IRON CREEK

Antoriginal poem written and read by Will Coghian of Manchester Township, at the Iron Crock School Reunion, Aug. 2nd.

Look around you here and find all the beauty shown mankind; Here the wind's wood-templed halls moves in music and enthralls While the sunset's gilded crown from the hillsides looking down

Here the lake's wild, mystic mood lures the lovers from the wood, While the waves that move a-shore sing their song; so nevermo Shall you meet an hour like this, when the handclasp and the kiss Here our fathers' gnarled hands shaped a glory that outstands Any action by the sword, the gifted pen or noble word, A home they builded and this page is greater by the heritage Of the people we have known as God's children and our own.

Thirteen cars have been delivered under this order, the fuel administration was informed, three cars going to the Traction company in accordance with their orgental order and the remainder being held by the coal company.

The order to seize these three cars in Muskegon was the first move made by the state fuel administration to break up profiteering in fuel throughtout the state.

Following receipt of numerous complaints from county fuel administration officials began compilation of a report of all the coal coming into the state. The figures will be turned over to Clyde B. Aithisen, who merpresents the interstate commerce commission in the matter of enforcements.

NEW FALL FROCKS

Have Arrived and Are Ready For You

Careful women who give attention to their attire delight in being among the first to wear the season's new apparel. They will want to inspect our new Fall showings and make their selections in order to be prepared for the first cool days with appropriate street frocks.

Just arrived are many frocks of tricotine, serge, and poiret twill. Long side panel effects are especially noticeable and the styles are unusually attractive. They are priced from $25.00 up.

Beach Togs Are Gay But Simple

A trip to the seashore discloses This season they so fearless more and more color, more and more charm, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times. In every dress accessory for a seaside day there is a freedom of individuality which marks this present season as, we might say, an individual season. Clothes stand out as they never before have done and in the bright light of the summer sun their colors radiate this newly acquired temerity.

Not only on the beach, in bathing dress, is the girl of today unusually resplendent while at the seashore. In all of the gowns and frocks she chooses to wear during the other hours of the day and evening she continually show her new taste for a touch of the bizarre, if not a great deal of flashing color, and her desire to have clothes of artistic merit. The result is that since she has adopted this newer idealthere appears every day some beau tiful costume that in summer seasons gone by we would hardly have had pearance of the dress. In many the privilege of seeing. It is astonish ing how really picturesque the summer girls are, added to the fact that they are as pretty as ever. Sometimes they used to be pretty without an assumption of being artistic

One of the interesting points of the eason's seaside dressing, and one that strikes you before you have time to draw your breath, is the general harmony achieved by each collection of hems galore. For many of these new materials and colors that makes a dresses chiffon and georgette crepe costume. The hat, in almost every have been used, so that with all the ings are happily combined with other parts of the attire, and little things, such as bag, gloves, scarf, girdle, etc.,

selves and notable as parts of a perfect whole Shore Dresses Are Different. The shore dresses differ pointedly from those chosen for wear at other summer reserts, in that women are realizing the necessity of keeping their seaside clothes in the class of the "un-Seldom does one see a mussable. hedraggled-locking woman. The one-piece suits are se lected unfallingly by the girls who vish to swim and enjoy the surf. They are sulted to the rurpose better than any others and are especially charming as adornments for the human form Besides these so-called utility suits here are to be seen upon the be all sorts of the fancier varieties There are lovely taffeta ones covered with frills and rufflings of their own material. And they do not stop at the conventional and accepted black, but dash about through all the range of colorings. A woman is permitted to wear any color that happens to please her fancy and suit her com plexton.

Cretonne and wood-blocked linen are seen among the newer bathing frocks, and from the number of them being worn one must infer that they too, are filling the bill with due accord. They do a great deal toward enlivening the beach scene, for they are pic turesque in the extreme. And they are becoming, too, as the number of them will prove beyond the shadow of doubt. You will not find the American woman of foday wearing anything which is unbecoming. That is he first consideration, and when you see as many of one sort of dress as you do of the patterned linens and tonnes, then you know full well that she has found something that adds to her natural beauty.

'At the seashore places there are parasols made of a mass of silk petals There was one of white chiffon, em broidered in bunches of flowers done in different bright colors of wool. There was another in taffeta, with series of little plaited frills covering its surface. Still another had a rim of ragged ostrich flues about its edge and another one had this same sort of edging done with ends of narrow ribbons in three pastel shades. There was a black parasol with a white shirred chiffon lining. There was a white parasol made of thick taffeta and it had a ruffled black chiffon lining. The makers do all sorts of things with their parasols, and in every instance the sunshade is a means of car ving out the design established by the lines, the coloring and the general ap vou will find that the dress itself is plain and unadorned, but the paraso attempts to be, and succeeds in being a trimming for the whole costume.

The flowing, draped and graceful dresses are the order of the day at the seaside resorts. The very newest of them have skirts that are long, ex tremely circular in their cut, with overskirts and drapings and uneven scheme of the dress. Shoes and stock | provided and with the ample lines and drapings, they become most beautiful to look upon. One of them was done in white. It had the low waistline which has been so popularly accepted. and then it had an overskirt that was circular in its cut though gathered and made very full. This was and plain across the back and in the front it opened over another layer o an underskirt. The dress was bound with white chiffon and corded white and there was no trimming any where about it-just full sleeves and a very full bodice. Worn with this was a black openwork hat, spreading miraculously, their clothes seem to live of brim and picturesque of shape. It chination of black spray, with their original character white in the cleverest sort of manner, kept intact and their designs held in and as a costume, succeeded in being violable.

Bathing suits are really inspiring, summer.

Draped and Flowing Dresses There are draped and flowing silk | The plaited and plain-skirts of silk

They are colorful in the extreme, cut with many women for day wear, leaving utmost simplicity, and have been so perfectly-designed and fitted to all types of figures that they have created a vogue for this type of dress that it is hard to equal. The knitted outing dress has increased its popularity be cause it has been so well developed. There are knitted skirts and knitted sweaters and knitted coats and knitted blouses. Removal of Restrictions Necessary Dun ing the War Has Shown World's Faith in Dominion's Future

For a period during the late war, and for a while after its close, there was put into operation by the Canadian government legislation restricting cer-tain classes and people of the countries which were not lined up with the allied nations from being admitted to Canada. This was quite necessary, and the reasons for it will be so apparent that they need not be given. However, the time came, in the early summer of this year, when it was deemed possible to remove some of these restrictions. It was found that there were many who came under their ruling that were of a class that Canada needed and who The restrictions, doubtless, were drastic, but were need-ful. The news of their removal, sent broadcast, has met with such a response as to give ample evidence that they had not killed interest in Canada, and that faith in the Dominion as a country where a new existence, happy and fruitful, was as complete as ever. As has been stated by one writer dealing with this subject, "the opening of the doors a little wider has but disclosed the dammed-up state of the stream, which, given freer release, is pouring in fuller force over the Do-

As pointed out by the writer previously quoted, "Canada has successfully its pressed on those countries from which she draws her people that her prime and crying need is for those who will go on land, and of those entering the country the bulk is composed of agriculturists. OFF FOR VIRGINIA SYNOPSIS.-To the Kentucky

SYNOPSIS.—To the Kentucky wilderness outpost commanded by Jerone Sanders, in the time immediately preceding the Revolution comes a white boy fleeing from a tribe of Shawnees by whom he had been captured and adopted as a son of the hief Kahtoo. He is given shelter and attracts the favorable attention of Dave Yandell, a leader shelter and attracts the favorable attention of Dave Yandell, a leader among the settlers. The boy warns of the coming of a Shawnee war party. The fort is atta-ked, and only saved by the timely appearance of a party of Virginians. The leader of these is fatally wounded, but in his dying moments recognizes the fugitive youth as his son. At Red Oaks, plantation on the James river, Virginia. Colonel Dale's home, the boy appears with a message for the colonel, who after reading it introduces the bearer to his daughter Barbara as her cousin Erskine Dale. Erskine meets two other cousins, Harry Dale and Hugh Willoughby, Yandell visits Red Oaks. At the county fair at Williamsburg Erskine meets a youth, Dane Grey, and there at once arises a bitter antagonism between them. Grey, in liquor, insults Erskine, and the latter, for the moment all Indian, draws his knife. Yandell disarms him. Ashamed, Erskine leaves Red Oaks that night to creturn to the him. Ashamed, Erskine leaves Red him. Ashamed, Erskine leaves Red Oaks that night, to return to the wilderness. Yandell, with Harry and Hugh, who have been permitted to visit the Sanders fort, overtake him. At the plantation the boy had left a note in which he gave the property, which is his as the son of Colonel Dale's older brether, to Barbara. The party is the son of Colonel Dale's older brother, to Barbara. The party is met by three Shawness, who bring news to Erskine (whose Indian name is White Arrow) that his foster father, Kahtoo, is dying and desires him to come to the tribe and become its chief. After a brief visit to the fort Erskine goes to the tribe. He finds there a white woman and her halfbreed daughter, Early Morn, and saves the woman from death. He tells Kahtoo, he is with the Americans against the British. An enemy, Crooked Lightning, overhears him, Kahtoo sends Erskine to a council where British envoys meet Indian chiefs. Dane Grey is there, and the bitter feeling is intensified. Crooked Lightning denounces Erskine as a traitor and friend of the americans. The youth escapes death by flight. Reaching his tribe, Erskine finds his enemies have the upper hand. He is held as a prisoner, waiting only for the arrival of Crooked Lightning, to be burned at the stake.

asked, weakly. "My God! It's White Arrow!"

CHAPTER X

Straightway the lad sensed a curious change in the attitude of the garrison. The old warmth was absent. The atmosphere was charged with suspicion, hostility. Old Jerome was surly, his unchanged. The predominant note was curiosity, and they started to ply him with questions, but Dave took him to a cabin, and Mother Sanders brought

All tried to make amends straight for the injustice they had done him, but the boy's heart remained sore that their trust was so little. Then when they gathered all settlers within and Indians; and With You Against the fort and made all preparations and no Indians came, many seemed again to get distrustful and the lad was not happy. The winter was long and hard A blizzard had driven the game west and south and the garrison was hard put to it for food. Every day that the nunters went forth the boy was among them and he did far more than his share in the killing of game. But when winter was breaking, more news came in of the war. The flag that had been fashioned of a soldier's white shirt, an old blue army coat, and a red petticoa was now the Stars and Stripes of the American cause.
