WOOD FOR OUR NECESSITIES. Wood is used almost entirely for necessities of our civilization, says Russell Watson in the Detroit News, barely five per cent being for luxuries. Look around you. The paper you are reading from is made from a spruce tree, the chair you are sit-ting in is probably from an oak; you will ride to town in an automobile, will ride to town in an automobile, perhaps—the spokes and much of the frame are of wood. If you travel on a train, understand that the cross ties that the rails lie on are of wood. The railroads of the United States use each year about 125,000,000 The railroads of the United States use each year about 125,000,000 cross ties. The telephone and telegraph poles are of wood. About 100,000,000 cords of wood are used each year for fuel. In fact two-thirds of the people of North America use wood for fuel. About 4,000,000,000 board feet of lumber are used in mining our coal supplies. Each 40 tons of coal mined means the use of a good sized tree. good sized tree.

HIGH PRICES FOR TAPESTRY

Masterpicces Eagerly Snapped Up by Dealers and Connoisseurs at Recent New York Sale

A late Gothic Arras tapestry depicting the "Banquet of Abraham's Wife, Sarah," was sold for $6,300 at the American Art Galleries the oth er day. It was one of a notable group of tapestries which was sold at the third session of a sale to liquidate the interest of the late Mme. Anna Keller in the firm of Keller & Funaro. The session's total amounted to $136,620.

The Arras tapestry was purchased by William Baumgarten. It was from he collection of Baron de Courreval. of France, and is a richly designed specimen, with numerous figures clear ly defined about a banquet table. A Flemish Sixteenth century Renaissance tapestry, representing "Henry II Hunt-ing," brought $4,800. J. Fry, who also acquired a Brussels Sixteenth century Renaissance tapestry signed with the monogram of Martin Reymboutes, fa mous Belgian weaver, for $3,200, was the buyer.

A brilliant-Louis XV furniture suite consisting of a large settee and six armchairs with carved and gilded frames covered with floral aubusson tapestry on which were medallions of children after Boucher and animals after Oudray, illustrating La Fontaine's fables, was purchased by W. W. Seaman, as agent, for $5,000. A Brussels Sixteenth century Renaissance tapestry, depicting "The Triumph of Alexander at the Battle of Issus" and the Italian Renaissance specimen of a century later, entitled "The Triumph of Caesar," were acquired by O. Bernet, agent, for $4,700 and $3,300 respectively.—New York Times.

TO RESTORE WEBSTER HOME

Site May Be Purchased and Maintained as Memorial to the Eminent Lexicographer.

Plans are now afoot in West Hartford, Conn., for the restoration of the old farmhouse, fast falling into decay, where Noah Webster was born 165 years ago. Repairs already have been commenced by the present owner H. A. Hamilton, and the task will be carried to completion at his own expense. It is his hope that public interest may be aroused sufficiently to bring about the purchase of the site and its maintenance as a memorial to the eminent lexicographer.

The Webster house is of two stories and a lean-to. There is a long woodshed at the back. It stands upon a little ridge, and looks down from this eminence upon the city of Hartford. Until he was fourteen Noah Webster worked on this farm with his father and brothers. He was determined to go to college, and against the wishes of his father was admitted to Yale in 1774.

His first venture was "Webster's Spelling Book." It enjoyed a tremendous vogue and pupils of the little red schoolhouse studied it almost universally. In 1806 he sat down to comile his dictionary, and at the time of his death still was engaged in the task of keeping his edition in step with the progress and change of the English language.
