The reason is simple, in checking the action of the radioactive chemicals moving out of ties out and into and through the plant, the scientists make use of the delicate "traces" method. Counting instruments delicat and record the passage of charges molecules as they pass through the plant tissues. It is necessary to have exact knowledge as to the radiant energy present at the start of the experiment. This is possible by using fresh soil, a new container and exactly measured quantities of radioactive chemicals.

But if a clay container had been used previously, the pot would have become at least slightly radioactive, and so would add some unpossible to experiment, it would complicate the experiment, it would disturb what the scientists term the "contrest" of conditions, "EVEREADY" BATTERIES OUTLAST

"He doesn't firsh, gamble, play about up the other woman. He is a divoked husband and father, popular and friendly. Well, then, what is in! I'll tell you. Bob thinks, talks, dreams of nothing but money, whan less manife anough, but at home it is money — money — money. He feels that he doesn't earn enough, that we don't save, that I am estrawagant.

that we don't save, that I am extravagant.

"Now, the point is, I'm not extravagant. I teep a nice house, with only one day's domestic help every week. I dress seconomically, and while Bobby goes to a private school, he has twice won scholarships that out that expense down to $100 a year. Food, of course, is a big item; we are all healthy eaters and we entertain moderately. We have one car, used mostly by me. We do not save money, but our bills, all added together, would not total $1,000. Among our friends, somewhat similarly situated, I think we would be considered unusually fortunate and completely solvent. So, at 40, he sees himself trapped. He is not saving a cent. His home penses? "Russt we buy that, dear?"

why this eternal anxiety about expenses? Must we buy that, dear? Is it necessary to paper the dining room? The boy has to have rollerskates, I suppose? That's what I get day in and day out.

"Bob's people were very poor. My own were not, I had a lovely home, and my father still is employed and independent; mother died years ago. Can you give me a few good suggestions as to how! can cure my services.

So, at 40, he sees himself trapped. He is not saving a cent. His home excerning a cent. His home excerning with the inexpension are increasing with the inexpension are reported. Your problem is not unusual. It is safe to say that m all our cities there are blocks and blocks of small respectable, comfortable apartments whose breadwinners are as anxious as Bob. Where does the

"It seems to be growing on him all but I per cent — note that figure of our early married years he as much more generous, and when or Europe. Private school, beauty of Europe. Private school, beauty of Europe. was much more generous, and when we were engaged I actually had to sold him for his extravagance. But of late he grows less and I-sa willing to spend money, and the result is that our home atmosphere is uncomfortable and strained Feeling that his may be the result of early inhibitions. I have asked him to go to a psychiatrist but he rejected this suggestion utterly. Years ago, when you wrote that money was the most important element in marriage. I did not believe you, but I do now.

I think this situation. Marcia, move from that $35 fast to a plain little cottage somewhere on the outskirts of town. Put Bobby in public achool. Do your own hair. Cut down, cut down, not that $150 of that $300 a month can go into government bonds. Talk revealing that in our American domestic seems today. And I think the cure lies with you, rather than with Bob.

When you married you selt that if you had a dick bone, and pake your bills, that was enough. Perhaps it was, then. But it is not now. Bob feels the changing temper of the times; apparently you don't. Bob always has worked hard, he knows the value of money. You never have learned it.

Bob is in the employ of an impress pour richer friends and in the part of the load. Relieve him of worry and the won't mind plain meals. Stop trying to impress your richer friends and in the has what the old books used to prettily call a helpmate. Bob knows we have stormy weather shead to the part of the load. Get ready for it. Shorten sall.
