HAVE WE SQUANDERED COUNTRY'S REAL WEALTH?

"No country in the history of the world has ever developed its real wealth as rapidly as the United States."

A tall, gaunt man stood before the audience of 400 Michigan newspaper people and their guests at Lansing. He was passionately sincere about the urgency of preserving and restoring the land as the only sound economy for American prosperity. The newspaper editors listened with unusual attentiveness.

Louis Bromfield, the speaker, was telling the simple story of the land. As author of "Pleasant Valley", he had related the comeback of worn-out agricultural land in Mansfield county, Ohio, where he had been born.

"Real wealth rather than money is the basis of our American economy," he said. "The real wealth of a nation is its reserves of agricultural land, its reserves of oil, its rivers and lakes, the health and intelligence and capacity for work of its people."

"When these are gone or even largely exhausted, we shall cease to be a nation of any wealth, importance or power, or we shall be forced into the precarious banking of a nation like Great Britain which buys its raw materials and finds its markets outside of nation."

"British turned to state socialism because it had bankrupt itself of its real wealth. When our real wealth is gone—these natural resources which we have expended so recklessly—we shall become a third or fourth rate nation. It will not matter how much money we have hoarded at Fort Knox or how many bales of currency are turned out by the government printing press. We shall be through, and the mass of our people will be living at the level of the Chinese."

"That is why the statement of Bernard Baruch, made recently when he said we had best make an inventory of what real wealth remained before we continue expending it wholesale around the world, becomes the most important statement made by an American during our time."

"We have been destroying our real wealth as rapidly as possible; we have squandered out of the country our reserves of oil, timber, of minerals, until many of these are exhausted or on the way to exhaustion."

"We have destroyed most rapidly of all our two most important sources of our real wealth, these are our forests and our agricultural lands. They are the most important because they are restorable or eternally renewable. When these are gone they are gone forever."

"We have already utterly destroyed beyond reclamation, save by possible reforestation, one-fourth of our agricultural land, and most of the rest is on the way out through soil erosion or the soil depletion which accompanies a poor agriculture."

"We have less than a sixth of our forests left and much of this is in government parks and preserves. During the war we cut down our forests five times as rapidly as we are replacing them."

"As our minerals, oils and other natural resources become exhausted we are forced to turn more and more to agricultural land and forests for the substitute to replace them."

"The claim by the British who came here to negotiate a loan that England deserved help because the cost of the war per capita was greater in that country than in the United States is simply untrue. The British paid only in money which in one way or another is renewable under a banking system, while we have paid in oil, in minerals, and other materials in forests and worn-out agricultural land, in the real wealth of the nation, in the foundation of our economy and our past and future economy."

"In the sense of the train upon the real wealth of the nation—Land-Lease was the biggest, most generous and disastrous contribution ever made by any nation to any other in the history of the world. We shall be paying for it generation after generation. Debts of money can be paid off easily enough under inflation, but nothing can restore this nation the real wealth that gives value to that money—the money that we have squandered. It is the forests, the labor of the men who produced it all. All of this was squandered away over the world."

"American agriculture is sick and the sickness pervades the whole of our economy. Its condition is growing worse, not better, because of the declining production per acre and increasing production costs per acre. Our record production during the war years was the most expensive production of food and farm commodities in the history of the world, because most of it was squandered from already worn-out soil."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

MENTIONS TO JAPAN—The Pearl Harbor investigating committee has now spent nearly three months delving into military, naval, political reasons why we were caught asleep on December 7, 1941. While this important, all the facts show that Japan would have attacked anyway, if not at Pearl Harbor, at some other place, and if not on December 7, at some other time.

Meanwhile, we have seized various documents from the Japanese, showing that they were carefully built up over a period of months and that certain American munitions makers were either unsuspecting or deliberate Jap co-operators.

One thing the Pearl Harbor committee—and that presumably is one motive of the Pearl Harbor committee—the manner in which American business aided the Japs to prepare for Pearl Harbor is important. There must be a machinery to this doesn't happen again.

MENTIONS LOBBIES—One thing the Pearl Harbor committee might well investigate is the way lobbies developed in Washington to put pressure on the government to let war goods to Japan. These lobbies, representing oil, gasoline, scrap iron, supplies, machine tools, made a lot of headway with the army and navy, sometimes with the state department.

One man they never accused was Harold Ickes. As secretary of the Interior he controls the export of helium gas, and at exactly the same time the Germans were trying to buy helium from the U. S. A. for their zeppelins.

The army, the navy and Secretary of State Hull gave their okay. But Ickes said no—less American inspectors were stationed in Germany to see how the helium was used. Finally the question came up in cabinet meeting. Secretary Hull gave a long speech, which was perfectly safe to tell Helium to Germany without inspection. As the vote went round the table, every cabinet member voted against Ickes.

But Ickes still said no. Under the law, the secretary of the Interior has absolute control over the export of helium. No one can overrule him. So finally FDR turned to Ickes and said: "Well, Harold, you're the boss. You win."

VETERANS' PROBLEMS—Lt. Col. R. P. Brown, chief of the combat and service branch of the Veterans' Administration, blunked when he was asked a question from a distressed veteran the other day. It read:

"Assistance needed to stop brother murdered here December 20 stop reply by wire."

Colonel Brown instructed an aide to phone the veteran's home city and see that he was given immediate help. This is continued to leaf through the daily file of pleas that come to his desk.

"It's all in a day's work," he said. "But I'll admit, that one had me stumped for a while."

Wide and varied are the SOS appeals the Veterans' Administration receives from men wanting the discharge diploma. "They range from vets wanting to get traffic tickets cleared" to those who want to adopt children, purchase new automobiles or get liquor licenses.

"We're the Little Mother" agency of the government, said the colonel, a two-faced overseas veteran with a sense of humor and four battle stars on his campaign ribbons. "We do our best, but of course we can't please everybody. It would make it a lot easier on us if some of our correspondents realized that their off-the-track problems hinder the handling of thousands of legitimate requests from men seeking benefits under the G. I. Bill at Rights and so on. When they ask us to find them ways, that sort of stamps us."

The love interest is uppermost in unusual V. A. mail. However, a Maryland vet recently wanted help in getting his water main connected.

A West Virginian posed the following 664 question:

"Do you know of an agency that can assist me in finding a wife? I am a veteran of two wars and since months service—age 35 and so far, for some unknown reason, I am unsuccessful in finding a bride. Hope to receive a favorable reply very soon."

CAPITAL CHAFF—Members of congress were not pleased by General Eisenhower's quick departure from the Library of Congress auditorium after he addressed them on demobilization. Admiral Nimitz had sides on hand to answer questions after he spoke, but Eisenhower ducked out right after reading his speech, leaving no one from the army to answer questions.

At Marano, secretary to Congressman Clare Boothe Luce of Connecticut, has a new daughter. Her name—Clare.

SIGNPOSTS OF THE AIRWAYS

By EDWARD EMERINE
WNU Features.

THERE'S a sign on the railroad station which states: "Airway. Elevation 1,884 feet." There are markers on all the roads leading into town which proclaim: "Airway. Population 4,089." But where are the markers that will tell the airplane pilot what town he is flying over?

This is a 64-dollar question these days, with thousands of private planes, many of them in the "pilot-dissemp" class, flying over your town and mine on every day of the week. There may never be as many Sunday fliers as there are Sunday drivers, but in the short time since V-J Day a marked increase in private flying is evident.

Thousands of army planes are being released to the public. Army and navy men, who got the flying bug while in the service, are grabbing them from the government stores and displaying the "cub" type plane in their show windows. Every corner store has its sign for a new airplane, a larger landing field, more adequate hangars and other things to those who own private planes.

Don't forget the marketeer. They are just as important as the landing field, and should be erected whether or not you have an airport or landing strip near your town. In fact, the first thing to do is to show the flier that your town is courteous to air travelers and that calls for air markers.

If an air-minded owner puts a flier pilot back on his course, he will remember that town for a long time. He'll mention it to other pilots, and the word will get around. When everyone in the family, including the grandchildren who are being born, will be as common as signposts on a highway.

Getting the signposts is not a forgotten hazard of aviation. Progressive communities should now take the way for a small amount of work and time expense will pay dividends in a reputation for accuracy and dependability.

Roots Best Place. The best place for an air marker is on the roof of a big building at the edge of your town. In sections where heavy markers are needed, large and isolated buildings, like the grain elevators of the milling towns of the north, make good locations. When markers are placed on sides of buildings, letters and figures should not be less than 10 feet in height.

The side of a mountain with the marker in the air would be the intersection of two main highways on which the information is passed in radio-communicating parts, or the lawn of an institution with the letters formed of aluminum, or a road to be separated by the mountain or north marker. If space permits, an arrow enclosing the name of the nearest hard surface airport, with the number of miles at the head of the arrow, should be included.

The following information is based on a sign because they were west, New York to Los Angeles in 14 hours, 45 minutes and 54 seconds in a stock model Biplane. She is now conducting a national WCA campaign backed by Radio Industries association, seeking to induce every town to erect a sign to create adequate and approved air markers as aids to air navigation, for probably the first time in the history of the world.

Woman Is Head Of Air Marker Branch of CAA

By WALTER A. SHEAD
WNU Washington Correspondent.

A comely widow, hair graying at the temples, her blue eyes twinkling and two big dimples appearing and disappearing with fascinating regularity as she talks animatedly, is less of the air marking section of the engineering division of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the department of commerce.

She is Blanche Noyes, aviation air marking specialist, airplane designer, friend and confidante of the late Amelia Earhart, and for the past nine years an executive with the CAA.

Her husband, the late Dewey Noyes, who taught her to fly, was a mail pilot, co-designer of the Beachcraft twin-engine plane, test and demonstration pilot for Standard Motors with civic clubs, is starting toward a goal of 200 markers. In Wisconsin, she has the National Aeronautics association of Beloit is backing air markers for the state.

The American Legion post of Belmont, N. C., and the Carolina Aero club are working on a state-wide program for North Carolina. The state aviation commissions of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, South Carolina, Minnesota and other states are co-operating with civic clubs in the north, making up FFA, the chambers and junior chambers of commerce of Texas, and installing 200 air markers.

But the need for air markers is nationwide. If there are only a few widely scattered markers throughout the nation, it is apparent that the purpose and full use of them cannot be achieved. It's a job for every community in every state.

The American people are taking to the air. They are flying in their own planes. And they need signposts to guide them. Air markers are the answer.

Things You Know All Along—But which dope are you just fooling out? President Truman is not ill, but the Army has completed plans for a Presidential suite at Walter Reed Hospital. FDR and other gov't officials frequently used the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, Md. Since Mr. Truman served in the Army (in World War I), the Army has no intention of turning over its grip slumbers to Naval medicine, should the need arise.

She is Blanche Noyes, aviation air marking specialist, airplane designer, friend and confidante of the late Amelia Earhart, and for the past nine years an executive with the CAA.

Her husband, the late Dewey Noyes, who taught her to fly, was a mail pilot, co-designer of the Beachcraft twin-engine plane, test and demonstration pilot for Standard Motors with civic clubs, is starting toward a goal of 200 markers. In Wisconsin, she has the National Aeronautics association of Beloit is backing air markers for the state.

The state aviation commissions of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, South Carolina, Minnesota and other states are co-operating with civic clubs in the north, making up FFA, the chambers and junior chambers of commerce of Texas, and installing 200 air markers.

But the need for air markers is nationwide. If there are only a few widely scattered markers throughout the nation, it is apparent that the purpose and full use of them cannot be achieved. It's a job for every community in every state.

BUY THE BEST SEEDS
Seed stocks are ample for the spring planting of most crops in Michigan, according to A. A. Johnson, extension farm crops specialist at Michigan State college. However, he points out that top quality seed of a number of varieties will be short of demand, and early purchasers will have the choice.

The most critical shortages appear to exist for alfalfa and red clover seed. Supplies of hybrid seed corn are sufficient, but a large percentage of the seed is of inferior quality compared to that of other years. Michigan certified hybrid seed corn, which is of superior quality, will take care of about 25 to 30 per cent of hybrid seed.

How do they do it?

Could you produce one-third more crops with 10% less manpower? The farmers of America did it during the last full year of the war.

How? Partly by working themselves and their machines longer, harder. Partly by assisting Allied help with wired help.

Electricity has taken over more and more farm chores. It pumps water, grinds feed, cuts hay, fills silos. It steps up milk and egg and pork production. It eases farm housework, too.

Cheap, dependable electricity has done more than any other force to make farming efficient and farm life comfortable.

Who electrified the farms? Rural electric service didn't happen overnight. It started more than 25 years ago—with America's business-managed electric companies. These companies did the planning—the pick-and-shovel work.

The advantages of electricity on the farm were many. The problem was to get it to the farmer. Distance and weather called for new methods and materials. Each problem was solved in turn by American initiative and ingenuity. Service grew steadily better and cheaper. Farm by farm, area by area, the web of wire expanded.

What of tomorrow? Today, business-managed electric companies serve about 20 million about two-thirds of all electrified farms) and more than 4,000,000 other rural customers outside of incorporated towns. That's real progress.

But the job isn't done. Right now, as fast as men and materials become available, these same companies are extending reliable, low-cost electric service to more than 1,000,000 additional farms and rural non-farm customers. These companies are increasing $250,000,000 for construction alone.

This program is under way right now.
