VANDENBERG STILL TOPS IN MICHIGAN

The decision of Governor Harry F. Kelly to retire from public service at the end of his second term is an indirect compliment to the courage and logic of Michigan's senior United States Senator, Arthur H. Vandenberg.

In 1941 Kelly was concluding his second term as secretary of state at Lansing. President M. Brown was finishing an elective term in the United States senate at Washington, A. strong figure and an accepted leader of the Roosevelt administration, Brown had piloted the controversial price control bill through Congress and in so doing had incurred ill will of the powerful farm bloc. Yet his independence had prompted him to vote against the administration on several occasions. He was a formidable opponent.

Kelly wanted to become a candidate for the senate.

But he had not reckoned with the Michigan Republican party which was seeking a leader to vanquish the VanWagoner regime. Result: Kelly was "checked" to oppose VanWagoner, and Homer Ferguson became the Republican nominee to battle Brown at the November election. 1942 Kelly's plurality was 72,691; Ferguson's plurality was 25,667.

The second possible opportunity for Kelly to serve in the U. S. Senate would be 1946 when the term of Vandenberg would terminate.

One year ago the former Grand Rapids daily newspaper editor was confronted with the necessity of making an important decision. Should he straddle the fence on the issue of American participation in postwar security? Should he oppose such action? Should he advocate our membership in a world league whereby American troops might be dispatched abroad, at the call of the president, to dispel aggression at his best? Many politicians would have chosen the first of the three options and by so doing steered a middle course between the "isolationists" and the "internationalists" to study old labels of our pre-war thinking.

It is a matter of record that Vandenberg chose the most difficult course of the three—instead of advocating isolationism or isolationism, he proclaimed the need for American responsibility in world peace as the best way to safeguard the home front from another world war.

Vandenberg's courage came from the following logic, as he presented it to colleagues in the United States senate only a few weeks ago following his return from San Francisco:

"While I want a powerful Army and an invincible Navy, to make our national defense as impregnable as possible, pending the time when mutual arms limitations can be made dependably effective, I believe that no nation can survive after immune itself by its own exclusive action.

"I say again, as I said on January 10, since Pearl Harbor, World War II has put the cruel specter of mass murder into our and sinister perspective. I say again that the oceans have ceased to be moats which automatically protect our shores. I say again that the West and blood now compete unequally with wages and unemployment. War has become an all-consuming juggernaut. I say again that it would not be long before it arrives, it will open new laboratories of death too horrible to contemplate. I say again that I propose to do everything within my power to keep these laboratories closed for keeps, and, Mr. President, they must be kept closed all round the earth because neither time nor space any longer promises to shield the victims of treacherous attack. We must have collective security to stop the next war, if possible, before it starts, and we must have collective action to crush it swiftly if it starts in spite of our organized precautions."

With the Michigan cavity that still long and many stars on the Michigan service flags already turned to gold, Vandenberg's logic has the force of a tidal wave—it is running too strong even for Governor Kelly.

We do not imply that Kelly's decision was predicated solely on the new strength of the Michigan senior senator, for such would be an injustice and oversimplification of a complicated situation. But it was an important factor.

Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler's latest U. S. with the state civil service commission gives him a current victory in the fourth contest with Andrew Coleman, former state ferry captain at St. Ignace. Because Coleman had left his boat without permission, Ziegler fined him. Coleman appealed to the state supreme court. The court also ordered Coleman to pay a fine.

AMATEUR RODEO NO. 2 IS HELD HERE

It seems that a certain amount of professional jealousy has crept in to the amateur rodeo business hereabouts. At least that's what we have been told. It was this way.

Our local postmaster was seen the other day riding herd on one of his most vicious books. Said one of 12 children of George and Jennie Weber Stockwell. He was married May 4, 1938 to Julia Kibron and came to the United States in 1910 and settled in Ypsilanti. They celebrated their 6th wedding anniversary in 1944. Following the death of his wife Dec. 11, of that year, he came here to live with his son Everett.

He is survived by his son, one daughter, Mrs. Ruth Case of Detroit; four grand-children, two great-grandchildren; seven brothers and four sisters.

Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the funeral home with Rev. John Bennett officiating.

NORTH SHARON Mrs. Reuben Scott

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Gage and children of Clinton were Sunday callers of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kuhl at their home at Iron Creek Sunday last past week.

The 23rd annual reunion of the Scott family was held Sunday July 22 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Voegding of Freedom. About 200 guests from the Ann Arbor, Jackson, Clinton, Bridgewater and Lima, Officers for the coming year are: Harold Scott, president; Lowell Spike, vice president; Eugene Huber, secretary; and Paul Koch, treasurer. The next reunion will be held the last Sunday in June 1946 at a place to be chosen by the officers.

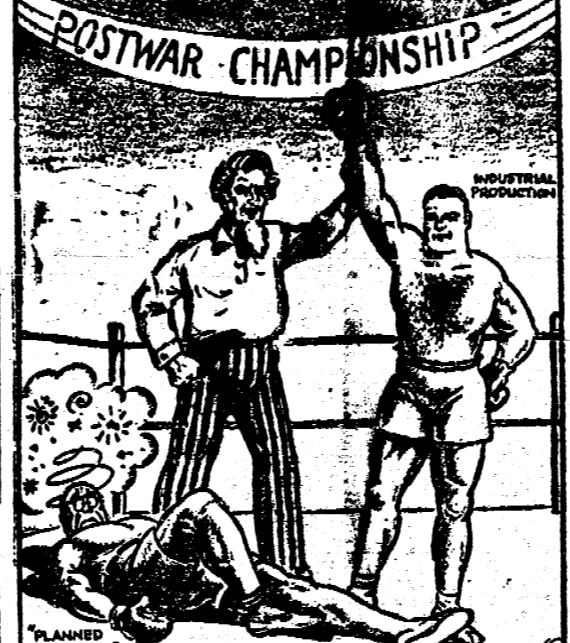

Observes Ninth Birthday

A happy ninth birthday was celebrated by Gene Whitman at his home at Iron Creek Sunday. The happiest part of the occasion was the presence of his uncle Warren F. Grich, M.D. who is on leave from the U. S. Navy and lives in Sharon and over the years has visited with the family. Present were Gene's mother, Mrs. Thomas Whitman, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Durr of Dearborn and their two sons, his uncles Billy and Tommy, also his aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. Harvey D. Smith of Detroit who had with them their son Bobbie and a new son Billie, just two weeks. An enjoyable time was had by all but greatly missed by everyone was Gene's father who is in the Navy serving in the Pacific.

AVOID SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION IN HAY

Several farmers have made inquiry about the danger of spontaneous combustion in hay not sufficiently cured, reports H. S. Oster, County Agricultural Agent. If there is cause for alarm Mr. Oster reports that temperature should be checked. This can be done by the use of a homemade rod consisting of an electrical conduit 6 to 10 feet in length with a pointed wooden plug in one end. A few quarter inch holes should be bored through the conduit just above the end of the wooden plug. The rod can be forced into the hay where the danger appears, and a dairy thermometer can be lowered into the conduit by means of a cord. After three or four minutes the thermometer can be withdrawn and temperatures noted. If the temperature continues to rise over 150 degrees there is apt to be danger. The mow or stack should be tested in several different places. Arrangements should be made for fire control, and the hot spot removed from the mow or stack.

Mr. Oster reports that a stack of hay outdoors which was checked a few years ago showed that there was a rise of temperature from June 16 to September 5 when the stack burnt into flames. Just before the flames appeared, the temperature rose to 257 degrees. Hay naturally heats some when it is put into the mow but continual rise indicates trouble ahead and it may take place soon after the hay is put in or several weeks later. Mr. Oster reports that his office has plans for making the hay prod mentioned above.

SUGGESTS USING A SUGAR BUDGET PLAN

The use made of the available sugar supply this summer can make or break the home-maker's canning program. Therefore, Dr. Pauline Paul, specialist in foods and nutrition in Michigan State college, suggests sugar budgeting, if the sugar supply is budgeted and supplemented with the possible every family should be able to meet its canning quota of 60 quarts of fruit per person.

Before canning the first kind of fruit in a can, examine the amount of sugar in the fruit. If the amount of sugar is less than 10 percent, it is not sweet enough for canning. For some canning, the sugar supply can be supplemented.

Dr. Paul maintains that properly canned fruits will keep perfectly without sugar, water-packed fruits being the most acceptable for table use. In order to preserve the maximum color and flavor, only well-ripened fruit of the best quality should be water-packed.

Next winter these fruits can be used to excellent advantage, in pies, puddings and casseroles where sugar would undoubtedly be used anyway. Remember however, when water packed fruit is used, it is not serving time. Drain off the juice and use the sugar and water back on the fruit and let it stand until cold. The sugar then has a chance to penetrate into the fruit and flavor is greatly improved.

A good test for any canning is to use tree-ripened fruit. Fruit picked on the tree tends to have a higher flavor and more natural sweetness, thus requiring less sugar. Another suggestion for the sugar saver is to serve raspberries, dewberries, blackberries and fresh fruit this summer. The crops are now being harvested in Michigan and the fruits have more flavor and sweetness when served fresh.

Postwar Planning Note

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

THE ITALIAN PART. The American troops arrived at Adano, and Major Joppolo, the Major's aide, was in charge of the camp. The Major was determined to replace the tent but Joppolo was not so sure. The Major was determined to replace the tent but Joppolo was not so sure. The Major was determined to replace the tent but Joppolo was not so sure.

And the Major said quickly to Captain Purvis in English. "Arrest him, Purvis, show this gang that you're arresting him."

This was the kind of thing Captain Purvis enjoyed, and as he clapped his hand heavily on Major Joppolo's shoulder he shouted: "I wish I understood Eretalian. This is wonderful."

The crowd broke up slowly, mumbling its protests at being deprived of revenge.

Purvis said: "Who is this little squirt, anyway? They sure hate him, don't they?"

Major Joppolo said: "He's the one who was used to be Mayor."

"Oh, he is, is he? Well, according to what you say, he's got plenty of sense to take him. And the Captain kicked Mayor Nasta in the seat of the pants simply because he didn't know the Italian form."

Major Nasta whispered in Italian: "What are you going to do with me? If you are going to kill me, please tell me first. Don't shoot me from behind, they're not used to that."

Major Joppolo did with Mayor Nasta what he had done with his office. Everyone, even little Zio, who had once worked for Mayor Nasta, even D'Arpa, the weasel-like fellow who had once worked with him, everyone made faces of disgust when they saw Mayor Nasta placed in the seat of the pants. It brought back some of the kind of profit. I am being more than generous in saying that Mayor Nasta was back.

Major Nasta was obsequious now. "Yes, Mister Major," he said. "What did you say was the name of the American officer to whom I must report?"

"His name is Berth, and he is not an officer. He is a sergeant. You are not worth an officer, Nasta."

"Yes, Mister Major."

This is how it happened that Mayor Nasta was put in the seat of the pants. Because four or five people followed Mayor Nasta everywhere he went out of curiosity and hatred, there was a small audience on hand the first time when he reported to Sergeant Berth for the first time. The audience enjoyed what it saw and heard for this kind of situation was most for Sergeant Berth; who thought the whole was with a job. The latter, Nasta stepped into one of the M.P. officers, rearranged his pince-nez, and said: "There will be one man named Sergeant Berth."

"I am Nasta."

"Oh, yes, Mister Sergeant Berth. He stood up, rubbing his hands. "So you are the mayor. I understand that you have come to Adano to repent your sins. Is that right, noble Mayor?"

"I was told that I was to report here each morning. I was to report not be humiliated, Sergeant."

"You will call me Mister Sergeant."

Major Nasta smiled from his long habit of smorting.

Berth said sharply: "Listen, Nasta. I know more about you than you know about yourself. You be careful how you behave here. Now, answer my questions civilly. Is it correct that you came to Adano to repent your sins?"

Major Nasta was white with anger, but he said: "I suppose you might say so."

"Thank you," Berth said with exaggerated politeness. "In that case you will be humiliated, Sergeant."

Berth would you like to choose your own sins, or would you like Sergeant Berth to choose them for you?"

Major Nasta couldn't keep himself from smiling.

"I see," said Berth with his over-politeness. "You would like Berth to choose. Very well, let's see. This morning we will discuss the sin of disgraceful running away from your post in the face of the American invasion. What is this sin called, Mayor Nasta?"

"What do you mean, what is it called?"

"You are at a loss for words? Very well, Berth will answer his own question. It is called the sin of cowardice."

Major Nasta smiled.

"No matter what side you were on, no matter if you were on the side of the crowd, it was a sin to run away, was it not, Mayor?"

Major Nasta rearranged his pince-nez and a trembling hand answered his question: "Yes, it was a sin to run away, was it not, Mayor?"

"Answer my question: did you or did you not give rifles to the Carabinieri and then run to the Finance Guards, make them a beautiful speech about fighting to the last man, and then run to the hills?"

Major Nasta said with a trembling voice: "You tell me, clever Sergeant."

Sergeant Berth shouted: "Answer me, Mayor Nasta, did you give rifles to the Carabinieri and then run to the hills?"

"I did, Mister Sergeant."

"Are you sorry for this disgraceful sin, Mayor Nasta?"

Major Nasta could hear the people snickering behind him.

He said meekly: "I

MICHIGAN MIRROR (continued from page 1) Fred Ziegler to put the captain back to work, but Ziegler asked the court to review his decision.

The court's latest decision reveres as itself, holding that the civil service commission's hearing was fairly as to the record and hence the court had nothing on which to base its judgment. Where is Coleman now? Still waiting for his job back!

"A car traveling people." That's the title of a social study just released by the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, Detroit, Michigan.

An automobile was second on the list of family priorities in the $2,500 to $3,000 income bracket surveyed by the U. S. department of agriculture in 1936-38. Food was first. "If we were to say that the average American family spends $10 out of every $100 on his automobile, we wouldn't be far off."

In 1925 the average retail price of all cars was $1,097 at the factory including Federal taxes and standard equipment. By 1940, it was $778 in the meanwhile horse-power had increased from 37 to 65 and new features included all-steel bodies, safety glass, and balloon tires.

It's safe to forecast that nearly every American wants a new automobile. Michigan's post-war prosperity will depend, to a large degree on its automobile industry.

Welfare Consideration. As a result of action taken by the state legislature last spring, one staff of field workers is now servicing the needs of social security and direct relief bureaus under the state department of social welfare. Pedro Fauri, state welfare director effected the consolidation which will save money for Michigan taxpayers.

Telephone Trends. Be patient with the telephone girl. Local calls per day in Michigan totaled 3,640,000 in 1939; boomed to 6,686,000 in 1944. Long distance calls in Michigan averaged 74,000 in 1939; they jumped to 138,000 in 1944. (From annual report of the Michigan Bell Telephone company.)

Farm Jockies. The only effective treatment is the external application of some medicinal agent that will kill the scab mites. This can be best accomplished by dipping, followed by isolation. The dips recommended by the USDA are made from lime-sulfur or nicotine.

Fumigation Practices. Carbon disulfide is the most common fumigant used on the farm. It is a liquid that quickly evaporates into a heavier-than-air gas. Operators should avoid inhaling the vapors or spilling the liquid on clothing. Extreme caution must be taken against fire.

Do not fumigate when the temperature is below 40 degrees. It is best to start late in the afternoon when the air is calm. It will take 24 hours.

View on Tenderex farm. with low maintenance, led to exhaustive and careful study and experimentation. The results found are of interest to farmers generally. Using Gothic-type house, preferably, covered arch construction, with the framing for the roof and wall combined in one unit, not only was a saving made in original costs, but considerable saving was effected in future heating costs.

The 33 houses on the Tenderex farm are all 24 by 30 feet with the continuous arches anchored to a concrete foundation. Sheathing is of tongue and groove covered with thick butt asphalt shingles. These type shingles are easily moulded to the contour of any roof. Their gray tone offers harmonious contrast with the red hollow tile used in the end walls.

Mineral wool was selected to insulate the interior wall, which is lined with asbestos board.

To eliminate dampness, the floor consists of under fill and four inches of hollow tile, topped with 2 1/2 inches of concrete.

Water for Chickens. In order that fresh water may be provided for the chickens and kept clean, the cover shown in this illustration is recommended. It may be used with water tanks or some form of automatic water font.

Alfalfa Adds Nitrogen. When alfalfa is fed on the farm where it is grown and the manure is returned to the land, there would be a large gain in nitrogen and the phosphorus and potassium loss would be greatly reduced.

At the University of Illinois, it was observed that when a ton of hay is sold, 37 pounds of nitrogen obtained from the air goes with no gain to the grower, but rather as a gain to the buyer of the hay. By feeding the alfalfa and using manure, this loss is reduced.

Hormone sprays, or pre-harvest fruit - drop inhibitors, containing magnesia stetic acid as the active ingredient, were used both in spray and dust form by many apple and pear growers throughout the country in 1944.

Add Water to Tires. There are no ill effects from filling tires completely with a water solution of calcium chloride. Completely filled tires have an advantage in that pressure is automatically increased as the tires are over-loaded, thus avoiding the usual necessity for adding more air and using higher pressures in proportion to heavier tire loads.

Resistance to bruising and punctures is not affected by the percentage of liquid fill.

We have finally discovered the reason men are not allowed to buy two pairs of trousers with their suits; the women are wearing the other pair. - Cassapolis, Virginia.

Danger! Sheep Scab May Be on Way Back. Will sheep scab stage another comeback—once more causing millions of dollars in losses, as it did a few years ago?

Dr. Floyd Cross of the American Veterinary Medical Association and government authorities report such a possibility. "The condition is present to an alarming extent in the Midwest," Dr. Cross reports.

If sheep show loss of wool, formation of scabs on the skin, or a tendency to rub against fences and pens, the condition should be called to the attention of a veterinarian.

Through greatly diminished wool production, loss in body weight, general unfitness and death, scabbies play their toll.

The scab is caused by a small mite, barely visible to the unaided eye, but can be brought under effective control.

The only effective treatment is the external application of some medicinal agent that will kill the scab mites. This can be best accomplished by dipping, followed by isolation. The dips recommended by the USDA are made from lime-sulfur or nicotine.
