Armed Forces Week Hi, Neighbor! By Ella V. MacQueen

This is Armed Forces Week, and throughout the nation at service camps, installations, bases and air fields, the four services, Marines, Navy, Army and Air Force, are exhibiting their newest weapons, ships, tanks, planes and, most important, servicemen in the uniforms of their adopted service.

For our own special observance of Armed Forces Week, we invite our residents to visit The Soline Observer office, to inspect the first model of the latest national monument to be erected in Washington, D. C.

De Weldon's "dream creation" had been turned down by the Washington Art Planning Board as "too big and unsuitable for any site in the city."

Three months later, when we drove up to the convention headquarters in Milwaukee, a Marine truck was parked at the hotel entrance, and sculptor De Weldon stood waiting.

De Weldon, a typical Frenchman to the core, after the Marine veterans had voted to sponsor the memorial statue in fulfilling his life's ambition and dream. I give you this my most modest offering.
