Marooned

A man marooned on a desert island will not get far without a boat; neither will he be much good to himself or anybody else.

A telephone company without sufficient income to meet expenses is like a man marooned. Without fair rates telephone material can not be bought and repairs cannot be made.

Unless you are fair with the telephone company, it cannot give you proper service. So the answer to the operation of the telephone is in your hands. You must be fair.
