and commerce are swept away. Wealth is dissipated and sources of wealth are dried up. A nation's honor is soiled. The respect and admiration of mankind are forfeited.

Peaceful means Germany, with her talent and energy, might in time have made a real conquest of the world. But she would not wait and strive patiently and fairly. She sought to win quickly by brute force. And taking up the sword, she has perished by the sword. Possessing already 'her place in the sun,' she tried to keep the sun from other nations wherefore her place for a generation, possibly forever, is in the shadow."

The Song of the Fighting First.

Here we are, still fresh and ready, Eyes all bright and nerves all steady, With the fighting First Division— That the German army fears, Where's the line? By God, we'll break it!

Victory? With God we'll make it! We're the ragin', ravin', tearin' Rushin', crushin', cussin', sweatin' First Division Engineers.

We built the roads and dammed the rivers, Darned the Huns, and ate their livers, Soon we will be goin' home, amid a nation's cheers.

Who cares for our general's bows us; Knows the kickin', scratchin', fightin' Slashin', crushin', clawin', bitin' First Division Engineers.

Don't forget while singin' praises, Lots of us are kickin' daisies Where the Empire's rattle-snake his head no longer rears. In your history's revision Don't omit the First Division And the rampin', yellin', workin', Cheerin', shoutin', never-shirkin' First Division Engineers.

And when age our joints is chillin', Round a fire with thoughts a-millin', As each dryin' ember seems like life's declinin' years; There'll be lots of eyes a-lightin' 'Memberin' those days of fightin' With the ragin', ravin', tearin' Kickin', scratchin', fightin', clawin', Slashin', crushin', chewin', bitin', Rushin', crushin', cussin', swearin' First Division Engineers.

HE was a man of the open the open spaces of the great Northwest—in close touch with nature, large of heart and broad in mind.

SHE was a girl of the city—a creature of the narrowest social conventions who views the world from an entirely different angle.

Their paths cross and the exercise of mutual influence begins with extremely interesting results. Both are changed by their association and their angles of vision altered.

North of Fifty-Three the new story to be published in serial form in this paper, is a graphic and realistic portrayal of the wild, primitive life of the wilderness. It is a story of romance and adventure that is different from the ordinary.

MISTAKE WAGES FOR PROFITS

Grave Error That Is Made by Most People Who Are Working for a Salary.

When our wage-earners and salaried people begin to learn that savings are profits and that the process of accumulating savings is substantially the same as getting profits of a business, we shall be on the way to becoming a thrifty people.

But very few wage and salary earners know this.

Their mental process, to the very limited extent that their minds enter into the matter, is to regard the pay check as profits, which is, of course, a very fundamental mistake.

In the business of wage-earning the pay check is not a profit, but is the cash that comes from the counter of a store or through the receiving teller's window at a bank.

A wage-earner's pay check is the gross receipts, and his profits, if there be any, are found by deducting from these gross receipts whatever it costs to keep the wage-earner going.

In business it is well understood that there are just two ways to increase profits: either more money must come in over the counter, or else less must be paid out in keeping up the business. So with the wage-earner. If he fails to save he must fit himself for a better job or else lower his standard of living; there is no other way.—Carl Marshall in the Thrift Magazine.

Cheerfulness Requisite.

"Give me cheerful people," said the store manager. "I don't mean laughing, joking, funny people, but people who look on the bright side, who take a cheerful view. As between two men of equal intelligence and experience, but one sober, serious bearing, and the other cheerful, inclined to smile, I would take the cheerful man every time. He can sell 50 per cent more goods."

"He is just naturally polite because he feels that way; in fact he takes a hopeful, friendly view of everybody and everything. He thinks well of his own stock and shows it freely and displays it attractively because he is interested in it; and because he believes in it himself he quite naturally inspires confidence in the mind of the customer."

"A solemn-faced man, even a gloomy man, might do as a book-keeper; but give me cheerful men to sell goods."

Church Mourns Market Place

Old St. Paul's was a huge building. Its tower and spire rose to a height of 520 feet, and, after the Reformation, its vast nave became the rendezvous of all London that had any business or no business authority, a public thoroughfare through the transepts and across the church. Men tramped through, carrying baskets of meat or bread or coal, bundles, bags, and parcels of all kinds. Hucksters and peddlers not only walked through, but lingered on their way to sell their wares. Servants stood and sat about a certain pillar to be hired; scribes sat about another pillar, writing letters for those who required their services; clerics in quest of a curacy or a vicarage gathered at another pillar. And so it went on until it was all swept away in the great fire of 1696.—London Mail.

NO BAMBOOS

Material for Fishpoles Is a Minus Quantity in Market—What About Fishing?

Lovers of the gentle art of angling have been restive for some weeks because the season is so backward and fish have not been biting much. To find the best place to fish has always been a great question with the fisherman; that is, if the season was not too dry and he had been successful in securing the required angletoms before he really came to the point of deciding where he should go. Granted he has the worms and a likely place fixed in his mind, there's one more trouble that now looms on the horizon, namely, where is he going to get a pole. If he has one left over from last season he is lucky; but if not he may have to take to the "tall and uncut" and there select as the proverbial small boy does. The word has gone out to dealers that there is a shortage in fish poles, in fact there are none to be had, except in very limited quantities. And as to prices; wew! The old days when you could take your pick for a dime are only a memory; they'll cost five times that at wholesale, 'tis said. We asked a dealer what was the reason and his explanation was that the poles are not being imported because vessels preferred to carry freight which brings them a higher rate. If this is true, it's plain to be seen we must grow our own bamboo, for we just must have the fishpoles. Plantings of oriental timber bamboo in northern Florida and Louisiana are grown to a height of 25 feet and there is no longer any question about their producing in this country good canes comparable with those which they produce in China or Japan. A quick method of their propagation has been worked out so that it will now be possible to supply enough small plants to set out areas in the south from the Carolinas to California wherever there is sufficient moisture and the land is not too high priced to admit of their cultivation.

Bacon's Rebellion.

In 1678, on April 20, Bacon's rebellion began. The colonists of Virginia were being constantly harassed by the hostile Indian bands, who descended on their settlements to plunder and murder. The people asked Governor Berkeley to allow them to form a guard led by Nathaniel Bacon, a young painter, for the defense of their homes. Berkeley refused, calling the request a presumption on the part of the common people. In defiance of the governor's order, the volunteers set out under Bacon against the Indians. Bacon was declared a traitor, and ordered to be executed for his insubordination, but he fell ill of a fever and died during the expedition.

Orange Blossoms and Fruit.

Have you ever thought that there is a tree on which blossoms and fruit are seen at the same time? I hadn't, until the other day when some one described to me the joy of orange trees, in Florida, during the early spring. There hang the perfect golden balls of the fruit, while alongside are the waxy-white, almost painfully fragrant blossoms. Of course, the explanation lies in the fact that oranges require almost an entire year to mature. The blossoms which my friends saw on the Florida trees portend the perfect fruit of next year, or just about this same season.—Exchange.

HARD TO BEAT THIS RECORD

Hollander Practically Devoted His Life to Worship at Shrine of the Goddess Nicotine.

Mynheer Van Klaes, who flourished in Rotterdam, Holland, about fifty years ago, is surely entitled to the title of the "king of smokers." His den was a museum of nicotine relics containing specimens of every kind of tobacco smoked in the world and every kind of pipe through which the nations drew inspiration. Here he smoked incessantly—his life consumption was estimated at four tons of tobacco, or ten pounds every week of his 60 smoking years. He died at eighty-one, devoting his whole life to the burning of incense of Nicotina.

His funeral was in harmony with his life. By his express directions his coffin was lined with the wood of old cigar boxes. At his feet were placed a bladder of the finest Dutch golden leaf; by his sides were laid his chin-bowled pipe and a box of matches and steel, flint and tinder. In accordance with his will all the smokers of Rotterdam were invited to the funeral and instead of the old-fashioned mourning rings each was presented with ten pounds of good tobacco and two pipes bearing Van Klaes' arms. All the mourners during the funeral service smoked, and at the words "ashes to ashes, dust to dust" shook the ashes out of their pipes on the coffin lid.

DISCOURAGING.

"I want to do some shopping to-day, dear," said the fond wife; "that is, if the weather is favorable. What does the paper say?" At the other end of the table her hubby, consulting The Morning Wheeze, read aloud: "Rain, hail, snow, thunder, lightning and floods."

Her Bitter Experience

She could not imagine what was the matter with her baking.

Her pans were always perfectly clean. She used a famous brand of flour, good butter, fresh eggs—and yet her baking had a bitter taste.

Finally, her husband asked what kind of baking powder she used. When she told him what she was trying, he said:

"There's the whole trouble. If you read the label you will find it contains alum, and that's what leaves the peculiar taste."

Now she has gone back to ROYAL BAKING POWDER and her bitter experience is forgotten.

ROYAL Baking Powder. Absolutely Pure. Made from Cream of Tartar derived from grapes. Contains No Alum—Leaves No Bitter Taste.

There is some talk here about the state road being built through the village, instead of along the old Jackson-Manchester road; that is, between the forks of the road east of Napoleon and the corner at the Plains school house south of Norvell. However, we have heard nothing of this from the county road commissioners. Bids for work to be done in other sections of the county were opened Wednesday, but we would like to hear that there is at least a prospect of something being done east of Napoleon this spring.
