KAISER FRASER AGENCY NOW OPEN HERE

James W. Cannon has opened the Kaiser Fraser agency here at 227 W. Main Street and expects on Monday, together with the Kaiser Fraser, the "power plant" of a motorized saw. In addition to his sales, Mr. Cannon will handle a complete line of tires, batteries and accessories and will offer a complete tire service for all cars. The Kaiser will be the first American car in the low-price line to have front wheel drive with the steering, transmission, and final drive assembly form a single "package" power unit mounted forward in a manner which makes it possible for the engine, transmission and differential to be lifted clear for easy service. Unlike other types of front wheel drive, the Kaiser engine is placed forward of the front driving axle, thus maintaining a more constant center of gravity and resulting in better traction on hills and under all driving conditions. The Kaiser is the first mass-produced car in America to have independent "torsion bar" suspension on all four wheels. Twisting action of road-treated steel bars gives new smoothness of ride at all passenger loads. Hydraulic shock absorbers complete this unique body and chassis form a single unit of type known as "monocoque" construction, eliminating strain, shifting between body and frame, and body squeaks. "Throughout the past four years, Mr. Kaiser said, "every engineer in the Kaiser automobile was subjected to rigid tests and we now have completed the whole by adding the most beautifully designed body in the industry."

LOCAL LIBRARY BOARD MEMBERS AT CONFERENCE

Mr. Frank Lowry, president of the Manchester Township Library Board and Mrs. Mason Farrell, board member, attended the state library trustee conference at Kalamazoo on May 27 and 28. The two day session was designed to assist board members in meeting the problem of public library administration. One of the most important new books at the Manchester Library is the World of None edited by Dexter Masters and Katharine Way. It has a report to the public on the full meaning of the atomic bomb and has been one of the best sellers in fact books for the year because of its non-technical, step by step analysis of the basic problems involved in the use of atomic energy. If you've been wanting to read Detroit in My Home Town the author Binney. Other books for adults are Tomorrow House by Nelson and Wright; The Fields by Richter; Sorcerer's Country by Jacques; Deborah by Castle. O' children's books are The Crooked Tree by Wright is a gift of Mrs. E. J. Bartles.

Head off costly repairs, breakdowns with FRAM FILTRON OIL FILTERS!

Driving with impure oil in your car, truck or tractor can do as much damage as driving with no oil. . . It just takes longer. Dirt, grit, carbon and sludge increase wear on moving parts and lead to breakdowns, costly repairs. But, with the new Fram Filtron oil filter, abrasive particles as small as one-thirtieth of an inch are filtered out. Result: you add trouble-free miles to the life of your tractor, truck or car!

Ask Your Dealer

If your tractor, truck and car have no filters, your dealer will install Fram Filtron filters to help save motor trouble, breakdowns and costly repairs. If your equipment is already filtered, have them checked. The Fram Filtron filter is a "one-stop" filter. It's in the oil pan, and it's in the oil filter. It's in the oil filter. It's in the oil filter.

REPORT ON THE RUSSIANS.....

W. L. White

INSTALLMENT SEVENTEEN

When the opera closes we are weary beyond words and long for bed. We are to leave early in the morning. But the handsome vice-premier is firm. After we have finished the banquet here at the opera, we must see the opera theater where a special program has been prepared for us.

This open air theater is packed to the hilt with a crowd of nine-thousand Russians and one-thousand Czechs. They are singing an aria from "Marta," immensely popular in the Soviet Union. A jigger fellow, and then the grand finale: ornate girls prance out in costumes made in our honor—red and white striped tunics, and blue, star-spangled brassieres. Happily they sing a Russian translation of "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

I talk for a while with the little Uzbek mayor, next to me at the table. But the vice-premier is talking. It is his broad-shouldered driving energy which has caught the attention of the European states. Russia and planted them in the desert, which has put millions to work clamoring rivers, building industries and carving out the new Russia.

He is sure of himself, of the driving power of this Bolshevik system and of the new world it is opening up among ancient Oriental tribes. He is telling us that he is glad he had this chance to show the new Russia to Mr. Johnson and to the American press. I liked him and his province.

Then the fat little Tass correspondent came up. He was pretty tight, and his German was staccato than usual. "The Western day the war in Finland," he said, "das ist ein kleine Sache nur." There he smugly his finger in the air, little thing and is now forgotten of me. He cause it was long ago that I was in Finland, and now they will trust me to be objective.

I thank him for this compliment and their trust, assuring him that my passion for Finland is now buried under rivers of Soviet champagne. So at least I can be objective.

For here we leave them. Kirilov announced they may go by train to Boharna and Saransk tomorrow, while we go on this morning to Akh-kabad, the last Russian town on the Pacific border.

The reporters and all the Russian came down to the airport to see us off. In the car I ride with Nona. As we drive down a boulevard (Fashin) is very well paved the sidewalks are wide and the cottage of her mother and father, a retired engineer. They live in the penthouse of 1000 rubles a month, which in peacetime is decent but now is too little. But fortunately they own their house. You can now own a house in Russia and it is a profit of course, the land belongs to the state. If they ever need it for a government store or apartment, they may pay only the interest as much as 10,000 rubles. Nona says, and you have ten years to pay.

A doctor or dentist, who, of course, works in a state hospital may have a private practice after hours, and charge what he likes. But as the patients may not share of the collective's vegetables for any price, after the government has bought what it needs at the best low price. However, the doctor must conduct his private practice not at the hospital, but in his own home, and must provide his own instruments.

Atchabad has, like the others, an old Oriental section, but the new Russians from its surrounding laid out and well paved. In the center is an irrigated park, an oasis of green in the police desert dust which blows everywhere. And in the park, under this brilliant sun, is a veritable forest of Soviet-era statues, mostly Stalin. He is always striding along in his long overcoat with the ear flaps down, heavily furred, just as he is under the Arctic Circle. It seems odd. We went to get a canopener and rescue him.

Since we left Moscow, we have noticed that when his name is mentioned, less and less do the Russians help liberally to their last over-owning furniture, although his opportunity is as great.

The rug factory is most interesting. I have watched many women weavers, but these Turkmen girls have greater skill and a more delicate craftsmanship. They decked out in beautiful native costumes, wearing lovely, hand-woven, merced gold and silver jewelry. In weaving they squat beside the looms, using both their hands and toes to hold the threads and the knots. As we pass through they work liberally but I happen to return to one shop and did them relaxed, knitting and crocheting.

The sad thing is that the Communist NOLVAU RICHE who, to demonstrate their loyalty, pay staggering prices for this beautifully woven junk, may convince the Turkmen craftsmen that Marx's busy beard or Stalin's shaggy eyebrows are things of more breathtaking beauty than their ancient native patterns.

The day closes with a 15-mile trip through the blistering desert to the "horse factory." These desert nomads, like the Arabs and the men of our own Southwest, have always been proud of their mounts. They are shrewd traders and breeders of horses.

In the stifling heat of my hotel room, the good-natured chambermaid suggests by gestures that I would sleep better if I called my cot onto the balcony. The sun rises early. I look down on a courtyard of square-tiled terraces, windows open and Russians sleeping everywhere, sometimes under shelter but often stretched out on the ground. The yard itself is filled with blonde, blue-eyed, fair-skinned Slav babies—two, three, four and five-year-olds toddling around, some wearing slits and some not, beginning their early morning play before the sun is too hot.

I am amazed at this seeming, fertile, hard-working, long-suffering, indefatigable race, which now sprawns down here in this irrigated valley as it does under the Arctic Circle. Properly we think of Russia's empire as a relatively empty place. There is still elbow room for this generation—but what of the next? When the collective farms are so full of people that they can no longer feed themselves or the factories—what then? The problem is not one for our times, since today Russia, like England and America, is one of the "have" nations with a comfortable share of the world's grain and raw materials.

Today these well-to-do Slav babies play in the desert sun, resenting like all babies, in the dust of the courtyard just under the mountains which divide the Soviet Union from Persia.

At the airport we say good-bye to our good friends Nesterov and Kirilov, who, like mine, were not fully watched over us and our contacts.

But we were not quite through with the Soviets. At the Tiberian airport they told us that the Russian Ambassador was tendering us a final dinner.

Our final Soviet dinner was in the Soviet Embassy dining room. A few old comers out of Tehran, the British, French, and American, had not all left but the viewpoint had, after Moscow they now seemed smartly dressed.

The dinner was European—soup to salt to entrée to salad to dessert to coffee, with brandy at the end of the toast.

The Russian Ambassador got up and said there were good reasons why Russia in the past had been hospitable to foreigners. Even today, he said, there were reasons. There was, for instance, in Switzerland, the Bank of International Settlements. An American was a member of the board, and also a German. During the war this bank had been closed to do business. Therefore, he said, the Soviet Union had good reason to be careful of foreigners.

When the Soviet Ambassador sat down Joyce was on his feet. For weeks we had been sheltered both by hospitality and the ever-present but golden moment of the Japanese. Presently it was time to go home. He said good-bye and went. This ends my report on the Russians and here are my conclusions. I should add that these, as well as the general viewpoint of this book, are entirely my own, and not to be charged to any good friend, Erle Johnson.

Any close relations with the Soviet Union are fraught with considerable danger to us until American reporters get the same freedom to travel about Russia as we have. We should remember that Russia is not hostile to her. We should also remember that American aid in building back her destroyed industries is highly resented in Russia. It is not indispensable. She will swap it for what she considers her security in the world.

She is, however, in a mood to accept decent compromises. But if we as our arms are in Europe, while this settlement is being worked out, we find we can get everything we want, we can get it, and we can get it to get mad, pick up our toys and go home.

If we decide it is wise to do business with the Russians, we can trust them to keep their end of any financial bargain. They are a proud people, and can be counted on to get mad, pick up our toys and go home.

But any business deals should depend on their aims in Europe and Asia. We should extend no credit to Russia until it becomes much clearer than it now is that her ultimate intentions are peaceable.

I think these intentions will turn out to be friendly. However, while we move our armies out of Europe before the continent is stabilized, and disarmed, bloodied and rife with enemy, the Russians will move into any such political vacuum. After all, they are not stupid. Russia for the present needs no more territory, and she has had several decades of peace. She is, however, plagued with suspicions of the capitalist world. As Americans we must work on a basis of delicately balanced fairness and friendliness. To do this, the Roosevelt administration has done an excellent job of this, in an unbecomingly difficult situation. (THE END)
