IS NEW DIET A WAY OF GREATER HEALTH

If Michigan consumption of bread is a national phenomenon, it is also a health hazard.

The health vogue has spread at an amazing rate throughout the state and is now being discussed by prominent officials, formerly regarded as a weak point and a sign of weakness. It is not a new diet, it is a new way of eating, it is a new way of living.

Here is the story which begins in Washington, D. C.

When Dr. William Dean Howells, the famous novelist, died in 1920, the cause of his death was attributed to a heart ailment.

It was not until 1924 that the American Red Cross in Washington some years ago, led by Dr. E. C. Kirk, began a study of the diet of the "white man" and the diet of the "Negro."

The products are all right in part of a diversified diet, but a steady fare of them results in chronic disease characterized by acid, indigestion, constipation, nervousness and nervous symptoms.

Dr. DeKline knows he could persuade by educational methods the food eaters to abandon their diet, so upon the recommendation of Dr. Joseph Goldberger, he chose "bread" as a supplementary food.

Health: The American Red Cross purchased breads "just as they are" by the ton, and distributed it free to low-income bread eaters in the so-called bread belt.

It is now known that the breads were not so good as they were reported to be. In 1944 when Governor Kelly was chosen a new commissioner for the department of health, he invited Dr. DeKline, a nutritionist, to come to Michigan to study the bread problem.

Then came World War II, and the astonishing discovery that approximately one-third of all the young men called up for the draft in the United States were unfit for military service, many of which was the result of faulty nutrition.

All of this in a country where a government had paid farmers not to produce corn, wheat and had even killed pigs.

Underachievement in a land that had resorted to an economy of scarcity was obviously an indictment not to be easily set aside.

It was the advent of the "basic seven" program of modern nutrition, blessed by the federal government, enthusiastically pushed by extension divisions of educational institutions like Michigan State College and generally acknowledged by the medical profession.

Miss Eleanor Ford of South Lyons was home for the week and Ed Dean of Durand visited Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Dean last week.

The Berea Sunday School class had a party at the hall on Friday evening. Pot luck supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Harris and daughters attended the wedding of Mrs. Harris' brother, Alvin Wilkner, at Berkeley last Wednesday. Mr. Wilkner married Miss Violet Dundas of Berkeley.

MANCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL VENTURE

Girl Scout News: Four Girl Scouts, Mary Jean Engel, Patty Kenner, Mary Ann Smith and Jean Tink, school and served at the meeting of the Ladies Federation of Women's Clubs of Washington County at Manchester. Russian Break With Japs May Speed War's End

Chinese Ambassador's Wife Says Her People Are Optimistic.
By Pauline Frederick
When the code translator of the Chinese embassy in Washington brought Madame Wei Tao-Ming, wife of the ambassador, the first word that Russia had ended its neutrality pact with Japan.

"For years we pursued the hope that the whole world would one day understand the aggression of Japan," she told me that same afternoon in the tea-wood furnished drawing room of the embassy at historic Twin Oaks. "Now that day is here."

"And what does it really mean?" I asked. "Victory may come quicker," she said with spirit. "The Chinese people are very happy today."

"Madame Wei had a queer cause for optimism. At eight o'clock that morning she and the ambassador had heard of the fall of the Kolsko island in Tokyo.

It was hard to believe that this diminutive woman in her black and white dress with a jade and diamond clip at her throat, presiding over a dainty tea table, was at the age of 55, carrying bombs and dynamite in suitcases for the Chinese revolution from Tientsin to Peking.

Madame Wei has always been what the term "revolutionary" means when her feet were bound in the Chinese fashion, she removed the bandages. She drank tea with sugar and cream in it from a cup with a handle instead of plain, old-fashioned little bowl.

"The night before the treaty was to be signed we discovered his hideout in a suburb of Paris and decided to call on him. When he wouldn't see us we decided to wait outside the house anyway."

From a San Francisco Fog: Walter Winchel
Dear From a San Francisco Fog: Walter Winchel, former N. Y. Times correspondent in Moscow and elsewhere, joined our table the other noon to talk shop. "We were depressed," he told Mr. Duranti, over our sour look.

"Nobody," we added, "seems to know anything about it, although Ivan Paul of the San Francisco Examiner (who motored us to the place) was witness to the fact."

"That's all right," said the veteran correspondent, "you can't get them all, you know."

CURRENCY IN CIRCULATION AN INFLATION DANGER

TOO MUCH CURRENCY IN circulation can be and usually is a major factor in the birth of inflation. In World War I our currency attained a high point in 1918, of less than 1 billion dollars. Today it stands at over 25 billion, and is steadily and rapidly increasing. In 1918 there was sufficient money in circulation to provide each of 100 million people with a bit under $50. Today if all our currency, and currency does not mean wealth, was divided equally between 130 million people each would have $192. Such a difference would not seem to be dangerous, but practical economists realize it is very dangerous. It is a danger that is growing at the rate of about one-half billion a month. It is largely a result of the purchase of government war bonds by the banks. If the people would buy bonds out of their savings, and keep the bonds, their savings would not be used to buy the collateral against which to issue bank note currency. It is a question of whether the banks buy bonds with the savings they have on deposit, the safer way is for the people to buy.

HOW AMERICA LOOKS AT PROSPERITY

DURING 1933-34 and '35 JONES had an average earning of $10 a week. He lived on that. During 1942-43 and '44 Jones' earnings increased to $40 a week. In the same time living costs increased possibly by one third. Did Jones, or whatever name he may have, have any difference? The chances are that he did not. He has enjoyed, and will continue to enjoy, prosperity while it lasts. When the war is over and with peace comes an end to the flush times of war, as may be the case, Jones will be looking for a government handout with a seat attached to the handout. Such improvidence creates its own difficulties, but we, as a people, have demonstrated to Jones that he need not think of the future, that the government will provide.

YOU HAVE KNOWN AND helped the imprudent man or family who had trusted in the Lord to provide, and you have been God's messenger. You have continued to help until your own resources dwindled to a point where you could not go farther. So long as you helped you were their hero, a benevolent friend. When you quit you became to them all that was vile and unworthy. Uncle Sam has played the part of God's messenger to the nations and peoples of Europe. He rescued them when their own improvidence left them stranded. The day will come before long when his lack of resources will compel him to quit. Then he will again be, as he was following World War I, an unscrupulous villain.

REPRESENTATIVE PATMAN REPRESENTATIVE PATMAN of Texas said in a speech in congress that the housewives of America unanimously endorsed the action of OPA in cancelling the red and blue stamps the housewives had saved. The representative said that rather than endorsing the action of OPA, the fact that they had been assured those points would be good for the duration. Shortly after Representative Patman made that speech I, as a lone male, accidentally came into a woman's party in my home town. The one topic of conversation on the part of the some 20 ladies present was the incredible action of OPA. It was unanimously condemned. No one of them would ever again believe any promise the government might make. All would use their ration points as fast as they became good, regardless of family needs. Could it be possible Representative Patman's statement may have been a bit exaggerated? Were the 20 women I heard the only dissenters in the United States?

MARY: "Jim, didn't you say you wanted to ask the Judge something about grain, the next time you saw him?"
JIM: "That's right, I did, Mary. Is it true, Judge, that distillers recover part of the grain they use in making war-alcohol?"
OLD JUDGE: "That's absolutely true, Jim. Wherever the government has permitted distillers to purchase the equipment necessary to reprocess the used grain, at least 50% of the feed value (25% by weight) of the whole grain is recovered. It comes back to farmers like yours in the form of premium-quality livestock feed... rich in vitamins B1 and B2."
JIM: "Is the same thing true when distillers are permitted to make whiskey, Judge?"
OLD JUDGE: "Yes, every bit as true, Jim."

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

FOREWORD
Major Victor Joppolo, U. S. A., was a good man. You will see that. It is the whole reason why I want you to know his name.

He was the Anglo officer of a small Italian town called Adano. He was more or less the American after our invasion.

Adano, on your own, stood for Allied Military Government, Occupied Territory. The authorities decided, shortly after the beginning of this story, that the word Adano was an ugly German name, and they changed it to the Italian name, which was, of course, Adano.

There were probably not any really bad men in Adano, but there were some who were not so good. Some were taken over, and in fact the American soldiers turned out to be just those who were not so good. Some were taken over, and in fact the American soldiers turned out to be just those who were not so good.

That is why I think it is important for you to know about Major Joppolo. He was a good man, though not in the usual sense of the word. He was a good man, though not in the usual sense of the word.

America is the international country. Major Joppolo was an Italian-American going to work in Italy. Our army has been in Italy since the beginning of the war, and it is now in Italy since the beginning of the war.

CHAPTER I
Invasion had come to the town of Adano.

An American corporal ran tautly along the dirt Via Fieschi and the corner he threw himself down. He made certain arrangements with his light machine gun and then turned and beckoned to his friends to come forward.

In the Via Calabria, in another part of town, a party of three crept forward like cats. An explosion, loud and distant, came from the north but apparently inside the town, and the three fell flat with a splash of dust. They waited on their bellies to see what would happen.

An entire platoon dashed from grave to grave in the Capucin Cemetery high on the hill overlooking the town. The entire platoon was alerted. They were out of touch with their unit. They did not know the situation. They were near their objective, which was the rocky crest of the hill, but they were not to find out what was going on in the town before they moved on.

All through the town of Adano, Americans were like this. They were not getting much resistance, but it was their first day of invasion, and they were tired in their muscles.

But at one of the sulphur leading jetties at the pier a Major with a brief case under his arm stopped. He had been from the sliding gateway of LCI No. 578, and he came to be who by whom.

"Borh," he said to the sergeant who followed him onto the jetty, "this is like coming home, now after I have dreamed this." And he bent over and touched the palm of his hand to the jetty, then dusted his palm off on his woolen pants.

"This man was Major Victor Joppolo, who had been named senior civil affairs officer of the town of Adano, representing Amsof. He was a man of medium height, with the dark skin of his parents, who were Italians from near Florence. He had a mustache. His face was round and his cheeks seemed cheerful but his eyes were intense and serious. He was about thirty-five.

The sergeant with him was Leonard Borh, an M.P., who was to be in charge of matters of security in Adano. He was to help weed out the bad Italians and make use of the good ones. Borh had volunteered to be the first to go into the town with the Major. Borh had no fear; he cared about nothing. He was of Hungarian parentage and he had lived many places—in Budapest, where he had been pre-medical studies, in Rome, where he had been a correspondent for Peter Lloyd, in Vienna, where he had worked in a travel agency, in Marseille, where he had been secretary to a rich exporter, in London, where he had been a reporter for the Herald, and in San Francisco, where he had sold radios. Still he was less than thirty. He was an American citizen and an enlisted man by choice. To him the whole war was a cruel joke and he considered his job in the war to be more people take through the war.

They came in time to the town's main square, which was called Piazza Progresso. And on that square they saw the building they were looking for.

There was a clock tower on the left hand front corner. On top of the tower there was a metal frame which must have been designed to hold a bell. It was baroque and looked very old. But there was no bell.

On the side of the clock tower big white letters said: "Il popolo italiano ha creato col suo sangue l'impero, lo fecondato col suo lavoro e difenderlo contro chiunque osasse armarsi."

The Major pointed and said: "See! Borh, ever after our invasion says: 'The Italian people built the Empire with their blood, will defend it against anyone with their arms.'"

"That's the date of Mussolini's march on Rome, in 1922," Borh said. "It is the day when Mussolini thought he began to be a big shot." Borh was very good at memory.

They started walking. The Major said: "I have lost all count. So what is today?"

"I can't tell," Borh said. "We will call it the Via di July Ten."

So you're remaining the streets already. Next you'll be raising monuments. Major Joppolo, first to an unknown soldier, then to yourself. I don't trust you men who are so sentimental.

SNAPPY FACTS
about RUBBER
It is difficult to detect the ordinary "low level" in the present-day world. The Office of Defense Transportation recommends an effective cure for slouching: (1) Make sure your eyes have been examined by a doctor. (2) Before sitting at a desk, stand up and stretch your back. (3) Before sitting at a desk, stand up and stretch your back.

EVERY crocheted fan wants to make at least one hairloom cloth. This medallion is ideal—suitable for either large or small pieces.

The pinwheel medallion is quickly memorized. Inexpensive in string; joins beautifully for overall effect. Pattern 7008 has directions, stitches.

Wounded G.I. Was Going Back to Settle a Score
Scene: A military hospital. Visitor had been talking to a badly wounded Irish soldier. Afterwards he asked an orderly: "When are they sending that man home?" "He ain't going home," said the orderly. "He's going back to the front."

Cardinal Stars
The Cardinals are the leading example. Sam Breadon's Cardinals had more good ball players than any other club you can mention, including a year and a half.

Plenty of Headaches
When the war is entirely over, Major Joppolo will have at least 4,000 headaches which he must face, regardless of what the baseball owners think or want.

The Black Sox Series
It was 26 years ago that the Black Sox scandal developed. Lately we talked that famous series over with Earl Greasy Nene, who played with the Reds.

SUMMER READING PROGRAM

Prizes shall be awarded by the Library Board for the best note book in each age group. The winners will be exhibited at the library and at the book exhibit at the school fall.

All note books must be turned in to the librarian by September 1st. They will be returned to the owners after they are judged and exhibited.

Note books will be judged on quantity and quality of reading done as well as the care and thought given in keeping the note books.

'BREWER'S YEAST'

salads, citrus or other fresh fruit or raw cabbage.

Protein foods—Two servings daily selected from products such as lean meat, fish, eggs, chicken, beans, nuts.

Whole grains—One or more servings daily of whole grain cereal, such as oat meal, and also whole grain bread. Use enriched flour in place of plain white flour.

Butter or margarine—Two or more pats daily.

Fluids—One teaspoon for children each day.

Water—Drink six to eight glasses daily.

"Now, what has all this got to do with brewer's yeast," you inquire.

It is the private belief of Dr. DeKleine, and hence not officially preached by the state department of health, that brewer's yeast possesses qualities that are effective in reduction of high blood pressure and in aiding the digestive system. Brewer's yeast PLUS the above mentioned diet would greatly improve the health of the average citizen, especially an individual 40 years or more of age, in the opinion of Dr. DeKleine. The state commissioner hopes manufacturers will reduce the price of this product, which is available in powder form and in tablets, to permit its wide use by the public. And incidentally the name "brewer's yeast" has nothing to do with a brewery; it has become a standard name for a product generally sold by drug stores everywhere.

Where people consume a high amount of energy foods—milk, meat, cheese, whole grains, but- ter, fruits and vegetables—the land resources are improved. Governor Thomas Dewey recently declared this to be a paradox.

"Where there is a good diet, that means there is a large population eating grain, contributing wheat, milk and meat," he said May 15. "The fertility of the soil is not only preserved by livestock, but animals increase it. The fact is that good food for the people and good farming go hand in hand."

The HEROES of this and Other Wars Remind Us to Buy MORE BONDS.. NOW

In honoring our fighting heroes of this and other wars we can't help but be reminded of the sacrifices they made that we might enjoy life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It's our solemn obligation to them, and to our children who will benefit most by Victory and Peace, to buy all the Bonds we can, from this day forward, until our enemies are defeated and Peace is restored.

Surely we could not pay them a more fitting tribute.

ARE STILL LOADED WITH WAR CALLS MARKED

"RUSH"

Only half the war is over . . . the other half still must be won. Long Distance telephone lines still are crowded with war calls that must get through promptly. Telephone service still must help speed arms and supplies to our fighters in the Pacific.

Until final Victory, will you help keep Long Distance telephone lines clear for war by cooperating if the operator asks you to limit your call to five minutes?
