FOREIGN RELATIONS VITAL TO US ALL

(By Gene Allaman)

If Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's statement and courageous utterance on American foreign policy is an accurate index, Michigan has traveled a long, long way in its thinking since Pearl Harbor. The change of Michigan public opinion, however, still appears to be predicted on the same motivating force, self-interest.

We think as we do because we must look out for ourselves. Here is the answer as we see it to a reversal of attitude that approaches the state of being a paradox. And here also is a subject, believe it or not, that is as Michigan as Mackinac whitefish. Gold stars are appearing in increasing numbers, what used to be an abstract and faraway thing, known as "foreign relations," has become overnight something very vital to our life because it affects the future security of our lives—and the lives of our loved ones.

It was Senator Vandenberg, among others who were honest and sincere in their thinking, who believed that we might insulate ourselves against recurrence of involvement in European troubles.

Listen to Senator Vandenberg in his remarkable statement before the United States Senate on January 19:

"I have always been frank—one of those who has believed in our own reliance. I still believe that we can never again—regardless of collaborations—allow our national defense to deteriorate to anything like a point of impotence.

"But I do not believe that our nation hereafter can immunize itself by its own exclusive actions. Since Pearl Harbor, we have seen mass murder into new and sinister perspective.

"Our oceans have ceased to be moats which automatically protect our ramparts. Fleets and bases now converge unusually with wings steel. War has become an all consuming juggernaut.

"If World War No. 2 ever unhappily arrives, it will open new laboratories closed for keeps. I think American self-interest requires that we should not isolate ourselves from the horrors of modern war so goes the Vandenberg reasoning. We should act immediately to prevent war at its very root and not wait until we are involved once more because self-interest forces us to fight.

What is this ounce of prevention? Here again the Vandenberg concept is a bold departure from pre-war thinking of the so-called "isolationist" Middle-West.

Maintaining that this Nation has the "same self-interest in peacetime," conclusively and effectively disarming Germany and Japan," Vandenberg advocates that the major allies enter into a military alliance to keep the Axis disarmed and, furthermore, that the President of the United States be delegated power (which he already has) to "join any and all forces with others in a new peace league."

If the allies could agree to such a military alliance, pledged never to permit Germany or Japan to return themselves and plunge us to a World War No. 3, Vandenberg believes such action would remove many of today's "contingents, doubts and frustrations" leading to controversial unilateral and bilateral actions by our allies.

Declaring that we must win our two wars with maximum speed and minimum loss," the senior Michigan senator maintains it would be good common sense for us "by effective international cooperation to do our full part in charting happier and safer tomorrows."

There you have it, with all the implications of word symbols: international cooperation by a military alliance with Great Britain, Russia and China.

We can imagine the stirring words are weighed. Even President Roosevelt has had one this far, although it will be recalled that Governor Thomas E. Dewey, long thought to be a non-partisan, espoused an "entangling alliance" with Great Britain while at the Mackinac Island conference in September, 1943.

Times have changed the reversal of thinking, illustrated lately by the Vandenberg address, is somewhat of a paradox. It is a portent of tomorrow's new issues.

TWO FIRES HERE DURING PAST WEEK

A few minutes past midnight Sunday the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cox on East Duncan street was discovered a fire by workers at the Ford plant who were on their way home. The Manchester Fire department was summoned but the blaze had gained such headway that the house and most of the contents were nearly destroyed.

About the time that the fire was discovered, Richard Cox, father of Henry Cox, who was sleeping in an upstairs bedroom, was awakened by the cries of one of the two Cox children who were sleeping in downstairs bedrooms. When he reached the top of the stairs, he smelled smoke and hurried downstairs. He found the kitchen aflame but succeeded in getting the children safely outside.

Although considerable damage was done before major damage was done. The fire department was called to the scene and the blaze was extinguished before major damage was done.

CAPT. KARL M. RAGUE DIES IN FRANCE

The whole community was shocked when word was received here Monday that Captain Karl M. Rague had died in France on Wednesday January 11, of wounds received in action.

Capt. Rague had gone to France in October, 1944, with the 170th General Hospital Unit and soon after the first of the year had been given the assignment of Battalion Surgeon at the Headquarters of the Third Army in Belgium. The last letter received by his parents was written on January 6—just two days before his death—and it expressed how glad he was to be where he was for his services were so desperately needed by the wounded there.

Karl M. Rague was born in New Bremen, Ohio, May 23, 1917, the son of the Rev. and Mrs. H. S. v. Ragus. He came with his parents to Manchester in 1925 and completed his schooling here, graduating with the class of 1935.

He entered the University of Michigan that fall, and graduated from the medical school there in 1942, having proven himself a brilliant student.

On June 13 of that year he was married to Miss Regene Lamming, a class mate during his school years here and at the University. Accompanied by his wife, he went to Gayre, Pa., where he served his internship at the Packer Memorial hospital.

As soon as his training there was completed, he entered the Army and after training at Carlisle barracks, Pa., he was assigned to Brooke General hospital at Fort San Houston, San Antonio, Texas. There he joined the staff of the Neuro-Psychiatric hospital, and in the spring of 1944 was promoted to the rank of captain.

In July of that year he was transferred to the General Hospital at Camp Grant, Ill., and in September left for the European theatre of war with the 170th General Hospital Group.

To the wife and parents of Capt. Rague we express the sympathy of the community and hope that the sacrifice he and others have made shall not have been in vain.

Bombing Plays a Strange Trick

One of the freak effects sometimes achieved by high explosive bombs is seen in this photo of a town in Finland, on the U. S. Third Army front. The big building at the end of the street took a direct hit and rubble, the other remained standing firm.

Spotlight of GAWLAND RICE

IN THE government's effort to produce a 100 per cent war effort which has led to the racing blockade and will lead to the curtailment of other big-time games, what will be sport's future in 1945? Racing isn't the only sport that will face the axe. There is sure to be a sweeping reclassification of all sports not engaged directly in war production. For example, there are 250 big league ball players classified as "P" who will be re-examined—and should be. Also, there is a large number of professional football players and college football players who will be reclassified. And there is a host of other sports that those who are passed up for active war duty will be called to some essential form of war help apart from sport.

But there will still be football and other forms of competition at West Point and Annapolis, and in all schools besides Navy-V-12 trainees. The sports will be some sport left at those colleges which can muster enough 17-year-olds to carry on, but the bulk of college sports will be made there 17-year-olds have been sent home, leaving in good old boys that the nation.

The main blow will fall upon all professional sport, the play-pay racket, which will be especially hard if those who are still declared unfit for war duty are sent into some form of war work.

Just how this will affect professional boxing and amateur basketball remains to be seen. The rougher, that will be professional basketball before it reaches pro football, the latter will be in the air for seven or eight months interval of professional season starts. But the baseball training is scheduled to open within three months—and that's on the shorter side.

For How Long? How long will this last? Until the war in Europe is won. How long will that be? Your guess probably is as good as that of any commanding general. Many of the latter haven't set any records at guessing so accurately so far.

It isn't any one sport alone. It is the massed front of so many sports that we are concerned with. It is that we work, travel accommodations, and so forth, in May, it isn't any one sport that we are concerned with.

Along the narrow path of sane reasoning, there seems little chance that the war in Europe will be ended by early summer, with the earliest opening in April or May, it will be a rough undertaking to make up leagues composed of those under 18 and those older than 25.

At this time high school sports should be encouraged in place of the German army today is composed of those 11 to 14-year-olds that started training and building up 10 years ago. Over here we have paid far too little attention to the physical development of those in the same age brackets.

One-Fourth Lost We have been losing 25 per cent of our 18-year-old draftees for physical reasons, while Germany, Norway, Sweden and other European countries have lost only 7 to 9 per cent. To have 25,000 of every 100,000 18-year-olds unfit for military service is a rough indictment on the way we have handled this part of the job.

Football, with more than seven months' heavy, has a better record than baseball has. But seven months is not long enough. Racing, which was planning to open a new season from California to Florida, New Orleans, take the hardest hit. Racing's losses will run far beyond the combined losses of football, baseball and all other banned or stunted sports put together.

Yet, there will be plenty of sport in 1945, but it will be big-time, big-money sport. In an all-time low, there has been a 50 per cent drop in the per cent of war, there can be no discrimination of the kind that we have already found out we can't win with a 60 per cent effort against Germany and Japan. The public at large, including every form of sport, should get back of this 100 per cent effort with 100 per cent support until the war is won. You can see how a man with one arm or one leg, or family or other handicaps and brothers now buried under crosses, or without crosses, all over the world, should look at the young lads rushing from the front lines, and think of the loss of a pennant race.

BLOWING BUBBLES
IN PERSHING SQUARE IN LOS ANGELES, like Trafalgar Square in London is a soap boxer's Mecca. It was in Pershing Square, a quarter of a century ago, that I first heard a soap box orator expounding the virtues of "Production for Use" as opposed to what he said was production for profit.

Only a few years later Upton Sinclair sought the governorship of California on a "Production for Use" platform, and came near being elected.
Just at the close of the last presidential campaign I listened, on a national radio hook-up, to the Socialist-Labor candidate for the presidency of the United States solicit the support of the voters for the program of "Production for Use."

It is a far cry from the soap box orator in Pershing Square to a candidate for the presidency speaking to America over a national radio hook-up. When I heard the soap boxer my curiosity was aroused to the extent of wondering just what it meant, and the details of its application to the American people. The emboldened orator did not, or could not, satisfy my curiosity. When in California during the heat and excitement of the Sinclair campaign I had tried to obtain the meaning and the working details of "Production for Use," but without success. Either they are too complicated to be explainable or my kindergarten mind is not capable of understanding.

I can get that part of the proposed program of the workers taking over and operating the factories, and the expulsion of all capital interest in industry. How this is to be done, unless by confiscation, I do not understand. Nor do I understand how the man who makes shoes is to get food, a house, clothes, an automobile and the other things he may want, or how he is to get the leather from which to make shoes. The general picture, as it is presented, might be enticing if I could not understand how it could be made to work. I am so dumb I cannot fathom just how the presidential salary of that man who wanted to be president, would have been paid had he been elected.

Many to me understandable cities have been expounded by the soap boxers of Pershing Square. Anything short of the wholesale anarchy, is permissible. Out of California came the Dr. Townsend plan of $20 a month for those over 60; the "ham and eggs" program; the $10 every Thursday and the last one, $60 at 80. One after another they have been voted down, but the something for nothing idea keeps coming back in a new guise, and will probably continue to do so.
That something for nothing idea has developed among the American people since 1920. For a time we tried to get it out of the stock market with the resulting explosion of 1929. Then we had years of doles, of WPA, CCC, NYA, AAA and others, and to save for the rainy days. In the meantime the soap boxers are still blowing bubbles in Pershing Square.

And the Reply?
A rookie saw three stars on a staff car and walked up to the stern faced man sitting in the back. Said the rookie: "I'd like to congratulate you on having three stars in the service."
German business is experiencing a severe economic depression. With craters where factories stood, it is easy to see why German business is in a hole.
A newspaper is the history for one day of the world in which we live, and with which we are acutely more concerned than with those which have passed and exist only in memory.

Farm Fire Loss Can Be Greatly Reduced

Prevention Is Real Solution to the Farmer

Preparedness to deal with fire involves first, having available the necessary fire fighting equipment, second, keeping such equipment in operating condition, and third, knowing how to use it effectively.

The investment in a sufficient number of hand and wheeled extinguishers to protect living quarters, barns, tractors and trucks is small when compared to the potential destruction of a good fire. When buying fire fighting equipment, look for the label of the Underwriters' Laboratories which shows that the equipment measures up to standards acceptable to fire safety engineers.

Some one or two persons who can be depended upon to do a conscientious job should be given the responsibility of supervising the fighting equipment regularly, recharging extinguishers as needed and keeping them in good condition.

Years of hard work go up in smoke. Hands in the entire area may be present.

While the outbreak of fire cannot always be avoided, many fires are due entirely to carelessness or negligence. Most preventable fires on farms are caused by defective chimneys and heating apparatus (kerosene stoves and radiators), spontaneous ignition of rubbish, improper use of electricity, carelessness with matches and cigarettes, flammable liquids, and lightening. Correction of these hazards can be accomplished by proper maintenance of the farm property and by the development of safe habits on the part of all those on the farm.

Wheat Goes Up

SURELY MUST COME DOWN

WHAT SOME OF OUR theoreticians pronounce fall us—at a fast price for themselves — of the happy and prosperous future ahead, sounds good, but—

They tell us we are to enjoy the luxury of "full employment," "whatsoever that may mean. They assure the workers of more money in the weekly or monthly pay envelope. They promise a reduction in taxes, both for industrial concerns and for the small individual tax payer. It all sounds good but they give us no details as to the "how," it is to be accomplished.

Where is the money to come from with which to meet the payroll of "full employment"? At increased wages?

For the past several years industry has not been permitted to accumulate a rainy day surplus of industrial solvency. It is being done from corn.

Other uses include a four for one cleaning fur, for burning material for removing oil from tin, sweeping compounds, insulation, ceramic and the replacement of worn machinery in dynamic and many other uses.

New Tree Planter

A new type of tree planter has made its bow. It can put in three miles of trees set six to eight feet apart in a single hour.

Drawn by a tractor, the planter can be handled by one man who feeds the young trees into a narrow trench by a wedge-shaped blade. The planter is used in establishing shelterbelts and windbreaks and in reforestation and people like to learn how to master a blaze. In some rural areas, professional fire fighters are invited to stage demonstrations and drills at which farm-

Proper Fertilizers Essential War Need

Good pasture will provide livestock growers with "hidden gold" in the form of beef-making feeds that will conserve widely needed grain crops. If proper management methods are followed.

"Pasture must continue to occupy a more essential place in the nation's livestock producing program until the war's end for several reasons, a statement by the Middle West Soil Improvement committee points out.

The statement says that because of the war's progress, farmers will have to rely on pasture crops as a major source of sustenance for their livestock.

"Grains, of course, he fed but farmers who have not really learned the value of their own land, he added, will be unable to produce the grain that will help them the most.

"Practical experience of successful livestock growers has demonstrated that high-producing pasture combinations will yield a beef poundage per acre that compares favorably with the return from crops with higher seedling and maintenance costs. For instance, a mixture of alfalfa and broom grass made more than 3 pounds of beef an acre daily in a test in Michigan.

"Bringing pastures to a high production level and maintaining them at this rate requires good management methods. This means following a soil conservation program that builds up fertility and provides plant foods that will assure a good stand of legumes and grasses. In such a program the use of a fertilizer containing phosphorus and potash plays an important part.

"Where a permanent pasture crop is planned, farmers will find generally that a top dressing of fertilizer this fall will pay for itself many times in producing earlier and more excellent grass for spring grazing next year as well as a heavier growth later.

"Agriculturists at state colleges and experiment stations are glad to cooperate with farmers in providing information covering the most effective use of fertilizers on pasture crops. One important fact should be borne in mind in considering the soil's nutritional needs. This fact is that while crops such as alfalfa and clover add to the soil's nitrogen supply, they eat up its phosphorus and potash reserves.

"What goes up must come down," a new farmer might say. It's true, but it seems very reluctant to make the decision.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

Col. Robert L. Scott

WNU RELEASE

The story this time: After graduating West Point as a second lieutenant, Robert Scott was assigned to the 10th Cavalry and later to the 1st Cavalry in California and then to the 1st Cavalry in the Philippines. He spent a year in the Philippines and then came to the States. He spent a year in the States and then came to the Philippines. He spent a year in the Philippines and then came to the States. ship. I would begin to pull out slowly and count—count for every thousand feet of my elevation above the target. Then as the ship came to level, I was at two thousand feet when I reached the coast of "two." I'd drop the bomb.

I let the four barges get almost to the makeshift wharf when I dove from my cloud cover. As I got the middle two barges on my gun-sight, I made a mental resolution not to be short—for even if I went over I'd hit the Japs in the town. As I passed three thousand feet the nearest barge went under me, and I began to pull out and count. "One—two—three—pull—putting in the extra count to insure me against being short. I felt the bomb let go as I jerked the belly-tank release, and I turned to get the swing out of the way so that I could see the bomb hit. For even if I went over I'd hit the Japs in the town. As I passed three thousand feet the nearest barge went under me, and I began to pull out and count. "One—two—three—pull—putting in the extra count to insure me against being short. I felt the bomb let go as I jerked the belly-tank release, and I turned to get the swing out of the way so that I could see the bomb hit.

Word had come now that the AVG, with General Chennault's command, was to be inducted into the Army Air Corps. Chennault, then a Colonel in the Chinese Army, had retired as Captain in the U. S. Army, was to be given the rank of Brigadier General to head the China Air Task Force. But from what I had gathered from the few correspondents we had received and from rumors that filtered through, I knew that the AVG was going to accept induction.

There were efficient men around the China-Burma-India theater who thought the AVG were untried and undisciplined. To these statements I always remarked that I never had had ten such undisciplined groups that they would have destroyed some three to four thousand enemy air planes, and that would certainly have hindered the Japanese. There were others who claimed that the high salaries and the extra bonus of five hundred dollars for each enemy plane they shot down. That made me laugh, for I had seen the AVG fight, and later on I was to fly with them against the enemy. I knew those great pilots—men who were great American adventurers who would have fought just as hard for peanuts or Confederate money—as long as they were fighting for General Chennault and were flying those beloved P-40s.

As it stood, after long hours of combat the men were tired; they had been out of the United States under the most trying conditions for nearly a year. They were all showing combat fatigue and needed a rest. Some of them were combat-weary and ought never to be risked in combat again.

Furthermore, the induction of the AVG had hit a snag, from poor judgment on the part of one man. It seems that someone had lined the boys up in a tight-knit on the ground of induction into the Army, and had used very little tact. He rejected newspaper stories intimating that the AVG fought for the high pay of Camco—between $600 to $750 a month, depending on whether or not the pilot was a wing man or a squadron leader. This salesman went on to state that he sincerely hoped the AVG would accept induction, because if they didn't, and when their contracts with Camco expired, they would probably find their draft boards waiting for them when they stepped off the boat that carried them back to the United States. In that case, they would of course be inducted as privates rather than commissioned as officers.

A large percentage of the AVG are reported to have got up and walked out on the spot. After all, they were in a desperate financial case, they were being threatened without complete knowledge of all the facts involved. I can't say that that day on they fought the Chinese could be all the talking truck jokes about that reverse side of the coin.

One involved an expression that of course was never permitted to reach its destination. The boy was trained by some of the AVG—was leaving China—to run up to every transport that landed, and as the passengers got out, to repeat for their benefit an untranslatable American expression aimed at the speech-maker. The gas-mask copied would religiously repeat it, and with bland countenance would respect the sentence. Most of the AVG used to make sure that he never reached the transport unloading the right man, but several times it took the best of American flying tactics to stop him in time.

Handled in another way, I believe that every one of the AVG who was physically able would have stayed. As it was, only five pilots remained, and some thirty ground crew men. We had wanted to give them into two groups—those who from a physical standpoint badly needed rest in the United States, and those who could stay out in China for six months longer without impairing their health. We were to permit the first group to go home on July Fourth (the day their contracts with Camco terminated) and to remain there on leave for no less than a month, after which they were to come back to China. It is my opinion that at least ninety per cent of the AVG would have accepted this offer. But as it was, five of the greatest pilots in the world stayed, with the group when their contracts expired. And those five were enough.

I went back to India and continued my assignments there on the Japs. After my flights with the AVG, the burning of the train in Indo-China, and the news of my one-man war in Burma, the story got to the war correspondents. I began to hear from home in the States that I had been written up as "The One-Man Air Force." From an egotistical standpoint I felt the thrill that a normal person would feel by this time I was beginning to realize that one man and one ship in this type of warfare meant very little.

In the days that followed I sank bombed enemy columns and strafed enemy soldiers swimming in the water from the barges I had sunk. But when I went back next day there were more and more Japs surging northward into upper Burma towards India. No, the title was an empty one—at least in my opinion. I was fighting. I had the satisfaction, however, of knowing that I was learning things. I had the experience of ten years of military flying, and I knew I was a good pilot. The day was going to come when that knowledge of mine, learned the hard way, would help train the new units that would come from home. There is no substitute for combat. You've got to shoot at people while you're being shot at yourself.

For the time being, though, there was just the one ship, and I nursed it like a baby. Flying it constantly, I had begun to feel a part of it. Sometimes at night I'd think of my wife and little girl, but never in combat. Sometimes, coming home after striking the enemy, I'd think of them and they seemed far, far away. Towards the end of May, after I'd been down just about two hundred hours

My ride with "Old Exterminator" continued through May and into June. Some days I'd climb out of India through the rain clouds of monsoon and fly on into Burma. The trip back would then be one to worry over, for I never knew exactly when to let down. It was never easy, but I would let it down off time properly I'd get back from the mission as the storm clouds were breaking, and I'd have a warm, welcome hole to dive through. On other days when I wasn't so lucky, I'd just have to roll over and dive for the valley of the Brahmaputra—said that's where I always came out. I wouldn't be there to tell about it.

Some of the flights into Burma were just a waste of gasoline. I would see nothing. It followed the early trip. From reports of the ferry pilots I heard that the Japs were building a bridge over the river Numam, some forty miles north of Myitkya. The very afternoon the report reached me, I went over and strafe the engineers at work on the bridge. When I landed at the base I hoped the ground crew had moved in their anti-aircraft but I didn't see them. That was pretty bad, though, for it was the only cap I had, and for four months I had to wear it with all the felt torn from the crown by the Jap ground crew. I remember that after one of the young bomber crew men asked Maj. Butch Morgan—when we were stripped from our ships and I continued circling against the clouds at 11,000 feet.

For I had a plan. Dive-bombing from a P-40 is not the most accurate in the world; you can't dive very steeply or the bomb might hit the target and also in too steep a dive it's hard to recover in the high speeds that are built up. It seemed to me that the type of bombing one had to do in order to keep the speed under control and to miss the target, was more in the nature of glide-bombing. Most beginners, however, are taught to dive rather than glide. That is to say, the projector strikes before it gets to the target. I developed a rule of thumb: rather than over. From my practice bombing on the Brahmaputra, I found that the rule of thumb I would use at some forty-five degrees, then, as the target in my gun-sight passed under the nose of my

A Jap number is shot down in Col. Scott's first aerial combat. In combat and had gathered about a hundred holes in my ship. I think I must have wondered if I'd ever see them again. I carried a Tommy gun with me in the cockpit of the ship for as standing altitude there would probably be no time to bail out with the chute anyway, and I knew that prisoners taken by the Japs receive very harsh treatment, especially those who have been strafe by the strafing troops when shot down.

My greatest bombing day came late in the month of May, when I dropped four 500-pound bombs at Homalin, down on the Chindwin, where the Japs seemed to be concentrating. Early in the morning I headed South with the heavy relief bomb slowly climbing past the Nagas Hills and through the overcast, dipping out at 10,000 feet. As I continued South on the course to where the Yva met the Chindwin river, the clouds lowered but the overcast remained solid. In one hour, computing that I had made the 100 miles to Homalin, I let down through the overcast, hoping that the mountains were behind me. I flew with me, as it usually was in my line-of-ship war, and I found the overcast was a hundred feet thick. I couldn't see Homalin in my target area, but I kept right on against the cloud ceiling and circled warily. I knew that I was in luck; I could drop the bomb and then climb right back into the overcast, no matter how many Jap fighters came to intercept.

Soon I saw my target—and sure enough there were loaded barges coming out of the broad Chindwin and heading for the docks of Homalin. I continued circling against the clouds at 11,000 feet.

How To Relieve Bronchitis

Circulation relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel the mucus, and add moisture to the airways and help relax, tenderize and soothe the inflamed tissues. You may have to take it for a few days before you see the way to relief. The cough or you see to have your money back.

Why a Farmer Should Buy and Keep War Bonds

by J. I. Falconer
Rural Economics Dept.
Ohio State University

THE main business of the country today is fighting the war; all of us have an interest in having the war brought to a satisfactory conclusion as soon as possible.

At the present time one-half the productive energy of the country is employed either in the military service or in producing the necessary supplies. To pay for these services and supplies requires a total amount of money equal to one-half the total income of the country.

As Americans we prize freedom. Too often, however, we forget that freedom implies responsibility. Freedom and responsibility are closely associated. Right now it is a responsibility of every free citizen to help in the war effort.

War Bonds are a good investment. They are also a safe investment, which is another way of saying that the chances of loss are small. It is a good place to put the money which one wants to lay away for later use. This later use may be a source of income in old age, it may be the making of some improvement around the farm or in the home, it may be providing an education for the children or any one of a hundred different uses.

Another reason why everyone should buy War Bonds is that it is one of the best ways of controlling inflation. Many of the goods and services which we would like to buy are not now available or are only available in limited quantities. Rather than spending the money to buy what will not be there from the war effort, it would be much better to put the money where it can be used for the main purpose of the day, namely fighting the war.

WHAT GOVERNMENT CAN AND CANNOT DO
GOVERNMENT SHOULD, and attempts to, protect the individual against the depredations of other individuals, but government does not protect the individual against himself. The individual must protect himself. The individual must not shoot another, but government can do nothing for the man who shoots himself. The individual must not steal, but government can do nothing for the man who steals himself. The individual must not cheat, but government can do nothing for the man who cheats himself. The individual must not drink, but government can do nothing for the man who drinks himself. The individual must not gamble, but government can do nothing for the man who gambles himself. The individual must not gamble, but government can do nothing for the man who gambles himself.

DEMOBILIZING THE ARMY OF more than three million federal civilian employees will prove a much harder job than demobilizing the 11 million in the armed forces. Those in the armed forces want to be freed as soon as possible. Those in the civilian forces will hold onto their jobs as long as possible.

THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES less than one-fifth of those working for wages are included in organized labor. Four out of each five workers are not members of labor unions. The organized one out of each five has a lousy voice to which the politicians listen, though he is very much a minority.

SOME PEOPLE ARE NOT happy unless the sun shines all of every day, but they are the first to object to an assignment to spruce the lawns.

Genetic Selection
Genetic selection, or the selection of breeding stock primarily on the basis of qualities that are hidden from view as opposed to physical selection which mainly takes into consideration size, color and conformation, is one of the newer steps in livestock and poultry handling says the U. S. department of agriculture.

Genetic selection goes into pedigree records and performance of progeny and close relatives of breeding animals. In poultry, for example, it includes egg production, fertility, and hatchability.

Harnessing the Worm
Earthworms are being harnessed and put to work to enrich the soil in their burrowing operations. The worm swallows the earth with its minerals and vegetables, adds his own secretions, and produces the richest top soil known to science. The presence of 10 worms in one square foot of earth, or one million to the acre, will create annually 200 tons of such soil. The crop raised from such top soil are from 100 to 200 per cent larger.
