The speakers will be George Hurrell, director of the County Planning Commission, and Dr. Otto Engelke, director of the County Health Department. Registration is at 1:00 p. m. and the meeting will be called to order at 1:30 p. m. by the county president, Mrs. Meredith Bixby of Saline. Delegates will attend from the two federated clubs of Manchester—the Manchester Twentieth Century Club and the Shakespeare Reading Club.

The Main Street

We are glad to see that the Smiths, Don and Edna, owners of Don's Dairy Bar, are back after a two week vacation at Ft. Myers, Florida. Both have a good tan and seem to have enjoyed their trip south.

The Schaffers, Allen and Ica and their two children plan to leave at the end of the week to spend sometime at Ft. Myers, Florida.

Congratulations to Mrs. Elizabeth Cash, who on January 4th celebrated her 96th birthday quietly at her home here. Mrs. Cash is Manchester's oldest citizen and at ninety-six still has a very keen mind although she is unable to leave her home because of ill health since Christmas.

There is a special fair board meeting scheduled for next week to be held at the school and members of the board are urged to attend along with all interested persons in town.

The Arbeiter Society will hold a sauerkraut supper at their hall next Wednesday, January 16, beginning at 5:30 p. m.

Only Thee And Me?

One day, some time ago, we were wandering through the columns of various exchange publications that come across our desk, and happened across the following compilation which amused us. Thinking that it might bring a smile your way, and at the same time, moralize a bit, we're passing it along from the columns of the Summit (Miss.) Sun. As of the year 1960, this balance sheet is offered, tongue in cheek, for what it may be worth:

Population of the U. S. (1960)	160,000,000
People 65 years or older	49,000,000

Old Fire Truck Draws Last Breath On US-112

Tuesday morning the intersection of M-11 and US-112 was the scene of a two-truck accident. A 1921 Seagraves fire engine pumper truck was traveling west on 112 while a semi-tractor with double trailer was traveling east. Hans W. Bauschlicher of Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, lost control of his newly-acquired fire engine on the slippery street and slammed into the big semi, driven by Howard Claytor of Lapeer, Mich. The impact was great enough to completely reverse the direction of the tractor and its two trailers. The fire engine was a complete loss and driver Bauschlicher looked at "his baby" with moist eyes. Damage to the semi was estimated at $2,000. Mr. Dunlop, fire chief of Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, had just purchased the thirty-one year old pumper the morning of the accident in Detroit and was taking it to his home town as an auxiliary piece of equipment. Cost of the engine was $500 but fortunately Mr. Dunlop had taken out insurance on the truck before leaving Detroit. Mr. Dunlop was following the engine in his car but had stopped to eat lunch and didn't see the accident. As the chief came driving up 112 he remarked to his mechanic companion when he saw the accident, "I certainly hope that isn't our engine." The mechanic quipped, "I hate to tell you, but that is our truck."

What's To Become Of The Fair?

When I wish to join the ranks of those who now and then write you an open letter, the topic is: What is to be the future of the Manchester Community Fair? When I came here to teach in the fall of 1929, the school, through the agriculture and home economics departments, was to have a fair. In the old three story building of that day it was a somewhat smaller fair than we have now. However, I have some snapshots taken in the old building, which show that the number of grain entries compared very favorably with those fairs of more recent years. Fairs in those years had no departments for livestock or poultry and there were no cash awards; ribbons were issued. In the evening a program was held free of charge in the third floor study hall. I recall some excellent speakers. We got a larger building and soon afterward a desire to have pens in the halls for poultry and rabbits. It was but one step then to having tents outside to house those entries. Tents made possible departments in livestock, horses, etc. Somewhere along there came the desire to have cash awards for the prize winners. Tents, also, cost money and there were other expenses to the enlarged fair. As a result free programs were out and students divided their concession money, part of it going to meet fair costs. To make possible the payment of larger premiums, the meeting of an increased need for expense money and to make a greater community project of the fair—as it had grown too large for teachers and students alone to handle—it was decided to incorporate as a non-profit organization and thus qualify for funds from the state. Those funds amount to about 50 percent of the premiums paid. Thus the school fair passed out of existence and the Manchester Community Fair came into being. The controlling board was made up of a group of interested community people. That was in 1944. Since

There are very few who have the privilege of being able to look back on fifty years of successful business, but among those are Edward C. Dresselhouse. Back on January 14, 1902, Mr. Dresselhouse and Otto H. Davidter started the implement and hardware business when they bought out the W. J. Holmes Implement business. At that time their building stood on the site of the Widmayer hardware store. After three years they moved their business to the building which now houses the Manchester theater where they remained for fifteen years; and in 1920 the business was moved to the present location at 123 East Main St. In 1936 Otto Davidter retired

Biological Warfare Explained By CD

(This is the first of a series of six short articles on biological warfare prepared by the Michigan Office of Civil Defense. The purpose of these articles is to outline the dangers of biological warfare and to describe the counter measures that can be taken. This material is based on the Civil Defense booklet "What You Should Know About Biological Warfare".)

What is biological warfare? Biological warfare is the technique, well-known to our enemies, of attacking this nation with living agents such as plant-killing insects with poisons or toxins, such as those that come from bacteria, and with special kinds of chemicals, such as weed killers. Biological warfare is often called "germ warfare", but actually it is broader than that because it includes attacks with chemical agents.

Biological warfare, Civil Defense officials emphasize, is a special weapon for use against special targets. It does not kill or sicken every person in a whole state or even one city. Attacks by insects, toxins or chemicals can be aimed at people, animals or food crops, or all three at once. Such attacks can be launched by the armed forces of an enemy nation or by secret agents.

Biological warfare is not a secret super weapon, CD experts state. They are defenses against it and this series of articles will tell you what they are. There's nothing new about biological warfare—but the technique of waging such warfare have been rapidly developed in the last 50 years. In history, germs, not generals, have more than once decided the outcome of battle.

Plague cut down the crusaders at the gates of Jerusalem. Typhus riddled the Moors in Spain and dysentery thinned the ranks of Napoleon's Grand Army as it moved on Moscow. These were natural germs, naturally spread. The danger today is from biological agents deliberately spread as a weapon of war.

America's defense against diseases, however, are about the best in the world, Civil Defense authorities point out.

Restaurants are graded, drinking water is purified, foods are checked for purity, rats and other disease-carrying vermin are constantly fought, mosquito-breeding pools are treated. America's success against "natural germ warfare" is shown by the record of diseases such as smallpox and typhoid fever. Fifty years ago, these diseases caused wholesale epidemics. Now, they are very rare.

In spite of America's great health safety system, BW holds dangers that every citizen should be aware of. Civil Defense authorities state.

The danger is not from unknown or rare diseases attacking humans, animals or crops. The real danger is in new ways of spreading old diseases.

You can forget about new "mystery" germs or poisons depicted by some fiction writers as so powerful that millions of people would die on one exposure. Civil Defense experts insist the real danger is from known diseases. An enemy nation could spread disease germs through the air by floating them in fine sprays or mists, technically called aerosols. Bathroom atomizers, DDT bombs and spray guns produce small-scale aerosols.

The aerosol method of spreading disease germs has never been tried in actual warfare, but it is possible. BW attacks could be loosed from special sprayers carried in airplanes, if the enemy could succeed in making an attack close to the ground.

"If a small bottle of laboratory-grown germs was spilled on a factory floor, the bugs would have little chance of getting inside people's bodies where they could cause harm," the official Civil Defense booklet "What You Should Know About Biological Warfare" states.

"The best result an enemy could hope for would be that a few people in the factory might become sick, and the disease might later spread from them to others," the booklet continues.

"On the other hand, if the same number of germs were loaded into a spray gun and then blown into the air intake of a factory ventilating system most of the people in the factory would breathe in some of the germs.

"Many would become infected right away. That is one of the kinds of sabotage our industrial plants will guard against," the booklet says.

An enemy could use fifth columnists to pollute food and water supplies. Wheat rust and fowl pest could be loosed against farmers.

What kinds of germs and poisons might be used in biological warfare?

Civil Defense authorities emphasize first that there is no need to worry about "mystery" germs and poisons destroying whole areas at a time. Most of this, according to the official BW booklet, is "pure scaretalk built on twisted facts."

Take for example botulinus toxin, an unusually serious type of food poisoning. Experiments run in World War II showed that one ounce of this poison could kill 840 billion mice.

"Some dreamer promptly figured, by comparing the weight of a human being with the weight of a mouse, that one ounce of botulinus toxin would kill about 220 million human beings—more people than there are in the whole of North America," the BW booklet comments.

Civil Defense experts point out how ridiculous it is to conceive of spreading one ounce of poison evenly among 220 million human beings. Furthermore, laboratory workers succeeded in discovering a botulinus toxoid to make people resistant to the poison.

No single type of germ will make everyone sick, Civil Defense officials state emphatically.

Then what kind of diseases could be used in biological warfare?

If an enemy wanted to kill large numbers of people, he might use plague, typhus, cholera or smallpox. If he wanted only to make large numbers of people sick to tie up doctors and hospitals and cripple production, rabbit fever or undulant fever might be used.

Anthrax and Glanders might be used against animals on which we depend for food and clothing; fowl pest and Newcastle disease could be used against poultry; rinderpest might be aimed specially at cattle or sheep; disease and insect pests could damage grain and fruits.

It's important to realize, however, that the kinds and effects of the biological agents that might be used against us are well known to our scientists. (The next installment deals with the role of the individual in Biological Warfare.)

Florida Bound Here's How!

There's good news for Michigan's Florida-bound motorists this season—and a warning, too.

Aside from minor detours, all Florida routes will be free of major construction activity all winter, says Harry N. Rogan, travel manager of Automobile Club of Michigan.

The warning, as Rogan puts it, is: "Don't let southern citrus juice stands which front for illegal gambling operations put the 'squeeze' on you."

Auto Club has received a number of complaints from members citing these tourist traps. The "squeeze" always starts with an offer of a second drink of juice free—followed by an invitation into the back room where they're rolling the dice "just for fun."

A score of different routes to the Sunshine State are in good shape. The ever popular "direct connection", which includes 100 miles and scenic mountain driving, runs through Cincinnati, Ohio; Lexington, Kentucky; Knoxville, Tenn.; Atlanta, Georgia; and Lake City, Florida.

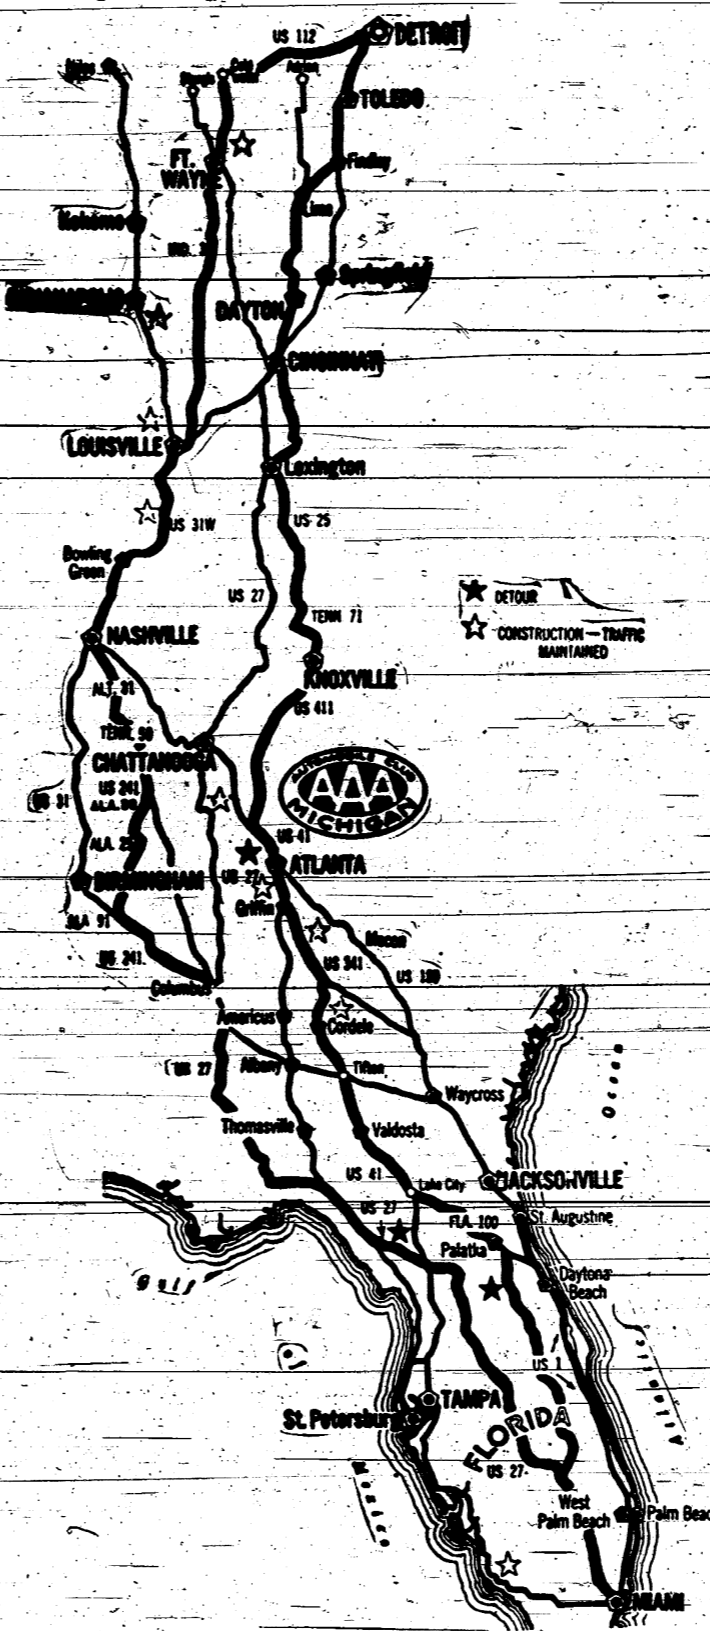

The western route, which is gaining rapidly in popularity, includes no mountainous driving and thus is favored when roads are icy. It is about 100 miles longer than the direct connection, but is only 35 minutes longer in actual behind-the-wheel time, say Auto Club reporters. It runs through Ft. Wayne, Indiana; Louisville, Kentucky; Nashville, Tennessee; and Columbus, Georgia.

Either route takes Michiganians to Miami in four days, St. Petersburg and Tampa in three and one-half days and Jacksonville in three days at a driving rate of 375 miles per day.

Accommodations in Florida vary more widely in price than ever before, says Rogan, due to the completion of thousands of new rooms in tourist courts, hotels, resorts and motels during the past year. Older accommodations in some cases will be slightly lower in price than last year. The newest places will be more expensive. Seaside rooms for two will cost from $80 to $130 per week during the season, while cities not on the ocean offer apartments and houses for $80 to $150 per month. "The sun shines just as regularly inland as it does on the ocean offer apartments economy-minded folks will do well to remember there's usually a swimming pool in Florida's inland cities."

A family of four planning a fast drive to Miami and return will find their round-trip traveling expenses, including car, meals and overnight accommodations, will cost about $236.60. A couple driving to St. Petersburg or Tampa and return will spend about $162.50 on the road. And a couple visiting Jacksonville will spend about $129. These costs are "on-the-road" expenses—only. Rogan points out, and do not include expenses of staying in Florida.

Speed traps are on the wane in the southland, but Rogan warns against the occasional one that pops up each winter. Easiest way to guard against traffic tickets is to observe the following "open highway" speed laws: Ohio, Indiana and Georgia, 50 mph; Kentucky and Florida, 60 mph in daytime, 50 mph at night; Tennessee, stated only as "reasonable and proper."

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

It's Slim's For An "Honest" Meal

Most people thought Slim Benson would probably go broke when he first started his system of letting customers figure out their own checks over at his big diner on the highway.

Slim trusts them to pay for as much as they eat—you simply tell Sally, his cashier, the amount of your bill. It works, too. Take the other day when Buck Harris told Sally his bill was 35¢.

Now I was right there with Buck and I knew all he had was coffee and pie which comes to a quarter. "How come thirty-five cents?" I asked Buck. "Had an extra cup of java the other day, Joe, and forgot all about it—'til now," he says.

From where I sit, most people are basically honest—and that goes for their opinions, too, even though they may be different than our own. I like a glass of beer with my dinner; you may prefer something else... but we all ought to be allowed to "figure it out" ourselves.

Confusing Address
In Chicago, apartment building 999 Lake Shore Drive is not located at 993 Lake Shore Drive. Instead, it is really 239 Lake Shore Drive. Confusing, isn't it? It happened this way: The owner of the building, a railroad enthusiast, named the building in honor of the New York Central's locomotive 999 which made the famous speed run years ago.

KITCHEN PLAN MAY INCLUDE SPACE FOR ALL-PURPOSE ACTIVITY ROOM

Do you know why children like to play in the kitchen? Of course, one reason is because Mother is often there. But another good reason is because of the kitchen floor, which is probably the one floor in the house on which youngsters can spill things without being scolded for their carelessness.

That makes the kitchen area an ideal playroom—except that having children underfoot in the actual "working kitchen" is dangerous for the home-maker and for the small fry, too.

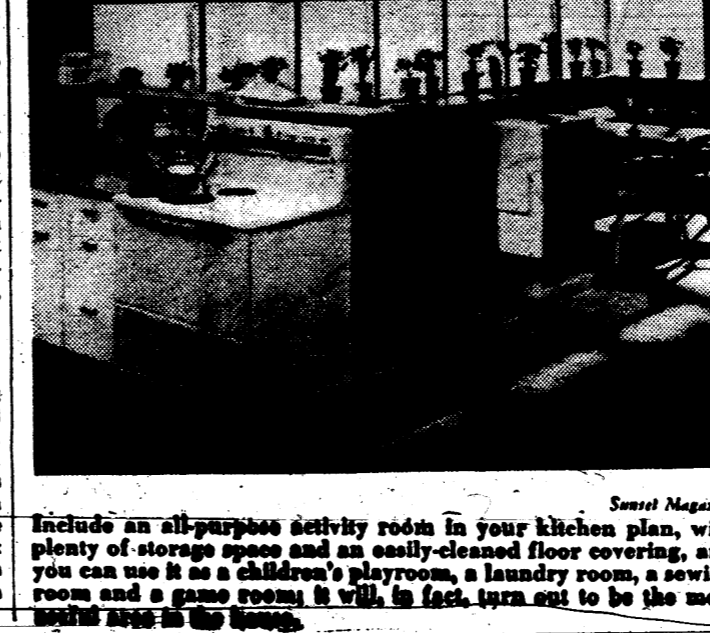

But a child's preference for kitchen floor coverings plus Mother's natural desire to keep children, especially of pre-school age, under some sort of surveillance is a good argument for the extension of the kitchen area to include an all-purpose "activity room" adjoining the "working kitchen" space.

Room Serves Many Purposes
The easily-cleaned floor which makes such an area good as a playroom also makes it valuable as a laundry room, a breakfast room, a utility room, a flower-cutting room, a room for the preparation of foods for home freezing and canning, a storage room for sports equipment and a hobby room for amateur photographers or teen-age chemistry enthusiasts.

Actually, including all these activities in one all-purpose room as part of your kitchen plan is an economical measure. It eliminates the need for separate laundry room, playroom, utility room, sewing room, etc.—all of which would demand extra walls and doors, would cut down on the remaining living space in your home and would be smaller and less satisfactory.

Control Cabinet Space
Properly controlled storage space is also a main feature of this all-purpose room of yours. Cabinets should be planned to do definite storage jobs—to keep children's toys out of the way, to take care of the family's collection of tennis racquets, baseball bats and skis, and to harbor jars for canning and containers for freezing as well as sewing and hobby equipment.

It sounds like a big order—but if you plan such a room properly, you'll find it becoming the center of much of the family's leisure-time activity. It's a safe bet that it will turn out to be the most-used room in the house—and the most satisfactory one.

Include an all-purpose activity room in your kitchen plan, with plenty of storage space and an easily-cleaned floor covering, and you can use it as a children's playroom, a laundry room, a sewing room and a game room. It will, in fact, turn out to be the most used room in the house.
