HINTS FOR HOMEMAKERS

LOTS OF CLOSETS ARE WONDERFUL IF THEY ARE PROPERLY EQUIPPED

If you're buying a house already built you have no choice in the matter; you just have to "make do" with the closet space as it is.

But if you're planning to build your own house, you can have all the closets you want—and need.

And you can plan the closet space that there will be a place for everything in it. That means not only allowing enough room for arranging the clothes, but also for the floor level of the room outside, as a protection against dust and dirt.

Another basic closet for your house plan is one for jeans. You may find it easier to store folded or canned jeans in a closet than in a wardrobe.

Wardrobe closets should also feature a door raised a few inches above the floor level of the room outside, as a protection against dust and dirt.

Generally, you will want a hanging closet, equipped with side shelves, for the storage of folded or canned cleaning materials. Have several good-sized screw books in the cubing of the closet and along the back wall for the door handles and brooms, and small screw hooks on the inside of the door for brushes and cleaning cloths.

Naturally, your vacuum cleaner and its attachments will be the No. 1 item in a leading closet.

Other "specialty" closets which you ought to consider include a children's closet (for toys—located as close as possible to the youngsters' play area), a sports closet (for bathing suits, footballs, pool clubs, baseball bats and other athletic equipment), a gardening closet (preferably in the garage, with room for rakes, hoes, shovels and miscellaneous gardening tools), and a "mad" closet. A "mad" closet is particularly valuable during the inclement winter months. It's the place where overcoats, rubbers, raincoats, snowsuits and umbrellas can be kept—so they won't have the problem of being members tracking rain and snow and mud all over the house before they remove their outdoor clothes.

Glorify Budget Meals With Ice Cream

It's very comforting in these days of soaring meat costs and the search for budget main dishes to know our favorite old American stand-by is as wonderful, nutritious and economical as ever. We refer to ice cream, of course. No matter that meat portions are smaller and less choice; the meal ends in splendor when there's ice cream for dessert. If you buy it at your super market pre-packaged in the past or half-gallon cartons, you'll find the cost per serving right in line with your budget plans. And it goes especially well with the fresh fruits so abundantly available here. For a real, hearty treat, serve pre-packaged ice cream with cantaloupe, blueberries, raspberries, peaches or applesauce.

How Christmas Cards Came to America

(Continued from page 2) or face-lifting period. Then in 1866, Messrs. Marcus Ward and Co. of Belfast, Ireland, were commissioned by an English firm to lithograph a set of four designs by the artist, C. H. Bennett. Reproductions from this set, it seems, were the forerunners of the first "popular" Christmas cards.

Standards for Christmas cards published by Marcus Ward and Co. were extremely high. For years this firm monopolized most of the better-class trade. The Ward cards were conventional almost always, and the finished product embodied the Christmas scenes, forest designs and beautiful hand lettering.

Before the 1860's—the same era which saw the rise of the fishing—had passed, the exchange of colorful Yuletide greeting cards was of English origin, and the most cherished custom.

By the late 1860's, the exchange of Christmas cards was so popular that many of the leading publishers in New York City, a possible 25 years, he was established in Boston as one of our most important lithographers.

It was in 1865 that I introduced to the public the first American Christmas card, a copy of which is shown here.

PETER and THE WHIFFLEHOUND

"It is also feared that during December of this year there will occur somewhere in the nation the one millionth death in America since records were first started. It could happen in Michigan. And finally, why spoil Christmas with a needless tragedy?"

Longer periods of darkness and adverse weather conditions make traffic more hazardous at this time of year. During the holiday season traffic increases and many persons become absorbed in the Christmas rush they grow careless.

There is nothing we can do to prevent darkness and bad weather, but we can avoid carelessness if we try. Let's all be especially alert and avoid having that millionth death occur in Michigan. And finally, why spoil Christmas with a needless tragedy?"

Molasses Takes the Cake

The family that likes gingerbread will be enthusiastic about molasses cake. It is fine-grained and moist for which unwhipped molasses gives the credit. This old-fashioned, molasses cake is a use of sugar because it is a sweeter as well as a distinctive flavor.

This special event cake may be baked in layers or in a square cake pan and then frosted with a fluffy frosting. Using your basic 7-minute frosting recipe, omit cream syrup or cream of tartar and add 2 1/2 cups of unwhipped molasses for a caramel-like flavor and golden beige color. The square layer may also be served as spicy shortcakes with fruit, ice cream or sauce fillings.

Holiday accidents this year will contribute to the worst traffic toll of any year in Michigan history, according to Sgt. C. H. Bartlett of the Clinton post of the Michigan State Police.

The "chromos" Prang referred to were the product of their vast recipe file colors and shades, simulating the woven texture of an artist's canvas. Their vast recipe file colors and shades, simulating the woven texture of an artist's canvas. Their vast recipe file colors and shades, simulating the woven texture of an artist's canvas.

December is supposed to be the happiest month of the year, but instead it is the deadliest. Last December 155 persons died in Michigan traffic accidents, 44 of them during the Christmas weekend.
