There's a breathless hush in the house tonight,
The dog daren't bark, Mom gnaws at her nails,
Pop tears at his hair (there's not much of it there)
Then he mutters and mumbles, groans and rales.
The TV is silent, the radio's still
The kids creen about, unkidishly quiet,
Sis wisely has hidden her new Easter bonnet
'Cause the sight of it now would produce a riot.
Her birthday date just created a ruction.
Sis is no longer a "tax deduction."

Sis is no longer a "tax deduction."

There's a deadline to bent, Dad fumes and burns
As in every year past, (he swears this is the last).

He has put off completing his tax returns.

Mom stokes him with coffee. Dad's cross as a bear.

So, Fellow-Old-Timer, do you remember back there when all women's clubs joined in the national knitting bee to provide sleeveless sweaters and "wristlets" for "Our Boys Over There?" who lived in "dug tribute to Dr. Henry Earle Riggs outs" and "trenches," and were fighting to "Make the World Safe for Democracy?" Remember kids at school making "trench candles" and buying War Saving Stamps?

Worship Services at Washtenaw Hospital

Every Friday morning, worship services are neld at the Weshtenaw County Hospital by one of a group of approximately 15 ministers, working through the Ann Arbor-Washtenaw Council of Churches program of service to institutions. In the picture the service is being conducted by the Rev. Rus sell Fuller, paster of the Memorial Christian Church with Mrs. Ruth McDonald as soloist and Mrs. Jacob Kelder as pianist. The group of ministers represents the various denominations of the hospital's residents. Services are conducted in a worship center set up within the hospital. Lecturn and altar cloths used in the service were made and donated by the Mary Circle of United Lutheran Women of Trinity Lutheran Church, Ann Arbor.

One of the most memorable Easter services we can member began with our minister looking out at the East congregation that crowded pews and chairs placed in congregation that crowded pews and chairs placed asises of the church and saying." I wish to extend mar Sunday welcome to our faithful attendants, and mail welcome to many of you here this morning. I'd tell all of you that the Almighty and I are here ever day, regularly, and we'd like to see all of you here know many of you are parents who send your child Sunday school and church regularly; but wouldn't it ter to bring them than to send them?

Even tho Easter was late this year. Spring managed to hold off until she will not be decked in her finery when new Easter bonnets and finery make their appearance. But whether Easter is early or Spring late young sters will find the same delight in their annual erghunts and fuzzy toy rabbits and chickens and Easter baskets.

Ode to an Easter Egg

Wha' Hoppen?

Very early Easter morning Hiding eggs around the lawn
A sicepy, shivering Daddy
Braved a chilly Springtime dawn,
So that when the kids awakened soon,

According to their habit,
They could search for what was left them
By the faithful Easter rabbit

And then, his task completed.
He retired to his bed.
And resumed his peaceful snoring
With the blanket round his head

The nests of many colored eggs
Red, yellow, green and blue
Lay sparkling 'neath the bushes
When the sun came peeking through

A solitary rooster chanced to spy The eggs which lay
In gay profusion at his feet
As he chanced to pass that way.

He blinked his eyes in disbelief.
And gave his head a shake.
Then crowed. "These aren't much like
The ones that Mother used to make!"

By Violators One of the practices which began not too many years ago in observing Easter, that of giving tiny chicks, ducks and rabbits to youngsters, is one which we believe we could do very well without. The delight of a child at receiving such living toys is heartwarming, but the appearance of the sometimes-pastel tinted half-dead pet a few days later is a sickning sight. Unless adequate housing, supervision and care is provided, these small living pets inevitably become victims of careless, tho' loving, small hands.

A cute plush animal in an Easter basket would delight any youngster on Easter morning as much as a living pet.
