Mrs. Harding, however, refusing to desert the post, was seated by the bedside, reading to her husband, when at 7:10 o'clock the President suddenly collapsed. His breathing, which had been quick ever since the illness overtook him, suddenly became spasmodic.

Mrs. Harding—had no warning that the President was in danger. They, like the newspaper men, had been assured that a fatal termination of the President's illness was a thing not to be expected, in view of his apparent improvement—the evident lessening of serious symptoms—in the

Warren Gamaliel Harding

Warren Gamaliel Harding, twentyninth president of the United States, was born November 2, 1865, on his grandfather's farm just outside the village of Blooming Grove, in Morrow county, Ohio. He was descended from two pioneer American families, hardy Holland Dutch on the one side and liberty-loving Scotch on the other. His father, Dr. George T. Harding, is still a practicing physician in Marion, O., despite his advanced age of seventy-nine years. His mother was Phoebe Elisabeth Dickerson Harding.

Mr. Harding was a self-made man in the best sense, of the phrase. He worked on his candfather's farm and was so successful that in the election of November 4 he received 404 electoral votes to 127 for James M. Cox, the Democratic nominee. He was inadjuvated March 4, 1921, with a degree of simplicity in the ceremonies that pleased the American people.
Classed, when in the senate, as a conservative, President Harding did not depart markedly from conservative lines when in the White House.
Chough his supporters always said he country warranted and as conditions permitted. He, like President Roosethough his supporters always said he country warranted and as conditions permitted. He, like President Roosehelpmate, both in Ohio and in Washlington. In the national capital Mrs.
Harding quickly made herself loved by all with whom she came in contact, to look around. We found carpenters busy erecting a stadium which will accommodate several thousand people when completed, provided a hall game is on. As Ann Arbor set the pace for out-of-door commencement exercises, it is likely that the stadium will be used by the college when the weather is favorable. Two large new brick buildings are in course of construction and in structural appearance they will be a credit-the state is making liberal provision for the college and it is evident that farmers throughout the state are taking more interest in the institution sending their sons and daughters there to be educated, or for a short course in some special line. Being Saturday afternoon, we did not attempt to meet any of the instructors, but wandered here and there, yet every moment was a pleasure, for we could see that provision is made for systematic operation. Even the trees, shrubs and flowering plants are marked and one can't help but stumble upon many

A plan is now on foct to reconstruct the northern sections. For the time being only about seven million dellars can be devoted to work that will put in order a section 100 miles in length. The reconstruction is in the hands of American engineers.—
