CHILDREN NEED
STORY TIME DAILY
When little Johnny or Susy beg,
"Read me a story, picase", it is wise for Mother or Dad to take a little time out for story time. If you've had trouble getting them to bed, and to sleep at night, a story imay be your answer.

Reading or Telling stories to a child helps him relax, reports Eilen Algiers of the Michigan State college nursery schoel. No child can be expected to fall asleep quickly and easily if he has just finished an exciting game or romp. A quiet time with a book is good for him.
Children like to look at books and pictures by themselves, too. Often meal time becomes more calm and enjoyable, when children six quietly and look at books and pictures by themselves, too. Story time can be anytime. During the day it gives both you and your children a time for relaxation and conversation. "Told" stories are equally as good. Without a book and its pictures you can substitute motions and direct talking to the child.

Stories are a source of both entertainment and information. Interest in subject matter will change with your child from day to day and month to month. Simple nursery rhymes usually are sungto the baby. These are his first stories. The child of two is interested in stories about minutel in another year he likes to bear about animals he knows, cars, buses and every day things. Later he will like stories with a plot, stories of people in other countries, and stories of make believe.

Requests for stories should come from every child of two years up to the junior high school age. A broad knowledge of books, stories and literature is his rightful heritage.

25.315 ALLOTED TO PHEASANT RANGE

For plantings to aid wildlife on 300 sample farms between now and June 30, the conservation commission at its March meeting allocated 125.315. The money comes from the Pittman-Robertson fund, and covers, seed, seedling shrubs and trees and fencing, as well as the cost of making technically sound plans for the plantings.

The 300 private farms to be improved this spring are "just a start" game men say, on a long range program to develop "islands" of food and cover for wildlife throughout the pheasant range—the intensively farmed southern third of Michigan,

Well-informed government official thinks they cannot. I am awfully slow to put a limit on what free men in a free country can do. But it must be said that the present threat of fuel shortage results from the abnormally low price that government maintained on crude oil during the war and thereofter.

The Danger is There
This should underscore the danger of giving the government power to set prices. Even now, such power can be misused. It could happen that price control now might well obstruct the building of homes, hospitals, and factorics — five years from now. Free markets and free prices are the only sane controls. prioss are the only sane controls. These have given America higher wages for workers, better income for farmers, and better living conditions than any other system.
