

Rail Road Crossing To Be Well Lighted

West Main Street will have danger flasher at the New York Central rail road crossing. This was the report of the Manchester village council.

Local officials point out that they have been making inquiries to try to arrange for the railroad crossing lighted in some way to train at the crossing.

The action was taken following an automobile accident which resulted in a local businessman losing his arm after his car hit a freight train at the crossing.

The local trustees had attempted to see what could be done to have a blinker installed to indicate when a train would be approaching. This idea was tabled when it was found that installation of such a light would cost in the neighborhood of two thousand dollars.

The village council consisted of Consumers Power Co. of Jackson and they have agreed to install a flasher amber danger signal which will blink continuously day and night with intermittent flashes to warn of danger.

The Consumers Power Co. will also install a blinker light west of the track with a warning light to brighten the area around the tracks, which officials believe will lessen danger of cars not going on coming trains.

2 Hospitalized After Accident

Cars driven by Mrs. Edward Cullen on 212 1/2 Gr. field, Jackson and Margaret M. Smith, 6221 Sharon Hill, Rd., Manchester were involved in an accident at the corner of Sharon Hill and Austin Rds. Friday afternoon.

Travel to Mercy hospital, Jackson were Mrs. Cullen and daughter Ellen Ann, six, after they were given first aid by a Manchester physician.

According to Police Chief Carl Schreiber, the accident occurred at 4 p.m. as Miss Smith's car traveled south crossing Austin Rd. was hit by the Cullen station wagon coming east. The officer said Mrs. Cullen apparently lost control of her car, after hitting the headlights of the Smith car, with consequent little damage. The station wagon hit a mail box, broke or the utility pole in two places, went over a fence and smashed into the side of a tool shed on the farm of Leona and Earl Wall, moving a concrete sidewalk foot 2 1/2 feet coming to a halt.

Two other passengers in the Cullen station wagon were slightly injured. They were Mary Regina, Mrs. Cullen had deep lacerations over her left eye and cuts about her face. Miss Smith was not injured.

What Theodore Roosevelt called the "strenuous life," was a comparatively quiet way of living with the family. Since then we have been speeded up by enforced leisure. The 40-hour week leaves too many hours to fill and too little imagination goes into filling them.

Two other passengers in the Cullen station wagon were slightly injured. They were Mary Regina, Mrs. Cullen had deep lacerations over her left eye and cuts about her face. Miss Smith was not injured.

I now loaf but only one hour a day. As I have never loved to work, I had no concept of how fruitful such a loaf could be, although I have been told that some of the government officials have evolved a method of working while appearing to work to keep the department payroll up to par to avoid cuts in the next budget. That prolonged doing nothing is depressive of both the person and the spirit. To listen to radio or television for the hour is to fill time with chatter and noise. Noise is not a time-filler. It is only noise. I have never realized how ugly the human singing voice can be if it is an unaccompanied untrained voice. I can only think of Lily Pons who is everlastingly beautiful and then some female composer on the radio who is musicologist.

As soprano, mezzo-soprano, alto or even a contralto. It is a loud sound, too loud for a human voice. Whatever it is, it is not a filler of leisure and is better to work on the job during such hours.

The explanation for our bad hearts is that we strain them and tire them by working too hard. How hard is too hard? In the 39 years that I have been earning a living at this and related professions, I have never been tired of my work. But life has been tiring at times because it has seemed so little. Wires and depressions and the sealawagery of politicians, not one does he as soprano, mezzo-soprano, alto or even a contralto. It is a loud sound, too loud for a human voice. Whatever it is, it is not a filler of leisure and is better to work on the job during such hours.

As one lies here, one knows that nobody is indispensable nor that anyone great or small can measure the tolerance of his customer, but lives literally hang on a thread and we might as well make the most of it while we may. One becomes so conscious of how little time there is to live while in a hospital, where those who enter in peril and not all who exit are alive. And so one thinks about how we fill the void of leisure and so little we really do in this

Higher Education In Great Demand

An apparent increase in employer demand for well trained college and university graduates probably is a direct reflection of the nation's robust economic health. From many quarters—business, educational and technical fields—comes the complaint that not enough engineers or teachers or other specialists are available to fill current needs. The shortages of graduate engineers and teachers appears particularly great.

Whatever the reasons, prospective employers interviewed Middle State University students at a greatly increased rate during the recently concluded fall term. The number of placement interviews with students by business, industry and education during the term was 58 per cent greater than during the same term a year ago, according to Jack Breslin, M. S. U. Placement Bureau director.

The bureau arranged 276 interview schedules for 232 representatives of business, industry and education. A total of 151 students were interviewed, 38 per cent more than in the prior fall term. Breslin, using estimates from employers, listed the following occupations as average monthly starting salaries in major fields for students with bachelor degrees:

Agriculture, $266; business service, $305; communication arts, $292; education, $290; engineering, $328; home economics, $300.

ALAN GREEN, who writes mystery stories and adventures, died mysteriously at a Chinese shop-smy company, and was wrapped in a certain kind of crisp little Chinese cookie. The paper in the first man's cookie read: "You are about to embark upon a business venture that will net you millions." The second man's cookie read: "You will soon meet a tempestuous red-head whom you will take on a long journey." Then the third man opened his little slip. This one read: "Help! I'm trapped in a Chinese bakery!"

Juvenile Delinquency May be Easily Traced to Disrespect

I received a notice from a press agent firm that the First Commercial Bank of Chicago has instituted a "Teen Age Loan Fund" by which a kid can borrow money from a bank without going to his parents for the cash. This is another example of the breakdown of the home, of parental authority. It turns the adolescent into a big shot. I can imagine this conversation: "Father: What do you want $20 for? Do you think money grows on trees?" "Son: Aw, stop nagging. I need the dough." "Father: What for? How is it if you spend every cent of your allowance? How is it that you can't save a nickel a week?" "Son: Saving is old-fashioned. What's the good of saving? You've saved all your life and what've you got? You're always worried about money and nag if anybody asks you for a buck." "Father: You've never wanted for anything people like us can afford."
