New Dignity Added To Old Wash Stand

IF YOU have a wash stand of the bowl and pitcher era, here is a way to give it new dignity. Add open shelves at the ends with a new base and top for the whole piece, and you have smart, long lines for a chest to fill an important wall space. The shelves are added to the ends of the stand first with small angle irons. The end boards come next, then the top of plywood with a plain finishing piece around it. The new base-board is then added and the piece is finished to match the woodwork of the room.

The sketch also shows a framed panel which will give the wash stand a new look. It is an old picture frame with a glass with a lacquered rim and a new base-board. The panel is then attached to the back of the wash stand with small angle irons.

A Bell for Adano John Hersey

THE STORY TOLD FAR: The American troops arrived in Adano, with Major Joppolo, the American commander in charge. The major was in charge of security. The major was in charge of security. The major was in charge of security.

CHAPTER XVII The Lieutenant said: "Sure he was. It's easy to see he was. And if General Marvin ever lays eyes on this information copy, I'll be in a bad way."

"Yes, sir," said the Technical Sergeant, taking the copy. "The Lieutenant said: 'That Major was trimmed in down core something I don't do. I never have liked him. I don't know of this Major, but I think it would be a shame if he caught a trimming just for this.'"

"No, don't worry," the Lieutenant said. "But the Technical Sergeant did bury for several days, until he got up the courage to ask the Lieutenant. 'Sir, what did you ever do about that information copy I made for General Marvin? You didn't throw it away, did you? Colonel Norris is liable to ask me about it.'"

"I wish I had thrown it away," the Lieutenant said. "I didn't have the guts. I put it in the copy room for a while. You know how much stuff we've been losing on that run. I thought maybe—"

"The Technical Sergeant, relieved of his worry, smiled and said: 'It might get lost accidentally on purpose.' Major Nasta had just come out from his daily repatriation before Sergeant Borth. He walked across the way to the broad sidewalk to the front of the Palazzo. Every day troops of people gathered on the sidewalk, some just to pass the time of day, some to air their personal complaints, some to get in touch with the town's mean little lawyers, whose office was that sidewalk.

Major Nasta walked up to one such knot. There were about ten people, and he found that they were discussing the way. He waited for his chance, and said: "I got some news from the lieutenant yesterday afternoon. Mercurio Salvatore the erier was so far gone in boldness that he said: 'We have no desire for news from the one who is no longer Mayor.'"

Major Nasta remembered the time when he would have been the erier in jail for a whole year for saying something like that, but now he said: "This news came from the son of your friend Afronti, the noisy cartoonist. The boy deserted on the first day of the invasion and he is now here. Perhaps you know him. It is an Italian boy."

The Mayor's poison was beginning to take hold. "If that is the case," said the Mayor, "you were to be found on this stretch of sidewalk every morning, 'if that is the case, what did he say that was so interesting?' "He said that our friends the Germans are mousing a counter-attack. "There is nothing new in that," said Father Percevolino. "They have counterattacked before. They counterattacked near Vicinamare and it did them no good. They were thrown back. They will be thrown back again."

"Not this time," said Mayor Nasta. "This time they will employ five fresh divisions. They have the 28th Panzer and the 11th SS. These are good troops. This time they will not be thrown back. They intend to push the Americans into the sea. The Mayor's poison was beginning to take hold. "If that is the case," said the Mayor, "you were to be found on this stretch of sidewalk every morning, 'if that is the case, what did he say that was so interesting?' "He said that our friends the Germans are mousing a counter-attack. "There is nothing new in that," said Father Percevolino. "They have counterattacked before. They counterattacked near Vicinamare and it did them no good. They were thrown back. They will be thrown back again."

Lost Child's Best Friend Is Sad-Eyed Bloodhound

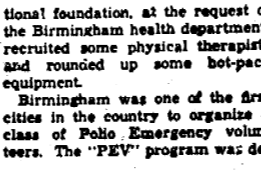

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15. — The first Sunday after V-J Day, a friend came by with an automobile to take my family and me for a drive into the country to have dinner with another friend. Nothing like that had happened in years. We were all delighted at the chance to ride through the country lanes, to talk about the harvest of the corn, the possibilities of crops, and the probability that we would enjoy meat for dinner.

These Dogs Find Hundreds Of Little Strays Annually

Even the expression on bloodhounds' faces is classed as being worrisome. But whether they droop the heavy-lidded eyes following a search for the inborn knowledge that their mission in life is not the happy one of canine housepets, we would hardly be in a position to know.

Danger of Infantile Paralysis Infection Always Greater in August and September

September is the month when infantile paralysis (poliovirus) reaches its highest incidence. There are usually about 3,000 cases reported throughout the country during this month. This year the total number of cases seems to be lower than last year, but in certain areas there has been a startling increase.
