It is well drained and I cultivate and manure it good every year, but all I seem to be able to grow on it the last two or three years is weeds."

Now, there is only one reason for crop failures of this kind, and that is: the soil is sour. No matter how carefully land may be tilled and manured-no matter how well a farm is drained—if the soil is acid (sour) it loses its fertility or cropping power. So long as soil is in this condition you are wasting money, time and labor trying to cultivate it, for good crops cannot be grown on acid soil. The remedy is to use lime. We have a car of
