

American Writes of Visit to Maracaibo

Many tourists are visiting the South American country these days and their hand information is always of interest. We are in receipt of a letter from Caracas where the author, a young man, employee of Sears Roebuck and a letter concerning the city of Caracas was published some time ago. This more recent excursion to the trip to Maracaibo.

Residents of Maracaibo, capital of the north-west State of Zulia, are fond of saying they are the 'Tomb of Venezuela'. The discovery of oil deposits under the waters of Lake Maracaibo several years ago initiated a Zulia boom that has never been repeated.

Monday we took a trip to the beach. The beach is one of the oldest parts of the beach. The beach is one of the oldest parts of the beach. The beach is one of the oldest parts of the beach.

The letter reads: 'We left the airport at Caracas at 9:00 a.m. and the flight to Maracaibo took about one and a half hours, so you can see it is a fast trip. I am not sure if it is the west side of the lake and as far as can be seen on a map of the narrow part of the lake.

The New High School

MANCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL is a brick and block one-story structure. Classrooms are separated by metal partitions that are soundproof. The versatility of these movable partitions allows for larger rooms when necessary. Locker treatment in the new school is novel—allowing for storage of books and clothing alike. All rooms have outside light. The gym or meeting room has a capacity of 1,000.
