WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

South Receives Wallace With Fury; CIO Pledges to Support President; Berlin Meetings May End Stalemate

By Bill Schoenigen, WNU Staff Writer

WALLACE: Pure Hate

Henry Wallace claimed that his expansive love for his fellow men had not been diminished by his ex-patriation in the South, but it stood as a fact that the ramparts of that abiding affection must have undergone a severe test.

As the Progressive party's presidential candidate Wallace had gallantly penetrated into the southern states to bring them his brand of enlightenment.

Crowd Fury

Henry Wallace, Progressive party candidate for President, was surrounded by a mob of angry demonstrators in Charlotte, N. C., who were shouting and waving flags.

BERLIN: Some Talk

The sound of sabers rattling in Berlin means this time that the dispute in the fight over control of the German capital were merely laying down their swords to get together and talk about it once more.

It was an ugly display of bad taste that spread hysterically from town to town as Wallace's tour progressed. The egg and tomato tossing was severely criticized by top U. S. officials, including President Truman who called it "highly un-American business."

Nevertheless, in North Carolina Wallace's stay was confined to the most part-to-protestations against the treatment he was receiving.

As Wallace left North Carolina to head into Alabama and Mississippi it looked as though he might be able to use some "profund comment" for himself, for his racial views are spotted even more widely in those states.

BACKING: For Truman

As the two major presidential candidates prepared to swing their campaigns into full career in preparation for the November elections, some good news reported by President Truman.

The CIO officially threw its support for the Democratic ticket and pledged the organization to work for his election.

That was the way the CIO had written itself on the political books this year, but the action left the organization shimmering with internal discord.

Bitter protest of 12 letter-writing leaders had led to the divorce before the CIO could cast its lot with Truman and Barkley.

As for the way the CIO had written itself on the political books this year, but the action left the organization shimmering with internal discord.

"Farming" Versus "Ranching"

Talked to some editors who run my column in their papers—in states where there's mostly cattle and sheep raising—about the differences there might be between farming and ranching.

And they told me: "You, then, are a real difference between cattlemen and farmers. We make our living from the land like your folks do; we have the same 4-8 Club and Grange; the same problems of prices and marketing. When it comes to recreation, we have the same liking to get to."

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS NEED MATH, U-M SAYS
ANN ARBOR—Sept. 15—High school students who hope to go to college should examine the mathematics requirements of the college course they plan to take, a committee of Michigan college mathematics has warned.
Philip S. Jones, professor in mathematics at the University of Michigan and a member of the committee, points out that high school graduates may enter college even though they did not take mathematics in high school. However, many college courses of study, particularly in scientific and technical fields, will be closed to them.
"By high school mathematics, we fear at least a year of algebra and a year of geometry," Jones explains. "Many high school students fail to realize that these courses, taken in high school, are required for admission to a great many college classes, not only in science and engineering but also in such fields as economics, nursing, political science and sociology."

ADVISES ON CHOOSING FALL COAT FASHIONS
In choosing your new fall coat style this year, remember it's the silhouette that counts. If you're wondering about the fall fashions of last season—they're still fashion's first choice.
Best news about the "flaring backs" believes Marjorie Eastman, extension clothing specialist at Michigan State College, is that they are somewhat less extreme and more wearable. They have a slimmer look due to smooth-fitting shoulders and controlled fullness. In the moderate price range fashion favors the casual boy

This is cut with a yoke and...
Some of these new booby coats are sold with an extra belt of fabric or leather, so you can make your own silhouette—straight or fitted. This type of coat usually has a large collar. Sleeves are set in with a smaller shoulder pad than was used last year. Zip-in linings will continue to be good.
Although the big coat, generous in cut, is in first place, you may expect to find fitted coats also, especially in higher price brackets. Any popular model is cut on princess lines, with small fur collar and narrow rounded shoulders.
Black is at the top of the color card, with gray a close second. Other choices include wine, hunter green and deep bruno.
Smooth, rich materials of the broadcloth type are featured, with tweeds and camel's hair fabrics for the college crowd.
A trend to watch is the coat ensemble, coat matching or contrasting with a dress or suit.

Caution Against Homemade Fence
Farm safety specialists at MSC urge farmers to use care in the selection and use of electric fence. Home made electric fence controllers are a gamble.
The specialists point out that a very small shock can be fatal. Even a small shock can be fatal. Even a small shock can be fatal.

Farm Drivers To Get 18 percent
Other Drivers 11 percent

The over-all reduction totals approximately 18 percent for farm family drivers, including collisions, public liability and property damage coverage.
The new rates became effective June 3. Benefits of the change will affect policy holders at the time they renew their policies.

THE FICTION CORNER
BACK SEAT SAX
By CATHERINE BARRETT

M' NAME is Joe, but the fellows in the orchestra call me Bumpy. They're nice fellows all right and they don't do it to hurt my feelings, but I'm scared of auditions, and every time I get up in front of one my mouth starts to twitch and it makes my nose wiggle—like a rabbit's. I've seen myself in a mirror and I get so mad if I see one of the fellows I'd be calling me Bumpy, too. You get what I mean?

Nine years I've been in Jake Little's orchestra playing the sax and the bassoon. First we used to go out on the road, but now we've got a seat little spot in Hollywood. Jake likes me and he knows I play the sweetest sax he ever heard, but a long time ago he quit paying me my parts because sure as I ever set up where I faced an audience I'd get nervous and my darned nose would twitch—and—well, there I was.

I've had to sit back and watch plenty of other fellows come and go, getting the notes, getting the hands, getting the rattle in pay, and getting new and bigger contracts some place else. Now it's Charley's wheel.

I play better's he does—oh, that ain't bragging—even Charley'll tell you that. Only Charley's got the personality. And he's good looking. And Marge likes him. That's the rub.

Marge is head over here at the moment. One of those cute little shabby-crowd girls in the suits and shoes. For've seen her in picture houses down the town and downtown. She's got them light blue cat-gauze eyes. I'm worried I think to look at Marge that she's like she is. Practical and hard working.

She's had a tough time, see. She's twenty-two but you'd never guess it. And she's got a kid five years old. The cutest little brat you ever saw. Vinnie. Vinnie likes me 'cause 'Why do they call you Bumpy?' she says to me, and she looks at my sax like she thinks maybe they'll grow up out of my back.

"Honey," I says to her, "you're not going to marry Charley, are you?"

"Well, I don't know," she says. "I could calm him down a little. And if he had a wife to see that he got started to work on time..."

It gets me worried, see, and begins to think that I want to go married to Marge so bad that maybe I could handle a solo spot and not go twitching and mad. I ask Jake Little to give me a try.

And he does, on one of the main-roads.

Do I go over his? No, I sit back there and I don't look at the audience but I know it's out front. All them eyes. I begin to sweat and my mouth goes to jumping. I signal Jake and he gets Charley to take over.

I don't even ask Marge to let me take her home, I just go on to my own place. And I think about it more. Charley's playin' his piece.

Stand there and go through the motions. First thing I know I find myself leaning down at that audience. You know, it's funny, but that's the first time I ever saw the people in an audience. It ain't an act, it's a woman that runs the restaurant where I eat, or the one who sits across the way on the bus.

And what do you think I see, why, right there in the front row is Vinnie. With a grin all the way across her little pink face. And clear in the back is Marge, and she's watchin' me so hard her eyes are round and shiny.

Well, sir, they both begins wiggling again, and I can't breathe. My lips untwines. In a minute I'm shaking them as easy as you can be. Boy, is that a good feeling!—like sportin' wings.

There'll be like a bird on the loose when the show's over and Marge comes back. She rushes past me over to—"Oh, she says, 'Boy, is that a good feeling!—like sportin' wings.'

That night Marge put her hands on my shoulders and says, "Joe, I think you're going places." Then she leans against me and puts her face into my coat. "Will you take me with you?" she says.

And there's Vinnie dancing around us clapping her hands, and saying, "Me, too, they, ma, too!"

She looks at me and her eyes get shiny, and I've never seen her mouth so right and you carried right on," she said, and her voice sounded like it does when she talks to Vinnie just before Vinnie goes to sleep. "That was cute of you, Joe," she says.

And she takes hold of my arm again and says, "I promised Vinnie you'd take us out for a bite of dinner 'till you."

Just then Charley—goes by. "Hello, Charley," Marge says, and turns her back on him, plain as day.

I'm beginning to see how much I love the guy and I says "Thanks, Charley," and he just shakes his hands above his head and grins and says going.

And Marge just says "Come on, Vinnie," and holds out her hand.

"Vinnie frowns a little. 'Can't I wait on the other side and hold Joe's hand?'"

So she does.

That night Marge put her hands on my shoulders and says, "Joe, I think you're going places." Then she leans against me and puts her face into my coat. "Will you take me with you?" she says.

And there's Vinnie dancing around us clapping her hands, and saying, "Me, too, they, ma, too!"

I LOVE the sparrows, but though they may be, And you would love them, too, if you had kin Long hours with them alone for company, And if their friendliness had eased your pain.

Gay days, gay days, gay sparrows on bare trees, Yet something in their chatter says so true, I often think a sparrow's voice must please The Lord as much as lady's and thrush's do.

Remember this—An see two sparrows sold For one small farthing, yet see one may fall Without the feather's wit. This I hold More close than any confining as all.

And fast ye see, therefore—O little birds, Your names bring the solace of these words.

The built in draft regulator is adjusted to the factory and makes a neat looking job than the old style regulator in the pipe.

"TIME TO SEND IN THE FIRST TEAM"

Football Season Opens Here Friday Night

Michigan Center Here; Two On Injured List

The Flying Dutchmen will open their football season tomorrow night when the Michigan Center Eleven will invade the local gridiron. (The local lads defeated this aggregation a year ago, 6-0, at Michigan Center.)

Although two star players, Alger Clark and Roy Gehring, are out of the lineup due to injuries, the team is showing lots of pep and fight in their scrimmage and should be in good shape for the opening game here Friday night.

Coach Stark is not doing any forecasting, but is certain that his team will furnish plenty of competition for all its opponents.

Coach Stark is new here this year. He has coached at Michigan Center for the past three years, and has been a member of the Michigan Public Safety Commission, who serve as referees in the behalf of the people to see that consumer and investor alike get a fair deal.

How much? That depends on the judgment of three men, members of the Michigan Public Safety Commission, who serve as referees in the behalf of the people to see that consumer and investor alike get a fair deal.

We chatted recently with Stuart L. White, Niles, chairman, and his two commissioners: Schuyler L. Marshall of St. Johns and Henry L. Woolfeisen of Detroit. It was a late summer day, quiet in order to free him, said the referee, one summer vacation, and it was not any too happy about it.

Public Utilities

Facing Inflation

Inflation is fast catching up with Michigan public utilities.

The impact will soon reach the consumer's pocketbook.

Utility rates are going up, if they haven't done so already.

How much? That depends on the judgment of three men, members of the Michigan Public Safety Commission, who serve as referees in the behalf of the people to see that consumer and investor alike get a fair deal.

Bridgewater Man Seriously Injured

Gale Adair, 30, a Bridgewater farmer, suffered injuries of unknown extent late Friday afternoon when he was pinned for three hours under the tractor which tipped over on him as he plowed a field along M-11, one mile west of Bridgewater.

Mr. Adair's condition is so serious that he is expected to be in a hospital or orphanage.

Neighbors, who showed early in the morning, said the tractor was apparently upset after hitting a deep furrow about 5:30 Friday morning.

The injured man was taken to Footie hospital at Jackson where his condition is as well as can be expected.

Sharon Farm Bureau

On Friday evening Miss Mamie Adams, Lawrence, Waver, entertained the Sharon Farm Bureau at their home, where 18 present. Delegates were elected at the convention meeting at Lansing. There were Clyde Gieske, Walter Fry and Ann Feldkamp.

Clare, Miss. E. Steeger of Kalamazoo, was chairman of the convention. Mrs. Ed Wagner and Mrs. Robert Armstrong, Detroit, were also present.
