Committee Expects Red Cross To Go Over the Top

Red Cross returns, although not complete at this time, have reached $587. The Ford Motor Company's Manchester plant began their solicitation on Wednesday and there are still thirteen solicitors to be heard from according to local drive chairman, Mrs. Harold Alexander.

The drive is scheduled to end here on Saturday and workers are hopeful that the quota of $950 will be reached. Manchester will receive credit for the money given to the Red Cross on their drive at the Ford Motor Company's plant and also at the Double A Products Company.

Red Cross Home Nursing Classes Started Here

The first Red Cross home nursing class has started in Manchester. The class is being conducted by Mrs. Laurel Breitenwischer, registered nurse, who took the Red Cross instructors' training course at Ann Arbor and is qualified to teach classes here.

The first class includes the Senior Girl Scouts under the direction of Marie Schneider and the oldest Intermediate Girl Scouts, Troop 1, with Mrs. Howard Higgins their leader. Mrs. Howard Higgins, also a registered nurse, is aiding in the program.

The class is being held each Monday evening at the Legion dining room and current registration is fifteen plus leaders. The two hour classes begin at 7 p. m. and will continue for six weeks.

The home nursing program is part of the Red Cross civil defense plan to train women and girls in the care of the sick at home. Special emphasis is put upon the use of materials available in the average home and upon the improvisation of equipment for the comfort of the patients. Two hours of instruction is on the schedule in the treatment of burns and other possible war-incurred injuries.

All nurses working on the program in teaching the classes are volunteering their services. Manchester Scouts, according to their leaders, deeply appreciate the efforts of Mrs. Laurel Breitenwischer in bringing this program to them.

He has personally flown an airplane over one-third of a million air miles and his school has more graduates around the world than any other aeronautical college. He has seen the need for an ideal missionary plane and has selected the Evers plane, made in Tecumseh, as the most ideal of planes made in America. He is planning same time show at the Meyers Aircraft plant in Tecumseh, personally building a Meyers plane, which he will then fly to South America for use there in the mission field.

The speaker will reveal some current facts regarding "Flying Saucers", that he has personally learned in Mexico, in Alaska, and from aviator friends as far away as South Africa, which explode many of the present theories regarding them. There is no admission charge.

Your Vote Is Your Exercise Of Power

Monday is election day, the biennial spring election, when the townships choose their new governing bodies, and we in town choose two regents of the University of Michigan, a superintendent of public instruction, a member of the state board of education and two members of the state board of agriculture.

There is nothing unusual about this election except that the people of the townships are given this once-in-two-year opportunity to have a voice in local government. It is also a town-meeting day which should be of quite some interest to those who live in those areas and like to know what is going on.

Monday the voters will choose two men who will have a lot to do with the future of the University of Michigan—the greatest institution of its kind in the world. There's a lot going on there which will have quite a bearing on the future of thousands of young men and women from all over the world who will exert a tremendous influence on the way of life for your children's children. Can you make yourself believe you have no interest here?

Also one will have a part in selecting a superintendent of public instruction. Recent events show that it takes someone on the job there all the time. What goes for the University, goes for the public school system. Mighty important for your kids, and worthy of your vote.

Two members of the state board of education. Can you make yourself believe you should have nothing to say as to who they shall be?

On Monday a member of the state board of agriculture will be elected. The importance of Michigan agriculture, of conservation, of progress in the development and production of the very fundamentals of life itself are involved. Can you make yourself believe you should have nothing to say as to who he shall be?

Voting is something more than just having the right to go to the polls and slip in your ballot though. To call it a privilege is using a term overworked and without too much significance. Like calling fire insurance a privilege instead of a protection. Voting is the life blood of a continuing free America.

If you appreciate life and liberty as we know it in America—Vote next Monday.

GOV. WILLIAMS

By G. Mennen Williams, Governor of Michigan

LANSING It was a shock to learn last week that there has been padding of attendance rolls in at least one school district, in order to cheat on state school aid.

The persons responsible for collecting state funds for non-existent pupils may not have been actuated by motives of personal gain. But they have nevertheless done a thing profoundly subversive of good government.

The revelations made by the Kefauver committee about under world conspiracies have aroused good citizens all over the country. But to my mind it is far more serious when cheating of any kind is found in the administration of the public schools.

That kind of dishonesty gets too close to our children. As soon as I heard about the padding of school rolls in Litchfield, I called Dr. Lee M. Thurston, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, to my office.

I told Dr. Thurston to get to the bottom of this matter at all costs, and particularly to find out whether the practice of padding attendance rolls was widespread.

The investigation is now going forward. The rumors of widespread cheating should be run down and anybody responsible punished. If necessary we will check every school district in the state to make sure that this sort of thing is stopped.

Like any other family in Michigan, the Williams family has been in the throes of one of modern life's great family crises—moving day.

When I took office in 1949, I rented a large home on Lansing's West Main street. But last winter, we got notice to move so the property could be sold.

Rather than rent another home—a difficult job in Lansing—I decided to buy a house at 6157 S. Grand Avenue.

All last week we were busy packing our belongings and getting ready for the moving van. The children, Gary 9, Nancy 7 and Wendy 4, proved efficient helpers after we persuaded them to quit playing house in the packing boxes.

It was our 11th move in 13 years of married life. The untimely death of Peter Hoffmaster, State Director of Conservation, was a shock to everyone in the state capital.

Mr. Hoffmaster was the kind of public servant who makes a life work of the people's business. He served nearly 20 years with the Michigan Conservation Department, 17 of those years as the department director.

The high standing which Michigan enjoys in the conservation field is due in considerable degree to his work.

In two fields, particularly, he was an aggressive leader. He was a strong advocate of conservation education in the schools and among adult groups. And he led in moves to make the state's public lands and recreation areas available to the people of the crowded metropolitan centers.

His passing is a severe blow to the cause of conservation.

The new State Defense Production Council which I established last month is going ahead very rapidly.

The Defense Production Council is a companion agency to the Civil Defense Council. Civil Defense will try to protect the state's people, homes and factories against enemy action. The Defense Production Council will try to expedite the output of war materials.

Defense Production Council will be to explore ways and means of developing the mining areas of the Upper Peninsula. Michigan has large reserves of copper and iron ore remaining. But these are high-cost ores, and the mining and refining problems involved have caused a slowdown of all mining operation in the U. P.

With the nation's needs greatly expanded, it is both good business and good patriotism to seek new way to develop these ores. The Defense Production Council has already started work on this problem.

The creation of an effective civil defense organization is still the number one problem of Michigan.

The Korean news has been much more encouraging during the last few weeks, and many people have forgotten the war jitters they experienced a few months ago. But the international picture has not changed. The possibility of atomic attack on our Michigan cities remains a very real possibility.

We have no assurance that the ruthless men in the Kremlin have not already set the timetable for a gigantic Pearl Harbor. Under the capable leadership of Brigadier-General Lester J. Maitland, the state's civil defense program is going forward rapidly.

But it is not sufficient to plan for a program which could be ready to operate, let us say, in the Fall of 1952. Maybe it will take that long to get our home defenses fully prepared. But in the meantime we must be ready to meet an attack AT ANY TIME with such forces as we have available.

To test the readiness of our present civil defense forces, we are going to run a test on April 16 at the two prime atomic bomb targets in the state—Detroit and Sault Ste. Marie.

We will pretend that an enemy has been able to drop atomic bombs on the Soo locks and on the industrial areas of Detroit. Then we will see, in practice, what forces we can mobilize to save lives, check fires, aid the homeless, and get war plants back into production.

This test at Detroit and the Soo on April 16 will not be a show for public entertainment. It will be a military exercise. So don't look for a lot of activities visible to the eye.

The movements of fire equipment, planes, hospital and medical forces, special police, etc., will be carried out by "token" units. But when we get through we will have, on paper, a complete tally on what forces were available, how fast they were mobilized, and what they would have been able to accomplish had the attack been real. We have been partially successful in our efforts to get Uncle Sam to give us credit for the civil defense expenditures we are now making.

Under the Federal civil defense law, federal aid is to be given to the states on a "matching" basis. States willing to spend some of their own money will get corresponding amounts of federal money.

But the federal appropriation is not yet available to be "matched." And meanwhile, Michigan must forge ahead, making expenditures from state funds. We can't afford to wait until the federal funds are ready to be "matched."

On my recent trip to Washington, I pointed out to federal civil defense officials that the states should be allowed to count present and past expenditures as "matching" funds to get federal money later. Otherwise, states like Michigan which have taken the leadership in civil defense will be unfairly penalized. When the time comes to get federal funds by "matching," a great deal of our funds will already have been spent.

Last week, I received word from Federal OCD Director Millard Caldwell that our plea has been answered in part. The federal government will count as "matching" funds any state money which has been committed but not actually spent, when the federal funds become available.

Since a great deal of our expenditures will probably fall in that classification, the ruling will enable us to get a great deal more federal aid than we otherwise would receive.

From Your Congressman

A Weekly Report From Congressman George Meader

Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced a bill to amend the Reorganization Act of 1949, so as to permit either House of Congress to reject reorganization plans proposed by the President by a simple majority vote, rather than the Constitutional majority now required by that Act.

The events which make this measure advisable are fresh in all our minds. On Tuesday, March 13, the House of Representatives voted 158 to 61 to require only a simple majority for the rejection of emergency reorganization proposals. Thus, the House clearly went on record in favor of untying the hands of the Congress.

CYCOLOGY SET

U & W FARM SUPPLY CASE - JAMESWAY KASCO FEEDS - BOTTLE GAS MANCHESTER 5081 1/2 MILE N. OF MANCHESTER R. ON CHELSEA ROAD

On Wednesday, March 14, a resolution to reject Reorganization Plan No. 1, a permanent reorganization plan, which would abolish the Board of Directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and substitute a single administrator in its place, failed of adoption in the House of Representatives, although a majority of those present and voting indicated their disapproval of the plan. The vote was 200 for the resolution disapproving the plan, and only 107 against the resolution.

The reason the plan to reorganize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was not killed in the House of Representatives was because of the provision of Section 6a of the Reorganization Act of 1949. That section provides that a reorganization plan can be rejected by either House of the Congress only by an affirmative vote of the authorized membership of that House.

The will of the people through their elected representatives was thwarted by an abnormal obstacle, which an administration majority was able to insert in the Reorganization Act of 1949. I propose to remove that obstacle and to restore to the Congress where it belongs under the Constitution—at least that portion of the vast legislative power which has been ceded to the Executive in the past two decades.

I believe the episode we have just witnessed demonstrates beyond question the wisdom of taking this action now. By this amendment, the Congress will be fortified in the event that future far-reaching and ill-considered proposals are presented under the Reorganization Act of 1949.

I warn the House of Representatives now, against the situation which may in the future confront it under the present Reorganization Act. Even though a majority of the House or the Senate might strongly oppose a reorganization proposed by the Executive Department, this majority would be powerless to prevent the reorganization, because of the abnormal requirement of a constitutional majority.

I do not intend to review or to discuss at length the merits of the President's plan to reorganize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The Senate may yet assert its prerogative and reject this Reorganization Plan. I believe it should.

The Senate, in one sense, has more interest than the House in this particular reorganization plan. First, there now is pending before the Senate a more comprehensive legislative proposal, S. 511, to reconstitute and reorganize the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Second, the Fulbright Subcommittee, for the past year, has been conducting a penetrating exploration of some phases of the activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Third, the rights and prerogatives of the Senate would be impaired through the approval of a plan which would permit the Senate to pass upon the character and qualifications of only two, rather than five, individuals responsible for the management of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The Senate would be given just one opportunity to pass on the merits of such appointments. Both the Administrator and the Deputy Administrator, under the plan, would serve without fixed terms and would never need to come before the Senate for confirmation on renewal appointments.

Whatever action the Senate may take, the fact remains that the Reorganization Plan No. 1 was ill-timed, ill-considered, hastily-drafted and hastily presented to the House of Representatives. It was motivated by a desire to alleviate the Reconstruction Finance Corporation from the public indignation arising from the Fulbright exposures. It confuses structure with personalities. It is not in the public interest.

Although the 200 members of the House of Representatives who were opposed to this plan outnumbered those who favored it, the majority will now be thwarted by a rigid rule which has succeeded in limiting and weakening the power of the Congress to act on public policies. This roadblock to expression of the will of a majority of the representatives of the people should be removed at once.

It is, my conviction, and one which is of long standing, that what is needed most by our country today is the strengthening of the Congress. This has been a major plank in the platform upon which I have offered myself for public service. It has been a primary objective, and will continue to be a primary objective, in my service in the House of Representatives.

Unless we are ready to admit that democracy cannot work in a modern, mechanized society, it seems to me inescapable that the Congress must be so constituted as to develop and to express clearly and in unambiguous terms its own independent policy with respect to national and international programs.

We Representatives and our committee staffs should study intensively the problems, facts, reasons, arguments and views underlying legislative proposals. We should conduct this study in the light of the sentiments of the citizens of this country whom we represent to whom we are responsible, and with whose aspirations and desires we are intimately familiar. The resulting enactments should contain our own independent, sincere and well-founded convictions.

I think it is uncontradictable that the authors of our Constitution, acutely aware of the dangers of the centralized executive authority of a tyrannical king, took great pains in writing our Constitution to vest the policymaking authority of our government in the elected representatives of the people under conditions rendering it easy for the removal of a representative whose views were out of harmony with the sentiments of his constituents.

This is more than prosaic constitutional philosophy. This principle is the very heart of the liberty of this nation and its freedom from dictatorial control by a greedy despot. It is a basic concept of our American economy. It is the foundation upon which rest the rights of our citizens and the freedom and dignity of the individuals for whom this government was constituted.

This sacred principle should be continuously and vigorously upheld. It should be jealously guarded by those who have sworn their faith to the sovereign electors who have vowed to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States.

I challenge the right of any of us in this House to abdicate the precious legislative power of the Congress which we have sworn to preserve and uphold. Those who part faith with their sworn solemn obligation to defend the integrity of the great legislative body of which they are a part thereby forfeit the right to represent the people of the United States.

Mr. Speaker, in the events of the last two days we have witnessed the low state to which the Congress was brought when the Reorganization Act of 1949 was passed. We saw the great House of Representatives of the United States powerless to act in accordance with the will of the majority of its members and subjected to the will of one man, to whom the Democratic leadership in the 81st Congress transferred legislative power.

Here is an issue which transcends any temporary, partisan consideration. Whichever party is in power the forces of Executive encroachment always will be operative.

Not because we are Democrats or because we are Republicans, but because we are law-givers endowed with the authority of the sovereign people of the United States, we must retain in the Congress the authority which belongs to the Congress the authority which the Constitution intended the Congress to have in order that it may effectively express the will of the people of this nation.

We must be alert to attacks upon the source of our authority and quick to defend it. We must resist any weakening of the power we have undertaken to administer. We must continually foster and develop that power in relation to the rapid evolution of our society under the economic forces of the times.

The bill I have introduced will go only a short way in the direction of restoring to the Congress the power and the dignity it has permitted itself to lose in the past two decades. But it will be a reversal of a trend which, in my judgment, threatens our free political institutions. It is, therefore, in the public interest.

I hope the party in power will not treat this measure as a partisan one. I hope the leadership of that party will not utilize its majority in numbers to obstruct a movement to fortify and strengthen the body of which we all are members, to which, in my judgment, our allegiance must be devoted in supremacy to our allegiance to either political party.

Will Visit Winter Starvation Areas

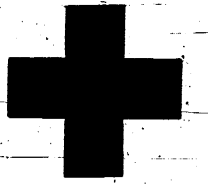

Sportsmen and others desiring to see deer yard-conditions first hand are invited by the conservation department to make inspection trips on April 8.

Two department-conducted tours of winter starvation areas will begin at 10:30 a.m., one starting at the Mt. Pleasant headquarters and the other at Shoppington's Inn at Grayling.

Persons planning to go are advised to bring waterproof footwear, comfortable field clothes, and a compass if possible. Some may want to bring cameras to get picture evidence of the results of an overbrowsed deer range.

Herd loss in the 1950-51 period may match the 35,000-50,000 animals cut down in the 1946-47 winter and spring.

Farmers who wish to grow the new Blackhawk soybean should make arrangements to purchase their seed now, since only a small supply is available, advises Stuart Hildebrand, Michigan State College farm crops specialist.

Blackhawk has wide soil adaptation for Michigan and will mature wherever Earlyana variety is grown.

For sources of certified seed, contact your county agricultural agent or the Farm Crops Department, Michigan State College, E. Lansing.

Goodwill Industries of Detroit, which has done an outstanding service to handicapped men and women of southeastern Michigan, is observing its thirtieth anniversary during the week of April 9.

Goodwill depends upon discarded household articles for carrying on its rehabilitation program since the refinishing of these articles provides both the employment and job training needed by handicapped adults. After being reconditioned, these articles are then sold in the three Goodwill stores in Detroit.

Last year over 525 handicapped adults were given jobs or training at the Goodwill Workshop at 6222 Brush Street, Detroit, for which they received nearly $400,000 in wages, according to Harold H. McKinnon, Executive Secretary of Goodwill. This community has contributed heavily by way of discarded articles during the past several years and has played an important part in the Goodwill program, Mr. McKinnon declared.

"Because your community has shown such an interest in our program through its splendid support and contributions of discarded household articles", Mr. McKinnon said, "we are extending a special invitation to your community to participate in our 30th Anniversary Celebration during the week of April 9, Thursday, April 12, has been set aside as Out-of-Town Day. It is our hope that representatives of more than 100 suburban and nearby communities will be our guests. Refreshments will be served visitors and they will also be taken on a tour of the Goodwill Workshop so that they may see at first hand the operations being carried on in behalf of the handicapped men and women. A special invitation is extended to club groups, the men's luncheon clubs, the women's social clubs and the Chamber of Commerce."

The celebration will get under way on Monday, April 9, with an Open House and an exhibit of handicraft articles made by handicapped men and women. The exhibit will be open to the public without charge throughout the week and may be seen daily from 10:00 a.m. to 6 p.m., and until 9:00 p.m. on Tuesday and Friday evenings.

Tuesday evening there will be a homecoming and buffet lunch for several hundred former employees and their families. The women's groups will be special guests on Wednesday and a smorgasbord dinner on Friday evening will provide a climax for the celebration. At that dinner several

Livestock Exchange Tripled Volume In Six Years

By providing better livestock marketing facilities for 25,000 farmers and stockmen, Michigan's largest livestock cooperative has nearly tripled its volume of business in six years.

Don Stark, livestock marketing specialist at Michigan State College, points to studies made by MSU authorities as a help in bringing about this expansion. Studies made as long as ten years ago showed a tendency of decentralization of marketing points.

During the past five years the Michigan Live Stock Exchange, after a quarter century doing business at the Detroit Stock Yard, has carried out an expansion program. Business is now being done at Battle Creek, Portland and St. Louis in addition to Detroit.

Along with cooperation from Michigan State College in determining the possibilities for such out-state markets, help came from the Michigan Farm Bureau. This organization helped organize these markets and in obtaining farmers willing to invest in the financing.

The first year after the war, 1946, the livestock marketing agency did slightly more than seven million dollars in business in Michigan. In 1950 the total was more than 27 million dollars. Volume in cars of livestock increased from 2,725 cars in 1946 to 6,781 in 1950.

Devils Lake Open to Experimental Fishing

Eleven experimentally designated lower peninsula lakes have reverted to regular lake status, the conservation department reminds anglers.

These lakes are: Five, Barry county; Craig, Branch county; Duck, Calhoun county; Lobdel, Genesee county; Fire, Grand Traverse county; Bear, Hillsdale county; Big Portage, Jackson county; Pontiac, Oakland county; Minnewaukon, St. Joseph county; Sable, Van Buren county; and Sugarloaf, Washtenaw county.

Statutory maximum five year period of special fishing regulations on Whitmore Lake, Washtenaw and Livingston counties, ends April 1.

With exception of Five lake, this means no further fishing, even as a regular lake, after March until June 25 when the general season opens and regular size and creel limits apply as listed in the fish-law digest. Five lake, in the category of "all other north of highway M-16," still is open for "some" fishing after March. On lakes north of M-46 there is no closed season on crappies, rock bass, yellow perch, warmouth bass and certain other species listed in the digest.

Experimental fishing rules do not expire this year on Devils lake, Lenawee county and Hess lake, Newaygo county. Throughout the year on these two lakes any combination of 25 (six-inch or over) bluegills, sunfish, perch, crappies, and rock and warmouth bass may be taken or possessed except not more than 15 bluegills. An unlimited number of these species under six inches also may be taken on Devils and Hess.

Forecasts Continued High Prices For Farmers

With spring planting time looming up, now's the time to shape up those final field crop plans. If you're still pondering over expected demands and prices, here are some up-to-the-minute pointers on the farm crops outlook that may help.

C. E. Prentice, Michigan State College agricultural economist, says that with good management, maximum production of all crops except potatoes will be the goal this season. Prices will bump the parity ceiling for all storable commodities grown in Michigan. The seasonal price decrease at harvest time is expected to be less than normal.

The price of soybean oil boosted by military demands, has already reached the current legal maximum even though the 1950 crop was the largest in history.

Large government holdings of dry edible beans have tended to hold prices down. But excessive stocks of Michigan beans of marketable quality are expected to disappear by 1951 crop harvest time. The crop support price will be 75 percent of parity, but a price nearer 90 percent of parity is expected in Michigan.

No support for potatoes is indicated, and acreage should be reduced. A 15 percent cut has been requested in the U. S., 13 percent for Michigan. Higher prices can be expected for the 1951 crop if these recommendations are followed, Prentice said.

Hardly a woman is now alive who doesn't know that accessories make the difference between a smart outfit and "just another dress." And, in the spring, the well-placed dash of color becomes more important than ever. But with a few scarves and a little ingenuity, any gal can work her own miracles.

Imaginative Mary Jane Higby, of NBC's "When A Girl Marries," says that she began collecting scarves and novel ways of wearing them quite by accident. It all happened when she spent much too much money on a very plain, tailored black dress. So, having to wear the dress every day she used to dream up a different scarf idea for each wearing "and it often looked good as new, too."

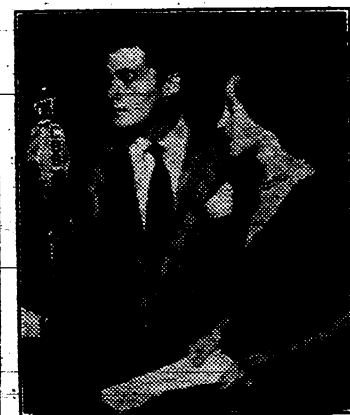

"My pet idea," Mary Jane confided, "is to knot a bold, Roman stripe, silk scarf (about 18" long) and fasten it with an antique stick pin or some favorite piece of jewelry. It's amazing what this simple bit of color does for both the dress and your morale" (lower left).

"Or," she went on enthusiastically, "take a small pastel square and tie it in a square knot and pin each end down (as in lower right) with a little scatter pin or stick pin. One of the most unique, yet very simple, plots to show off your best bit of jewelry or prized doodad is to display it with a bright scarf as a background (as center), and, at the same time, solve the problem of wearing a suit without a blouse. Any size scarf will do the trick - knot it in the back if short or if you have a large sized square, fold it in half and double it around your neck, knot, and tuck ends out of sight.

"A bit of gay chiffon, tied in a fluffy bow (upper right) is the perfect touch to brighten up your spirits on gloomy days," Mary Jane added, "looks very chic and expensive when it is really just an 18" ascot scarf with a large button hole at the narrow end. Just slip the scarf through the button hole and pin it down with a small fake rose."

Papa David Says:
It's been said that "time heals all wounds," but kind words in most instances also can be great healers. Papa David has all the wisdom of the ages woven into these three philosophical sayings:
"You fill your mind so full of faith that there isn't any room for fear. Like oil and water, they don't mix."
"Sometimes quitting is weakness and sometimes quitting and going off in another direction — is strength."
"It's what a man says to himself that counts most."

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
Slim And His "Ali Species"
Slim Baker, who's always doing something crazy, had a lot of people smiling last week because his entry won a ribbon in the Women's Club Annual Pet Show.
Seems as though Slim saw a strange-colored alley cat with no tail oven at Central City and brought it home. He washed, combed, and brushed it and put a collar on it with a card reading "Ali Species." Then he enters it in the show.
Hanged if the ladies didn't think it was some rare kind of cat and gave it a special award! When one of them asked Slim where she could get one like it, he said, "It's all yours, M'am—I can get 'em as 'Alley Cat' anytime I want!"
From where I sit, some of us are pretty easily "taken in" just because someone else says it's so. Whether it's awarding prizes or passing judgment on a person's right to enjoy a temperate glass of beer—let's take a good look from stem to stern, and learn what it's all about before making up our minds.
