Star Recipes

Movie star JAMES MASON says that when it comes to food, the Turks with their centuries old culture have developed a fine palate. While on location in Turkey shooting scenes for Twentieth Century Fox's "Five Fingers", Mason discovered this exclusive recipe for Shish Kebab, a delicious dish that originated in Turkey.

SHISH KEBAB: 2 lbs. leg of lamb, 2 tablespoons olive oil, Juice of one lemon, Bay leaves, Salt and pepper, 1 medium onion, 1 medium tomato.

Cut meat into one inch cubes. Mix olive oil and lemon juice and rub meat with it. Place in dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with sliced onions and tomatoes, and a few bay leaves. Leave in refrigerator four or five hours.

Arrange meat on spits alternately with tomatoes and onions and an occasional bay leaf. Broiling over charcoal is preferable, but it may also be done over an open wood fire or in oven broiler. Green pepper and sliced eggplant can also be inserted between meat on spits.

Knowledge is Power

(1) A survey, just completed, of several thousand adults representing a cross-section of the nation, reveals that 99 per cent of the U.S. adult population believes in God. Ben Gaffin and Associates of Chicago, an independent commercial opinion-research firm, which made the survey at the request of the Catholic Digest, put questions to Catholics, Protestants, Jews, members of other religions, and persons who said they had no religious beliefs or affiliations. The December Catholic Digest contains the first in a series of articles based on the survey.

Belief in God among Protestants turned out to be a shade under 99 per cent, among those who said they were Catholic slightly under 100 per cent, and among those who said they were Jewish, slightly less than 97 per cent. While there is but little change in groups according to age, there is an increase of belief among those over 55 years old.

(2) The majority are not, according to John E. Gibson's article in This Week magazine. Citing a public-opinion survey conducted by Princeton University, Gibson reports that only 32 per cent of the U.S. people are satisfied with their incomes. Businessmen and farmers are the most satisfied with what they earn. Professional people seem to be the most dissatisfied. Investigators concluded that "At this level, physicians, lawyers, and college professors are competing for social status with persons far above them in income; their desire for a much larger income represents a wish to strengthen an already high social status with a correspondingly high income status." The professional man is likely to enjoy a social rating that his bank account simply can't keep pace with.

(3) Although the game has been divided into four quarters of 15 minutes, the ball is really in play only about 12 minutes out of the total 60 minutes of the game. Lynn O. (Pappy) Waldorf, California coach, emphasizes this point in his book, "This Game of Football." The rest of the time while the clock is running, explains Waldorf, "the teams are huddling, calling signals, or otherwise preparing to put the ball in play." The clock is stopped whenever the ball goes out of bounds, a pass is incomplete, a score or a touchback is made, a penalty is called, or possession of the ball changes from one team to another. "The clock is stopped so often that a full additional 60 minutes of time leaks away in interruptions."

Watch your pets in the viewfinder of your camera as they play—and snap when you see the picture you want.

Picture Pet Personalities

IF YOU own a pet—anything from a horse to a puppy to a canary bird—chances are good that you know your particular pet has a personality all its own. But do you always remember this when you snap a picture of your pet? You know, you can do it in such a way that the "personality" will be noticeable.

You are accustomed to making an effort to bring out a child's personality in your pictures and you can do it with animals in much the same way.

There are many similarities between picturing pets and children. Both make the kind of picture that brings a warm smile from the viewer—and both are likely to be adverse to assuming and holding a pose for any length of time.

It's a good trick in either case to give them something on which to focus their attention. It helps keep them still—and produces an interesting attitude or expression. Better still, catch them off-guard and do your shooting candidly. I don't intend to imply that your pet will recognize a camera when he sees it, but he'll sense there's something going on and that he's the center of attention.

When you picture your pet, move in close. Most pets are small in size, comparatively speaking. So get close enough to make the animal the important figure in your picture. Look for shots that you can make with quite plain backgrounds. Snapped against a background of trees or foliage, the kitten or puppy is likely to be lost in the picture.

I think the picture illustrating this column is one of the cutest pet pictures I've seen in a long time. It is the work of Ylla, who is a famed professional photographer of animals. You will note that she used an absolutely plain background. And, although I don't know, I'll bet she watched the kitten and puppy together until they naturally assumed this pose. Follow the play of your pets in the viewfinder for shots that'll be fun to have. —John Van-Guilder

MICHIGAN OUTDOORS

THE BIG YEAR FOR DUCKS

This is the year the duck hunters will be talking about for a long, long time. Some say the best in 15 years, others are more conservative, but all agree there are more ducks and more shooting in Michigan this year. Research has proved that the greatest single influence on year to year variations in duck hunting success is the weather. And the next most important element is the system of hunting regulations set up by the federal government whose job it is to control the shooting of migratory fowl.

Duck's Life is a Short Life

Professional and amateur ornithologists have been banding ducks on a gigantic scale in North America—and surprisingly enough the return of the bands has been very gratifying. Hunters are interested in the past life history of the ducks they shoot, so they return the bands and get the related information. Thanks to the banding, duck mortality can be studied, and from these studies the Fish and Wildlife Service has a pretty good lineup on the life of a duck, which is a little on the short side. In the Mississippi flyway upon which Michigan is located, the mortality for adult mallards is about 50% per year. In other words half the total mallard population lives from one year to the next. The other half dies from natural causes or from hunters' guns.

A University of Wisconsin survey has proved still more about mallards. Ducks of this species raised in captivity and turned loose in the fall have a much poorer chance of living thru the hunting season than their wild cousins. A female mallard's nest contains an average of 8 eggs. An average of 7 ducklings will hatch, and 5 will survive until they're ready to fly. By the time the hunting season has ended there's just one young bird left for each adult—just right for maintaining the population.

Redheads Take a Beating

Redhead ducks catch it worst from the hunters. They are the last to leave the nests in the spring and are consequently immature when the hunting season starts, and as much as 45% are felled by gunners. Predators and disease take another 35%, which doesn't leave much of a seed stock yet the redheads come thru in goodly numbers each year.

Flight Habits Change

Here in Michigan strange things are going on along the duck highways in the sky. Saginaw Bay got off to a good start as did most of the state. While other sections held up well, the ducks began to bypass the Bay area. In a survey the last week in October, only 42,000 ducks—many of them mergansers—were counted in Saginaw Bay. At the same time Lake St. Clair, and the lower Detroit River gave harbor to 420,000 ducks of all kinds, which of course means good shooting where the pressure is greatest and a correspondingly heavier kill.

It all goes to prove that ducks are doing their share in '52 to make top sport for hunters in Michigan Outdoors!

Easy now to KILL RATS

WARFARAT, new Dr. Hess rat killer, is made with warfarin, new rodenticide developed at the University of Wisconsin.

Warfarat is a prepared bait. More attractive than a rat's usual diet of farm grains. Best way to use it is to establish rat feeding stations and keep it there until all rats are killed.

With Warfarat you can really get rid of rats and keep your farm clean. It is a relatively slow killer. Give it a thorough trial and you'll say it's the best yet.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

Here are two of the many problems confronting the new Administration.

One problem has been presented almost as a kick in the face to Americans who have been in Canada the past few months. American money is now discounted when exchanged for Canadian money.

American dollars always worth about $1.10 in Canadian money, are now worth about 90 cents.

If you Americans keep on giving everything away, by next year you'll get even less for your dollars up here.

But prosperous Canada with vast resources is a major beneficiary of U. S. aid programs.

For one thing, U. S. Officials have permitted the Canadian newsprint monopoly to continually boost prices without taking any remedial measures.

For example, on just one day approximately $3 million worth in metal, tractor and farm equipment, was bought in Canada by U. S. taxpayers to give to French African colonies.

So it is little wonder that Canadian money is worth more than U. S. money. Around Washington they say, "We love our allies so much we are killing ourselves with kindness."

Another problem is the Office of Price Stabilization, still spending millions building mountains out of molehills to justify continuance of fat salaries.

Probably Sen. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin will have some words on the subject when Congress convenes. In his state, OPS is now interfering with the operation of golf clubs.

Directors of the Brown's Lake Golf Association near Burlington, Wisconsin, voted to raise weekend green fees to $2.50.

But in Milwaukee, the regional OPS gauntlet has a great capacity for trivia. The golf association received an edict to reduce daily green fees to $1.14; weekend fees to $1.64.

Either through legislation, or the facts of competitive economic conditions, OPS finds itself with little to enforce. So OPS moves in on golf clubs.

It sounds like pure comedy, even though expensive comedy to U. S. taxpayers, except analysis shows the danger of OPS.

Interference with a golf club operation equals or exceeds the control of private activities that the Hitler mob practiced.

If permitted to continue on its present trend, OPS can and will exercise so much power that the recent election by which the people delegated authority will become a hollow mockery.

It may be argued that as long as the nation pours out billions to aid incompetent nations, it is only proper that a few millions be spent to give domestic aid to the nation's incompetent in the form of lush jobs in an organization such as OPS.

However, to let these incompetents also tear down the traditional form of American liberty is too high a price. Congressmen, backed by organized independent business are sure to make OPS a major issue early in 1953.

Manchester Loses Fourth To Clinton Leonard Scheid, Reporter

The Manchester Dutchmen lost their fourth game of the season Friday evening when they were defeated by Clinton 7-0.

In the first quarter Dick Frolick dashed 35 yards to Manchester's two yard line to set up the touchdown. Two plays later Roger Walz went over on a quarterback sneak. Gene Whitman was a deceptive stand-out for Clinton at guard as he stopped the Dutchmen running plays through the line. The second and third quarters were played in the middle of the field. In the fourth quarter Manchester drove to the 12 yard line, but Aiken fumbled. Again the Dutchmen drove to the 8 yard line, but Bob Rhees was chased back to the 50 yard line when he attempted to pass and Manchester failed to score.
