GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

Col. Robert L. Scott

The story has it: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott was assigned to Kelly Field and took up combat flying. He appears to be a happy-go-lucky fellow, but he is a serious pilot, and he is a very good one. After visiting General Chennault's 23rd Fighter Group, he was assigned as a "one man air force" over Burma. Later he was commanding officer of the 3rd Fighter Group. Maj. Alison got three medals on the Burma front. His plane was shot down, but he was rescued by a 2,000-year-old witch.

CHAPTER XX

When stranger things would happen, we talked about things of the sort which had once been told in story books. All as agreed that nothing had ever happened in fiction that wouldn't have actually happened in this battle of the universe. For instance, I had been up on the big, northern loop of the Yangtze-Kiang. It is China, but that part of China is as wild as Tibet and Arabia. The people are called "Lolo," and they must be descendants of Genghis Khan. I had flown over the place, for it was just north of the ferry route from Assam to Kummung, and I had seen the fat clearing South of the village that could have been an emergency landing field. I noted that it was close to nine thousand feet above sea level, and therefore not a field to use unless one had to. Capt. Charlie Sawyer had crash-landed just South of there, closer to Taidia, and had been unable to identify himself. While the wild-looking Lolo tribesmen were getting set to execute him with ancient-looking flintlock muskets, Sawyer had the holes in the barrels looked twice as big as fifty-caliber bores. Just at the crucial moment, however, when his face looked darkest, some new arrival in the party saw the identity card that Sawyer had been pointing to. It was inscribed in various languages, and with pictures. The new arrival didn't recognize the Chinese flag, or any of the languages, or the Generalissimo's signature "Chop"—but he saw a star. As it happened, it was the star of India over the imprint in Hindustani. Then the tribesman pointed to the same star on the wing of Sawyer's ship—the insignia of the Army Air Force. Sawyer was saved, and later he was feasted on wild buffalo and rice.

one, or carry in the mechanics and the tools with which to repair the bad one. In every organization there is always one person who holds up the morale, some one who makes the darker moments brighter and who can bring a little sunshine into the tense reality of war. Out in the China theatre, and especially in the 23rd Fighter Group, my most unforgettable character was Lieut. Henry Elias. This pilot was a Southerner, like most of the others in the China skies. When I first reached Hengyang he was acting as assistant operations officer to Ajax Bauniler. He had a reply for every person, and he was definitely a morale builder, and you can ask anyone if they were not as valuable at the front as ammunition.

Elias had been on several raids when I heard the first jokes about him. He'd been on an attack to Nanchang, and as the ships turned for home in the fading light of late afternoon, some one of the pilots but the formation observed something peculiar. Up ahead there were five

These pilots are lined out by almost constant alert without relief for 21 days.

P-40's with their sleek silhouettes against the sky, and every one in proper order. But off to the flank, in almost the position of the number-three man in a Vee formation, was one ship with its wheels extended. Some one called on the radio, "Hey, Elias, who's that bird in formation with you, with your wheels down?"

As the words sank into the consciousness of the flight, and of Elias especially, their ominous significance became apparent to him. He was flying a P-40, and he was looking at his wingman and looked at his wingman. He was looking at the silhouette of the aircraft that was a Jap Model 107, one of the old fixed landing gear types. The entire formation tried at once to get it, but they finally realized what it was. But they had the laugh on Elias. Just as he recognized the Jap, the enemy pilot evidently recognized the P-40's in the daylight before darkness—perhaps he saw the leading shark's mouth. For as Elias shoved the nose of his ship straight down and dove for him, the Jap pulled his ship straight up and climbed for the sky. Later, when our imaginations began to embellish the joke, Elias took the kid in and got part and always had a connection.

A small two-seater biplane, a Fiat, came to Hengyang from Kweilin one day with a Chinese pilot. We looked the little ship over as it came into the field with open as some seventy-five miles an hour. "Now how did you get that?" I said. "Eleven miles an hour," he said. "I know a trick to make out the nose lots of 'fats' and air-planes."

Elias had laid down his Operations reports and was listening attentively. "This ought to get you promoted," I went on. "Now you get that plane and service it tonight, then early in the morning you take off for Hengyang, Alison, Bauniler, and I will be along later and will arrive over the Jap city before you do." Elias was looking at me in wonder. "Then, when you get there, by the enemy airport at thirty-five hundred feet—that'll keep you just above their small-calibre fire and they can't shoot accurately that low with the big stuff. Over the field fly with one wing low, kind of skidding, cutting your switch on and off so the Japs will think you're either wounded or over there with a bad engine."

Elias was trying to figure out whether I was serious or not. Then I asked: "Will you be up there in the sun, and as fast as the Zeros come in for you, we'll knock them down. After all, Elias, if they get you, you'll be in a bad fix." "Fleet isn't worth much," he said. "But by now Lieutenant Elias was walking out and calling over his shoulder: "No sir, Colonel, I just want to be a pilot pilot—I don't want to be no ball of fire." Well, we saw the value of Elias when we saw him. For in this second battle around Hengyang he failed to return from the straining raid of September 2, 1942. We had taken sixteen P-40's back to Hengyang when we had gotten them in shape to fight, and had landed there just about dark to surprise the Japs. That's

Violinist Suffered Pangs Of Torture for the While

During rehearsal, the conductor noticed that one of his first violins was not looking himself. He stopped and asked the man if he felt ill. "No, sir, thank; I'm all right," was the reply. The rehearsal proceeded. Presently the violinist again caught the conductor's eye. "Smith," he said, "are you sure you're well?" "Yes, sir, really, I'm all right," But Smith seemed to grow paler. "Look here," said the conductor, "I really think you ought to go out for some fresh air, you know?" "Don't worry about me, sir," said Smith. "I'm quite all right—I simply loathe music."
