STATE SOCIALISM SEEMS TO BE PLANNED FOR US

Manchester, Mich., Dec. 29.—So they say it can't happen here. Well, it is happening here and it is happening right now. The Country Editor published a side a sheet of calley proofs. The week's newspaper had not come to press yet. It was after the holiday rush.

"And what are you alarming over this week?" we asked in good humor.

"Just this," he replied with a glint of determination in his eyes as he pointed to a copy of a daily newspaper on his desk. "Pure and unadulterated socialism. It is the President's fact-finding plan settling wage disputes between management and labor. proposes the most dangerous and revolutionary idea to come out of Washington in a decade."

Now let's look at this plan, and see what it would do to American business. When management and labor in an industry are unable to agree upon the workers' wage, the government would intervene and appoint a fact-finding panel. This panel would have the legal right to inspect books of an industry and to find out whether the company's profits were sufficient to warrant an increase in the workers' wage.

The CAW-GIO, you will recall, is now holding out for 20 per cent wage hike on the contention that the profits of automobile corporations are sufficient to cover the extra labor cost without any increase in price to the consumer. The issue is ability-to-pay.

"The new directive of the U. S. Department of Labor says that if the panel finds that a company has the ability to pay higher wages, the rate may be made effective at once, the company may apply, six months later, for a price increase. If it can prove that the wage rise has wiped out a certain margin of profit.

What is the inevitable result of all this? Just one thing: Government control of profit. The government would fix the profit margin. The stockholder would get a fixed rate of dividend. The worker would get a fixed rate of profit through increased pay.

"Thus, you arrive at the first stage of state socialism, socialism by bureaucratic degree, then its incentive for economy or efficiency is killed and the investor loses the incentive to risk his capital in the hope of getting higher earnings. The result is the doom of the free enterprise system. It dries up capital at its very source.

"Under the same principle of administration the next step is also inevitable. Production would drop. Unemployment would follow. And then, the attempt of planned economy. Nationalization of industry is the next step. The government becomes the employer, various through subsidized corporations. Along with this our system of distribution—manufacturer, jobber, wholesaler and retailer—would be knocked into a cocked hat.

"A national economic council at Washington would fix prices, wages, profits and production. It would set up a work, labor board. The government would decide everything. It would determine the employment for all workers in the three of national government by our enemies is war, our government recently to regulate the control of our economy. It is the largest landowner and the greatest owner of manufacturing plants in the country.

"It is a bit strange that was abolished unemployment, that was abolished what the Roosevelt administration had consistently tried to do—provide jobs for workers. We abolished one serious evil, unemployment by turning it another and worse one, war.

"Now, faced with the prospect of a planned society in which the workers were not the stockholder's profit would be fixed by governmental decree. I am willing to concede that we should continue to have planned intervention in business enterprise. But I would like to have legislation by an impartial referee and for outright control by an economic dictator."

The Country Editor paused for a moment.

"I don't forget one thing more," he added. "Small business does not have the profit reserves which the big corporation possesses. Small business cannot follow the same safety procedure through mass production economies. If government intervention is to be gradually planned and finally eliminated, the margin of profit is fixed, not only as it is—especially for a country newspaper, as you will know."

"As I see it, the new doctrine of ability-to-pay, as a variation of how much labor can get, is an open door to state socialism and plan. It hasn't become a law yet."

HOG INFLUENZA MAY CAUSE SERIOUS LOSSES

Earthworms usually found in large numbers around old straw stacks, often contain the lungworm which is the carrier of hog influenza. With the arrival of cold damp weather, swine raisers can look for cases of hog flu.

Proper housing including draft-free ventilation and adequate bedding are necessary if hog flu is to be controlled or prevented. They should be kept from undue exposure. Hogs need dry, warm quarters free from drafts.

As the disease is contagious, sick animals should be separated if a group breeding stock. The droppings should be burned. Little trouble should be met with in the prevention of the disease if the droppings are not allowed to be used as fertilizer. A strong hog well managed will never prove a disease problem.

PRODUCTIVITY OF FARMS MUST BE INCREASED

Warning that farmers are "selling their soul for capital and making it a profit," Dr. George N. Hoff, agronomist of Lafayette, Ind., urged greater application of scientific knowledge and research as a means of maintaining farm productivity.

"Successful farming requires the closest understanding and co-operation with nature," he pointed out. "Agricultural research is directed constantly toward learning more and more of the underlying biological principles governing production of crops as well as animals.

"Better crops and animals are produced by applying these principles and helping the untold handwork of nature."

"Soil tests indicate the available nutrients already in the soil. They point to the need of supplemental applications of fertilizers for maximum yields of nutritious crops."

"Crops are also becoming acquainted with the symptoms of plant-nutrient deficiencies, not only of nitrogen, but of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium and other nutrients which are appearing in many crops in various soils.

"A deficiency of any one of these nutrients may limit profits and lead toward bankruptcy unless remedial measures are applied.

"Due to the constant losses of soil fertility caused by erosion, crop removal, leaching, loss of organic matter, and the failure of some growers to fertilize their crops adequately, practically all crops respond to soil treatment."

THANKS, EVERYBODY

The American Legion and Auxiliary, in behalf of the wounded veterans hospitalized in Michigan, wish to extend their sincere thanks and appreciation to the organization, and individuals who graciously furnished them with Christmas boxes in the "Big '45 'Thrust Who Gave' campaign.

Several boxes were sent from here to Perry Jones hospital at Bath Creek, a truly remarkable record for this community.

NEW POULTRY DISEASE

A new disease, known as "Newcastle disease" is said to be prevalent in many parts of the world, causing severe losses in poultry. It has made its appearance in the United States. Veterinary association authorities say that the symptoms include sudden death, drooping appearance, ruffled feathers, coughing and sneezing, and sometimes nervous disorders such as paralysis or wing paralysis. So far death loss in the U. S. has been low.

THEN AND NOW

ISLAND OF COSTA RICA IS TROPICAL FAIRYLAND

With its territory lifted up into the clouds by the cordillera which crosses it from northwest to southeast, Costa Rica is—with the exception of its hot and humid coastal—a tropical country with a temperate climate. Located in between two oceans, like a beautiful gem that both the Pacific and the Atlantic would claim, its luxuriant highlands are the habitat of jaguars and birds of paradise and strawberries. In a territory roughly the size of West Virginia it has a variety of climates according to altitude, but most of its land lies on high plateaus where sugar estates sprang from drafts.

Along the coasts are the usual palm-fringed bays, inlets and rivers typical of the tropics while the interior, high up on the mountains, may be found scenery resembling that of Switzerland and the Rocky mountains on a smaller scale. These ranges are often covered to the top with grass and by a network of streams and rivulets cascading gracefully down the slopes into fertile valleys whose exceptionally rich soil is produced by volcanic ash deposited over the centuries by the Costa Rican volcanoes, the great majority of which are extinct today.

That is a most favorable location in the heart of the Americas, Costa Rica adds a rich soil well irrigated by rivers and streams an ideal climate healthy and pleasant with alternate rainy and dry seasons and a wealth of natural products among which are small but productive gold mines.

SUPERPHOSPHATE NEEDED

Five to six tons of animal manure reinforced with one-ton bag of superphosphate per ton of manure produces as much increase in yield as does 10 to 12 tons per acre without the superphosphate.

The superphosphate can be scattered over the top of the field of manure before it goes to the field. Or it can be applied in the barn sheds. When used in barns or sheds, it helps to keep down odors as well as reduce nitrogen loss.

PLANE SPEEDED TO GET DDT TO THE PUBLIC SOON

More work was done and understood the speediest means of getting the DDT to the public. The world's most effective insect killer, but modified events warned that it must be used cautiously.

The Dept. A. N. S. sector suggest of the Industrial Hygiene Laboratory, National Institute of Health, found that careless handling of DDT residues—that part of a DDT spray which remains when the liquid-carrying agent has evaporated—may cause toxic effects in humans.

DDT is a tasteless white powder. When it is dissolved in liquids to make a spray it assumes a commercial name of the manufacturer's choice.

Neal pointed out that DDT should be used under conditions which exclude the heavy concentration of food. This means caution in spraying the new insecticide liberally in kitchens or other food-storage areas in the home, he said.

Manchester Enterprise system, there is other information regarding the operation of an industry, especially a large one, to which the owners, those whose investments have provided the plants and tools, the workers and the consumers of its products, the general public, are entitled to access. That information pertains to costs and profits in the production of what we buy. Such information is not the sole property of management, which, in the end, is but the employees of the owners, the stock holders.

With costs and profits known there is a firm foundation on which to base both wages and prices. A foundation which workers must, and the buying public will, recognize. Neither are willing to take merely management's word for these. They want to be shown.

Management cannot afford to be arbitrary on these points as were the railroads more than half a century ago. The railroad's "public be damned" policies brought for them drastic regulatory legislation. The same kind of a policy as the part of industrial management will result in the same kind of legislative treatment.

Senator Knowland's proposal is but a move in that direction. The California senator would open the books of industry to both capital and labor, and that means to the general public as well. It would make earnings the wage basis, with adjustments, upward or downward, at regular intervals. It would make labor a partner in the industry.

With that should be coupled such regulatory legislation as is needed to make labor responsible for unjustified strikes, slowdowns and work stoppages. Repeal the

"MICHIGAN AND THE OLD NORTHWEST"

At Detroit the missionaries came upon a heathen spirit strong, of old.

Plagued by bad luck, they broke the idol and threw it into the river.

They fired a gun hearing the Jesuit fort South Ste. Marie, May 25, 1670.

THE AMOUNT of the federal government taxes to be collected in 1946 represents an average of 29% for each of our 133 million men, women and children. Directly or indirectly each of us will pay approximately our average share. Industry and business may sign the checks, but the amounts they pay are, and must be, added to the price of the commodities we buy. We, the consumers, pay the tax on production and distribution, though the politicians would have us think we do not. Such are the hidden taxes.

HOW MUCH OF THE MASS value of education lies in the teaching of the three R's, and how much in the skills to which much time and attention is given in our schools?

RECALLS VISIT TO E. S. TYPICAL FAMILY HOME THE HERBERT HOOVER home on the campus of Stanford University at Palo Alto, Calif., has been presented to the university by former President Hoover as a memorial to the late Mrs. Hoover. The item reporting that gift recalled the pleasant visit I had enjoyed in that home as the guest of President and Mrs. Hoover. What a typical American home it was. How livable and inviting with nothing suggesting formality. The "den" of Mr. Hoover was an ideal spot for an after luncheon cigar, an enjoyable, informal, give and take discussion of the state of the nation, past, present and future. On the table in the informal living room lay the family album. Mrs. Hoover displayed the pictures to Mrs. Patterson. Photos of the children at different growing-up stages, along with those of cousins, aunts and uncles. It carries me back to days, as a boy in an Iowa parsonage, where the same kind of an album was a family treasure. There were no fills or fancy things, no display of wealth, other than a wealth of mind and true Americanism. In that Hoover home, it was genuinely American in every way and will serve as a fitting memorial to one who, in the White House as "first lady," and in her Palo Alto home, so fully typified the best of American womanhood.

THANKS TO THE generosity of congress, the law reducing the tax on profits is effective January 1, 1946. Because of that the haberdasher assures me he will have a full stock of men's furnishings by February 1. Had congress been a bit more considerate and made that effective date December 1, 1945, I would have received at Christmas presents those things so badly needed instead of having to buy them. That would have been a real congressional Santa Claus.

Better Rural Service for More Rural People
You'll see two specific results come out of Michigan Bell's 5-year $18,500,000 rural expansion and improvement program:
First, it will make telephone service available to more rural folks. Second, there'll be a general improvement in rural service.
Thanks to new scientific devices and new construction methods, we are going to be able to reach into rural areas which have been too remote to serve in the past. Also, our liberal free line-construction allowance, and small monthly payments where construction costs are involved, will make it possible for more people to have telephones.
On the improvement side of the picture, we plan to build more rural lines, and thus reduce the number of parties per line. Whenever practical, we are going to install dial service to increase the speed and convenience of telephoning. And we also are studying other ways of making rural service more valuable than it has ever been before.
We're glad our rural program is under way again. We had started it long before the war, but civilian telephone expansion had to be curtailed during the war. Now that we have begun to get the materials and manpower we need, we are going to push the job just as fast as possible.

THE STORY THIS FAR: Adam Bruce, FBI officer, Inspector Tope and Mrs. Tope met at the Maine woods. Tope had been married at some camp operated by Mrs. Dewain. He was loved by Mr. Ledford. Ledford's friend was found in a hospital with head injuries. His character, Ken, was named, admitted that he had been on the spot when Mrs. Kell was shot. Mrs. Kell was Joe Dene's assistant D.A. returned with her husband. Mrs. Kell had been there at time of murder. The man she called Ken, back might have been Ledford, as his name was Adam.

CHAPTER X
He admitted: "Matter of fact, I thought there was two women in there. I thought she said Ruth. I'll find out later if it was a man and a woman."

Joe took both men in his car back to his house in North Madison. Here were a vital witness; he directed to keep their information limited for a while.

"And you stay here," he insisted. "Don't talk to anybody but I come for you, or send for you. See?"

He went back to the courthouse, where Pringle still held his vigil over Holden. He's been asleep most of the time. "Seems kind of queer. Don't say a word."

Joe nodded. "I've got a hot trail," he reported. "Have you heard anything from Matt?"

"Why, yes," Pringle told him. "They got that car out of the quarry. Telephone for Will Bannister's ambulance here a minute ago. Mrs. Kell was in it. Dead."

Joe nodded again. "Well, I'll run out there, take charge."

He made speed toward the quarry. Beyond Dewain's Mill, in the front seat of a car stopped at a bill-boarding station. He saw Tope sitting alone, his head bowed, apparently asleep. But Joe did not stop. He had no desire to see Tope, though his eyes were closed, was not asleep. Yet he might have been accused for being. He had not been at all for many hours.

When Joe, the night before, took Mrs. Tope away to see her safe, Tope had Adam up to the cabin, where Whitlock and Beal were housed, and knocked on the door. Whitlock and Beal were still awake. "I talked with your boss, boys," Tope told them directly. "Take my word for that. Or do you want to get him on the phone?"

Whitlock consulted Beal with a glance, and Tope added: "I know who put you on this. Charley told me. He said you don't know."

"No," Whitlock admitted.

"Charley gave me your reports up to yesterday morning, the last time you called him up. I'm running through them if you want, above you. I know what I'm talking about."

Whitlock surrendered. "Well, take your word for it," he said.

Tope nodded. "All right. But the party that put you on the job in the first place says you can quit now. But I need you, and Myers says you're to work with me. O.K.?"

Whitlock grinned. "I've heard a lot about you old man. Glad to watch you operate. What is this business anyway?"

Tope for a moment did not answer. Then he said heavily, "I'm glad to see you. It's what I think it is. It's about as bad as thing as ever ran into. And he added grimly: "Unless I'm clear of the track, there are three people dead already—and if we don't watch ourselves, more to come. You boys come along."

They set out in two cars. Whitlock and his associate trailing; and Tope said to Adam: "Go to that lodge, son. I want to see Mr. Eberly."

Adam assented. "Eberly?" he asked.

Tope shook his head. "It's late already," he pointed out. "We'll have to sleep up here, and we're staying with him tonight. So take your time."

"Right," Adam assented. "See if you can get to sleep. We'll try to give you a bumper ride."

Yet with the beat of headlights on the road, Adam's pale face showed a look of narrow-eyed suspicion. He was still a man of narrow eyes, and he was looking at Tope. It was past four o'clock in the morning, and Adam was grimly cursing Joe Dene's idea of distance and of direction before they came at last to a gate he had deciphered—and found it locked. At Tope's direction, Whitlock and Beal stayed here with the cars while Tope and Adam went on, reaching along the winding way. Invariably a gray light came stealing through the woods.

"Daylight," said Tope. "Well, we're time enough." And he asked: "Adam, get your gun!"

"Kid may have brought some one up here that he didn't tell us about," said Tope, and said to more. "Then they came to the lodge, saw the hanging out of signs with an outlook to the west across the lumbered crests or distant woods like the towering bluffs. A car was parked by the door, and some windows were open."

Adam saw Whitlock move as though to speak, knew what the other was about to say. It was early Friday morning, before she could remember in faint, mindless fashion. "More trouble, Bruce?"

"Not for you, son," Adam told him; and he introduced Inspector Tope, leaving it to Tope to explain their presence here.

Eberly read the letter swiftly; he looked at Tope. "Miss Dewain showed this to you?"

"Yes sir," Tope confessed; and he said briefly: "Mr. Eberly, I don't want to try to tell you all that happened. If I told you the story, you'd think more about the questions you want to ask than about the questions I'm asking you. Mind if I don't start explaining at all?"

Eberly was white and still. "What is it you want to know?"

"Why, that's fine," said Tope contentedly. "You know Mr. Ledford pretty well, don't you?"

"I'm probably his most intimate friend," Eberly replied.

"You didn't listen? It's his hours since daylight. Where have you been since then? And why did you bring Mr. Eberly here? And what did you do?"

"Well," he said, "we called on Miss Ledford. It was she who put me against carrying a gun. When it comes to giving a man directions, you're a total loss. We got lost for us for good and all? We didn't find the lodge till daylight."

"You didn't?" Eberly protested. "You didn't listen? It's his hours since daylight. Where have you been since then? And why did you bring Mr. Eberly here? And what did you do?"

DDT in Paint
By W. J. Bryden

A wall paint blended with DDT under a new process has proved an effective "insect control" as long as 16 months after a single application. The paint, "Superior 363," contains 500 milligrams of DDT for each square foot of painted surface and has proven effective against 132 varieties of insects. Tests have shown that seven seconds contact on DDT paint for flies first paralyzes and then kills the insect in 30 minutes. The paint is harmless to humans and is especially effective in milk houses as well as other food handling areas.
