It seems like downright foolishness to me, in this day of high efficiency and necessity for cutting every cost corner possible, for a farmer to sack up his grains, haul them to town, pay for grinding and mixing, haul the mixture home and store it with the hazard of rats and mice getting into it. Poultry have the the best of rats and mixe getting into it.

Poultry have the the best grinding and mixing equipment that we know of right in their own intestinal tract. You have your own grains in your bins. Take it right out to your chicken coop and come in and see us about some "KASCO FREE CHOICE CONCENTRATES". You will buy only the the other costs, fuss and bother.

Besides your birds will do better. They know better than we do what protein, vitamins, minerals and other special factors found in KASCO Concentrates that they need.
