TOO PRONE TO EXAGGERATE. Many Figures of Speech Employed in Ordinary Conversation Are Ridiculous When Analyzed.

A Judge in the courts the other day objected to a witness who was prone to use exaggeration and empty figures of speech. The judge remarked that it was absurd to say that "the accused was beside himself with rage" and that "he flew at the other man" and "he wanted two people and he hadn't got wings."

When you come to think of it it is absurd to say that "the accused was beside himself with rage" and that "he flew at the other man" and "he wanted two people and he hadn't got wings."

ROOF ADJUSTED TO WEATHER. Comparatively Easy to Regulate Temperature of House Constructed of Blocks of Ice.

Changing the thickness of the roof may not seem like a particularly handy way to keep the temperature of the house uniform, but one who would think of doing it in this way in this country, but in the Arctic "blocks of ice" are the only thing Mr. Wilhelm Steffanson, his book, "The Friendly Arctic," just how the Eskimo does it.

Mr. Steffanson, the snow block was made by packing ice in a wooden frame. The ice was cut into blocks 50 degrees below zero, each block 18 inches long and 12 inches wide. The blocks were packed together to form a roof. The ice melted during the day, but refroze at night, thus keeping the temperature constant.

A notable feature of Mr. Long's letter discovery is the ball-nose construction of pure natural tone given out by the vibration of staccatos on being gently struck. In one corner the colors of the staccatos ranged from yellow to red and grayish blue, suggesting iron and lead impregnation, and some were of the palest white.

Another feature was a series of staccatos, when the walls reverberated to the beat of the explorer's heart, producing the effect of a huge staccato.

The vertical extent of the cavern from the entrance to the deepest point reached was about 200 feet and the floor was about 100 feet from the entrance. The walls were of a pale yellow color and the floor was of a pale blue color.

FREE GRANDSTAND PLEASES VISITOR

Natural Amphitheater at Washburn Fair Race Track Brings Out 'Letter of Appreciation.'

The Washburn County Fair society was very pleased to receive a letter from a prominent man of the state, who had visited the fair, which runs as follows:

"This is to tell you I never before enjoyed a fair as I did yesterday (Saturday). The exhibits were good and generous, but above all the people enjoyed standing or sitting in their automobiles on these hills and watching the progress of the races on your race track. Virtually a free grandstand and large enough to hold everybody."

"I dare say no other fair in the state can boast of such a natural grandstand and one so large and grand. This one feature is going to be the making of your fair and put it in a class above all others. The people will gladly pay entrance to your grounds for the privilege of that free grandstand with all the rest of the fair and the exhibits thereof."

"Nothing was lacking yesterday and the people were well pleased to see a common man in these days had not even a vote to say nothing of a seat in parliament."

"Why They Got Nowhere."

A story that larks back to the city was covered by a group of mountain volunteers and their captain, Mr. J. H. Palmer of Santa Monica, Cal., who was in the city to see the fair.

The hours passed pleasantly with recitations and reminiscences. Host and hostess were presented with a beautiful electric reading lamp which they expect to enjoy during the winter months.

COMMONS ONLY IN NAME ANNIVERSARY IS CELEBRATED

Delegates to Early English National Assembly Held Without Exception to Proprietary Class.

As early as 1251 in England, knights were called from the shires to the national assembly to testify to the taxable capacity of their districts. Two from each shire were chosen by the knights and landowners.

One of those happy occasions occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Lowry Monday (Sept. 25th) when they celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary with their 15th anniversary.

The home was decorated with lavender and gold, and the decorations were in those colors, with a beautiful electric reading lamp.
