HAS AMPLE SUPPLY OF WOOD

Berea College Owns Many Acres of Forest and Boasts It Never Cuts Sound Timber.

Berea College, at the foot of the Cumberland mountains, in Kentucky, has the unique distinction of owning two mountains, 4,000 acres of forest. Its own sawmill, but never cutting a sound tree, writes Marie Dickore in the American Forestry Magazine. This wood is used for the college, for power, for heat and in the many cozy fireplaces in the dormitories and the great open fireplace which delights every traveler who stops at Boone tavern.

The sawmill, as well as the 4,000 acres of forest reserve, provides not only ample practical experience for the students, but also actual labor for those students who work for their education. The sawmill is operated by steam, and like every other industry at Berea college, is run by students, who work at least two consecutive hours per day under the supervision of a superintendent of labor, who in turn is responsible to the dean of labor.

Students at Berea are given the opportunity to earn their expenses, and they may select the work, which is paid for at the regular rates according to the student's ability and efficiency. As every student in the college must work the minimum of two hours per day, suitable occupation must be provided by the dean of labor and in the forestry department the students are very happy patrolling the forest, marking the dead timber, hauling the fallen timber to the sawmill, cutting it there into the required lengths, and then hauling the logs to wherever needed on the campus. No sound timber is cut, as there is enough of the other to supply all needs.

UNEARTH SKELETON OF GIANT

Bones of Supposed Mound Builder Those of Man Eight or Nine Feet High.

Dr. W. J. Holland, curator of the Carnegie museum, Pittsburgh, and his assistant, Dr. Peterson, a few days ago opened up a mound of the ancient race that inhabited this section and secured the skeleton of a man who when in the flesh was between eight and nine feet in height, says a Greenburg ("Pa.") dispatch to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

This mound, which was originally about 100 feet long and more than 12 feet high, has been somewhat worn down by time. It is on the J. E. Scerist farm in South Huntington township. This farm has been in the Scerist family for more than a century.

The most interesting feature in the recent excavation was the mummified torso of the human body, which the experts figured was laid to rest at least 400 years ago. Portions of the bones dug up and the bones in the legs, Prof. Peterson declares, are those of a person between eight and nine feet in height. The scientist figures that this skeleton was the framework of a person of the prehistoric race that inhabited this section before the American Indians.

The torso and the portions of the big skeleton were shipped to the Carnegie museum. Drs. Holland and Peterson supervised the explorations on the Scerist mound with the greatest of care. The curators believe the man whose skeleton they secured belonged to the mound builder class.

Golf Ball Displayed Since

People who don't believe that golf balls have some sense of their own would stand small show just now in an argument with a player on the Romford links, who made a badly-sliced tee shot, which carried the ball across the roadway into the open upstairs window of a house.

When the golfer went to retrieve the ball he found it on the mat of the front door of the house, waiting for him like a good child. After entering the bedroom it had bounded out through the door and rolled down stairs to the mat.

The golfer says if it hadn't had sense it might have gone through a closed window, breaking the glass, and then stuck in the room, making all sorts of possible trouble for him. As it was, the people of the house were none the wiser for the trespass of the golf ball—London Mail.

England Turns to Spanish

A society craze for things Spanish seems to be imminent in England. Two Spanish plays are running in London. Spanish singers and dancers are in great demand. Many fashionable women are wearing the high Spanish comb and cut-silk tentative attempts at the mantilla, or mantilla effects.

All the new fashionable dances are said to show distinct leanings toward Spanish interpretation.

YES, THERE IS A WEAKER SEX

Personal of the Daily Papers Will Prove it to Anybody Who May Be in Doubt.

A New England professor recently raised quite a powwow over the question: "Is There a Weaker Sex?" If the professor is looking for information he will promptly say yes there is a weaker sex.

To arrive at this conclusion we have seen several cases which prove our point. We will mention just a few. If the professor delves into the matter with an analytical mind he will doubtless decide which sex is the weaker.

Mr. Amel W. Flukinger, a prominent attorney, appeared in court recently to defend his wife, whom he so severely scolded a storekeeper that he could not go to his office. This happened because he criticized the saleslady had done during the night before.

Mr. Terrence McNamara was dragged into the station house a total wreck.

Miss Bertha Kuhl came from Ann Arbor last Thursday to visit her mother.

Miss Sophie Dalka of Detroit was an unexpected guest of the Niles and Blodger families.

Father Clark is preparing to make a device made on the principle of a vacuum cleaner. It takes in a foot square of floor surface at a time and is able to remove all kinds of dirt.

Mr. Spug Hawkins, who claims to be a bushy-shouldered professor, has filed a suit for divorce, charging that his business has been ruined on account of the fact that his wife would not allow him to go to night clubs.

Donald Widmayer has recovered from his attack of sciatic fever and was able to spend New Year's day with relatives in Toledo.

Mr. Staford, Fisher and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boettcher, of New York, attended the masquerade ball.

Mr. McDonnell and myself dined with Higginson and Brooks at a Japanese restaurant in New York on Saturday to see his daughter, Miss Lydia, and visited Mrs. and Mrs. Fred Boettcher and other friends.

Mrs. Welch received a card from Mrs. Elmer Case at Chicago, saying

"I'm sorry I was too ill to come to the wedding, but I hope you will be happy."

C. M. Case has left New Jersey.

The diplomat, the man who with his chief's outwitted the Russian sang the simple woodland and its charms, and told his chief he was weary of raising a scornful laugh even to show one true feelings in such an open way. The soldier fighting with an open secret, a secret known in modern warfare, under the name of mechanism, finds pleasure in admiring the iris bloom on the cherry blossoms?

Sons Excluded:

Little Joe was visiting at grandpa's house. Usually he paid very little attention to his youngest auntie, and she was always afraid he would continually find her out. Finally she got him to pay attention to her, and he began on a new line of conversation. "My daddy says I can't take my mother's place," he said rather seriously. "You can't," she sympathized, and Joe noticed that note of sympathy in his voice.

His voice brightened. "But he didn't say anything about me not doing you and Aunt Grace," he added.

It was Robert's first day in school and he was having a good time running to the little girl that sat next to him, when suddenly he heard a noise and saw him on her knee. She had finished the lesson when she said to him:

"I always like to run when I travel."

"Do you? Then you can take me along in my front office if you like."

Robert's smile was full of glee.

He was so happy that he said:

"No, I like it."
