The idea of May as almost here, and the Michigan State legislature is still in special session.

Since March 1, when legislators assembled at the capitol a virtual tug-of-war has prevailed between the Republican dominated legislature and Governor G. Mennen Williams.

Using his constitutional right to limit legislation in a special session, Governor Williams has limited that approximately $112 million in additional government spending must be financed by a state income tax on corporation profits.

The Governor declined to permit the legislature to increase the gasoline and weight tax in 1951, as advocated by road boosters, saying that this need, too, should be paid by business from its profits.

By and large the legislative program of the Governor seems to be an echo of the "fair deal" of President Truman, as applied to Michigan.

As we have pointed out so often, the needs of an expanding population and the cries of special pressure groups are considered. It is more than apparent that the Republicans have undertaken to deliver a miracle. Already, demands are pouring into the legislature to make an exception for this worthy cause and that public need.

one, if they are to achieve the difficult objective. The Republican committee chairmen point out that considerable time has been consumed since March 1, when the legislature began its special session, in preparing a budget to fit anticipated revenues during the coming fiscal year (July 1, 1950-51).

The original budget prepared for Governor Williams was approximately $110 million in the red as based on anticipated state income from existing taxes. This has been swollen to more than $112 million by addition of new requests for further spending.

The general record of legislative bodies whether congress or state legislature, has been to spend more and more money. Michigan taxpayers are weary from taxes and would welcome a genuine movement to restore economy in government.

While Democrat leaders point to the Truman reelection as proof that economy is not popular, and by contrast that government spending is here to stay, the Republican finance leaders in the legislature have put the party on pledge not to levy a new tax and not to increase government spending in 1951.

When the needs of an expanding population and the cries of special pressure groups are considered, it is more than apparent that the Republicans have undertaken to deliver a miracle.

Already, demands are pouring into the legislature to make an exception for this worthy cause and that public need. As there is obvious merit to all needs, according to your individual viewpoint, it is more than obvious that the Republicans will have to hold the line.

Washington County and the counties adjoining will receive checks in the following amounts: Wayne, $10,383,000.57; Oakland, $11,674,375.29; Washtenaw, $141,150.28; Jackson, $280,827.40; Livingston, $173,227.83.

Michigan tourist operators can expect another healthy 10 percent increase in their $800,000-1,000,000 business this season if the weather continues to cooperate. That is the prediction of Harry N. Rogan, who watches vacation habits of 800,000 Michigan motorists as Automobile Club of Michigan's travel manager.

The unusually mild winter just past, which hurt winter sports business, will benefit summer resorts many times more. For a lot of Michigan folks who normally go south did not make the trip this year. They'll help increase tourist business up north the rest of the year, Rogan said.

Michigan's tourist business, its second largest industry, is dismissed too casually by many people not directly connected with it. Actually when it attracts visitors or keeps its own folks at home for vacations, every person in Michigan benefits, Rogan pointed out.

More competition, more advertising, and lower prices are recorded all over the nation. About a million dollars have gone into renovation of old-type accommodations in Michigan since last season, a survey shows. A.A.A. field surveys and tour book findings show that the number of overnight rooms in Michigan has increased about 10 percent over last year. Many new motels, motor courts and cottage group accommodations and rooms with bath are among these.

One of the fine high-quality accommodations to be built in Michigan recently is that near the complex on Lake Huron just outside Oscoda, on US-22. There's still a shortage of rooms with bath at some of the best resort areas.
