Eyes On The Ball

CLOSE TO THE END OF THE GAME. Tense, anxious faces are reflected in this picture. Saline was leading Dundee. It was at this point in the game that the Hornets made an attempt to freeze the ball with slightly more than 4 minutes to play. The strategy failed.

EARI CULLITON (11), AL RENTSCHLER (21), and TOM SIMPSON (10) watch Jim England make the ball away from expert Tom Lawson of Manchester in last Thursday night's District playoff game. Saline won 68-65 after 60 minutes of heated play. Neville Hart, the tournament manager estimated that more than 2000 fans witnessed the game.

Hornets 'Take' League Leaders; Drop 18th To 4th Place Club

Trim Manchester Dutchmen In Close Contest, Strategy Fails

Coach Hill in 'Chips Down' Contest

It was a howling, frenzied overflow crowd that watched Saline trip Manchester last Thursday night in a game that had Hornets rosters sitting up straight throughout the 60-minute ordeal. Victory meant a playoff with Dundee—previously beaten by Saline in Huron League competition. After a hectic fourth quarter the Hornets prevailed, 68-65.

A big third period during which Saline was outscored, 20-15, by the Dutchmen, made last quarter's Hornets heroes necessary. And it was quite a quarter as the lead changed hands nine times and the victory wasn't assured for the Hornets until St. Woods scored on a layup at the five-second mark to guarantee Saline's 17th straight triumph.

Field goals by Earl Culliton, who made 10 points in the last period, gave Saline a 62-61 edge but Jerry Aiken, a senior who proved out, gave Dundee a 44-41 lead at the 1:44 mark. St. Woods then scored from the free throw line and the 41-43 lead was narrowed to two shots in the basket. Then, at the 1:08 mark, Al Rentschler scored for Saline, twenty-two seconds later he hit a free throw and Dundee led 44-41.

Manchester pulled up within a point as Tom Lawson dropped a field goal with 25 seconds left. Manchester, which carried a 15-1 record into the game, lost star player Dan Kiethe at the five-minute mark. Connie Gonyer (four minutes), and Adams (40 seconds) took to the floor in the final period.

Woods counted 24 points to pace the scorers while Adams had 16 for Manchester. Each team made 28 baskets but Saline counted 16 of 31 from the foul line to Manchester's 22 of 32.

Saline came to the end of a great season in the Class C finale at Tecumseh as Dundee exacted a 44-43 toll with a late surge. The Hornets, who had won 17 straight, were eliminated.

Lenon Meditation "The Cross Is Not The End"

By Rev. Henry McKenzia

The longing for eternal life is universal. In Japan, believers kneel at the graves of their ancestors. In India the corpse is carried to the sacred Ganges and cast upon the stream to insure eternal life. In Egypt tombs are filled with food and clothing to make sure of comfortable living in the next world.

We cannot cover every island of the sea, relating different ways to sustain life after death. The longing is as wide as humanity. That man is born to die is as true as the law of gravitation. We observe Easter with a different meaning. Victory meant a playoff with Dundee—previously beaten by Saline in Huron League competition. After a hectic fourth quarter the Hornets prevailed, 68-65.

Auto Production Gains

Shows is small town auto dealer meeting leading industrialists to discuss the business outlook.

Solving the views of grass roots America, James J. Nance (right) president, Studebaker-Packard Corp. reviews progress with Donald D. Gross of Toledo, Ohio, a representative midwestern dealer who attended an economic review meeting at Detroit.

The industrialist told the dealer business would continue strong in the communities where merchants fostered good promotional and sales activities. Discussing the auto industry outlook for 1956, Nance told the visitor that his company is ready with competitive manufacturing costs and modernized facilities to set its sights on a larger percentage of the automobile market, but ultimate results will depend on local purchasing growing out of aggressive work.

Nance points out that a major key to his company's formula for growth is the building of strong "main street" dealers who are outstanding citizens of their communities and who take a personal pride in their products and their service to customers and friends.

"People have come to expect solid value and sound dealing from the name Packard and Studebaker," says Nance, "and our company is in a position today to increase that reputation. We are able to exercise the proven advantages of a full-line company while, as a compact organization, retaining the flexibility necessary to bring the public major product advances well in advance of the times the industry otherwise would develop them."

Nance explains that the company feels it has laid the groundwork during its first full year for a sustained period of growth. With a full line of automotive products, an improved dealer organization, and a modernized plant, Studebaker-Packard plans to devote its energies to building aggressive marketing programs around its newly-styled cars and trucks.

Movement From Cities Brings Insatiable Demand For Space

The latest mass movement of population away from the central cities into the suburbs has produced an apparently insatiable demand for more space, according to Harlow O. Whittemore, professor of landscape architecture at the University of Michigan.

A naturally restrained city planning expert, Professor Whittemore points out that the competition for space requires careful planning for an organic whole so that every part of the city fits together without waste of precious space.

Taking a long look into the future, Professor Whittemore predicts that residential neighborhoods of 2,000 to 3,000, each with a central business district, industrial area, railway yards, and large parks and parkways.

"Central business and industrial areas," the professor continues, "will be separated from each other and from residential districts by green belts or tree-planted parkways. Two or three parks will be located on hills or in valleys, and along streams or lake fronts."

He predicts that "the city centers of the future" will be self-contained public buildings including libraries and a shopping center, along with urban ground parking garages.

"A limited number of main-line railroads, highways, and expressways will provide efficient and safe transportation," Professor Whittemore asserts.

Discussing the new demand for space, he points out that a 100 percent increase in population would mean a demand for ten per cent more structures and ten per cent more space.

Of Interest To Farmers

Mr. Johnson says that there are two other meetings which will interest farmers in this area. Saturday, March 17 at 10 a.m. a Poultry Demonstration will be held at the Robert Copp's Orchard, located at 3885 Spencer Rd., between 7-mile and 8-mile roads, 1 mile east of Whitmore Lake, near Crookston. Mr. Karl D. Bailey, District Horticulture Specialist, will be on hand to direct the demonstration. The demonstration will be held Saturday to accommodate those people who possibly attend on week days. This will be the one and only poultry demonstration this year.

The Western Spring Spraying Recommendations meeting will be held Tuesday, March 27 beginning at 7:30 in the basement meeting room of the New County Building, Ann Arbor. Mr. Bailey will be the speaker at this meeting. Don Johnson says those attending should use the side entrance door on N. Main St., near Ann Street.

A Discussion On The Need Of Sewage Treatment

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of articles to help acquaint the village with the facts regarding a sewage system. HOW IS SEWAGE COLLECTED?

The disposal of human wastes in a petitive man was simple. The wastes were served well, but as communal life became more prevalent the most simple method was continued to serve but eventually became an odorous nuisance. Perhaps for this reason village locations were frequently changed. In many of the countries the night soil was collected in pails and discarded in some remote place. The discarded merchandise is removed and repaired by Goodwill handicapped workers for resale.

spaces between the road and north and south on Adams street and then the lateral continues to adjoining streets. Another Main road could probably be constructed from the treatment and disposal plant in the direction of the New High School district. Where the sewer crosses the river on Main street it would be necessary to construct a pumping station. Because of the rolling topography of Manchester it will be necessary to place sewers rather deep in some locations. After further study it may be found that it might be more economical to construct several pumping stations than to excavate for deep sewers.

Nearly all homes in Manchester can be served by sewers in the basement. It is true that some houses are located so that it is nearly impossible to serve them by a sewer. A complete survey with final design will bring out all of these facts.

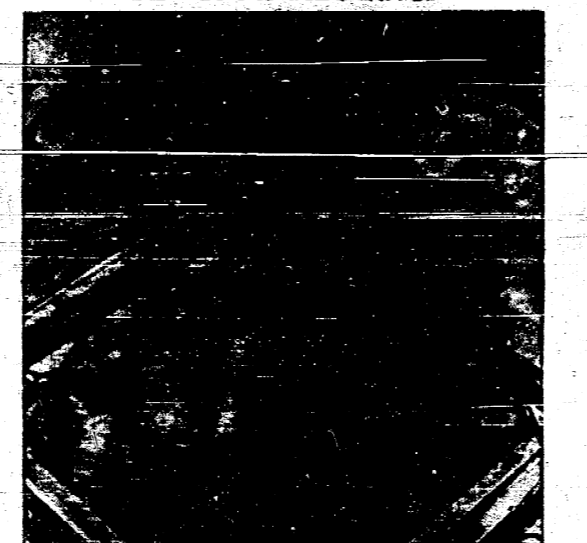

The next article will discuss the method of Sewage Treatment, and ways and means of financing the building of the Sewage and Disposal system.

Complete Tests

Clay Crest 229787, a registered Brown Swiss cow owned by Amos C. & Robert D. Curtis, Manchester, Mich. has recently completed a 305 day lactation record on herd test of 32782 MILK 3.41 per cent 481.15 Fat on three times a day milking according to Fred S. Jette, Secretary of the Brown Swiss Cattle Breeders' Association, Detroit, Wisconsin.

The common safety pin, now a "must" in domestic life, was invented by a man named Hunt in 1817.

Fish Sticks Find Favor

They say fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong. And we say fifty million (pounds) of fish sticks must prove something, too. The amount of frozen fish sticks packed in the first nine months of 1956 has topped the record. And it is because we like these slender fingers of ocean-fresh fish because they are already breaded and cooked—no boiler at all to prepare. Breaded and fried like the best because they are easy to eat, and mention tender and delicious, too.

To best fish sticks the Blue Bird test kitchen recommend several methods: in a 325° oven for 12 to 15 minutes, with the fish sticks spread on a shallow pan or baking sheet; in the broiler, with the fish sticks about 4 inches from the heat, for about 6 minutes, turning once; or in a skillet containing a small amount of fat, over low to medium heat, for 8 to 12 minutes, turning once.

Any of these methods produce perfect fish sticks—golden brown and crisp outside, tender and moist inside. Which ever you choose, don't forget a sauce to complement their flavor. A mayonnaise is quickly and easily made by combining 1/4 cup mayonnaise with 1/4 cup finely chopped and drained cucumber.

Lowly Lime Bean Tells Blood Type

ANN ARBOR—The lowly lima bean and other plants play an important part in finding out what blood type you are, says a University of Michigan physical anthropologist.

According to Associate Prof. Fredrickson, the blood stream develops with such minute differences that there is no physical chemical way presently known of distinguishing between "A," "B," "O" blood types, or between any of the other less well-known types.

"But they are recognizable in general as certain kinds of organic compounds, and these same compounds occur in the plant world," Professor Fredrickson says.

"We are now able to test for 'A' blood type with an extract of lima beans," he says, "with an extract from the European gorse bush, and for one of the lesser-known 'B' types with some Brazilian plants," he declares.

Finding the "anti-O" testing serum in the gorse bush was a 1930 find by Dr. William Boyd of Southern Medical School, London. "It is now able to test for 'A' blood type with an extract of lima beans," he says, "with an extract from the European gorse bush, and for one of the lesser-known 'B' types with some Brazilian plants," he declares.

Five Co. Farmers Complete Course At Mich State

Five Washtenaw County young farm leaders were among 81 who have completed an advanced farm training short course at Michigan State University. They were James Brandbury, Jr., Dexter; Carl Lester, Dexter; Robert Mast, Dexter; William McCalla of Ann Arbor and Albert Rublig of Dexter.

The Washtenaw County farmers, all graduates of the Michigan State University short course program traveled to East Lansing one day each week for 12 weeks to attend classes. In the morning, they discussed farm policy and prepared their own farm programs. A noon luncheon featured prominent speakers from the University staff and in the afternoon the farmers attend classes in either soils science or dairy production. Among the subjects covered in the dairy class were: management practices, breeding, problems of the bulk tank and the Michigan State University dairy science, the students talked about fure, fertilizers, and minimum tillage practices.

Short course officials are planning to expand the advanced training program and next year to offer further training for graduates of the present course in addition to the bulk tank and dairy science, according to Don Johnson, County Agricultural agent.

Graceful Birds Find Haven Near Here

People living in the Pleasant Lake area northeast of Manchester are enjoying five stately visitors who are staying in Freedom township last week to find a haven in the free west end of the Lake which is kept from freezing by the warm water flowing in as a byproduct of the Michigan Consolidated Gas Company's pump station, operations there.

The visitors are adult swans—huge white birds with jet black bills. They are among the herons and greets of all wild waterfowl. They have made themselves at home to the great delight of the residents on that lake, and passing motorists.

Dr. Joseph Van Tine, curator of birds at the University museum, says that the swans can be expected to remain at the lake for several weeks unless unduly disturbed. He described the visit as "somewhat unusual" for this particular area.

Dr. Van Tine then related that they winter along the Atlantic coast concentrating in the Chesapeake Bay Area. Then in late winter they begin their northern migration.

"The first major stopping point on the northward route is usually Lake Erie near the town of Erie, Pa. and sometimes he says he has seen them at the mouth of the river."

"Although the main concentration is on Lake Erie, small groups of the island lakes, where they happen to be open water. The five on Pleasant Lake may make up such a group, although I would say it is decidedly unusual for them to appear in Washtenaw County."

Dr. Van Tine said the swans proceed to their nesting grounds, leaving the lake in late May. Following this, they will continue their migration flying to the James Bay area for another stop-over. They will eventually arrive in the Tundra Country of Hudson's Bay. He noted that the Manchester bird club has been steadily increasing in number in recent years, thanks to the absolute protection afforded by Federal law.
