Take Your Pick Of New Trends

Your lucky stars say, "This is the year to buy furnishings for the home."

That's because home fashions—after many sallies in various directions—are finally launched on a safe and sure course in 1958. The trend is—really—no single trend at all but a freedom of choice that has never been equalled.

You like the traditional styling? It's here—and here to stay. All centuries and all continents are represented.

You like Modern? Having come of age and lost its self-conscious look, it appears in many versions, both crisp and soft. You like both? Then mix them.

INDIVIDUALITY is the logical result of this diversified condition. You choose what you like but first it's wise to acquaint yourself with the complete selection: Early American, French, Italian Provincial, Venetian, Scandinavian, Oriental, Spanish, Mexican, pure Modern, and Modern that takes its inspiration from the past (usually called Contemporary).

THE TWO MERGER between Traditional and Modern is one factor that makes 1958 furniture fashions a wise investment.

Representations of age-old favorites are functional in scale and engineering and are frequently given a contemporary setting.

On the other hand, the fresh new designs of today are borrowing more and more from the past, and modern interiors frequently introduce a smattering of antiques.

ENRICHMENT is an effect that will be noticed in the new home fashions: more decorative detail, more curves, more recognition of beautiful wood grain, and greater display of craftsmanship.

FUNCTIONAL DESIGN is found in both Traditional and Modern styling. Storage pieces are thoughtfully engineered to do their job well. Space-saving ideas are abundant. Many items of furniture serve a dual purpose, and many pieces are on casters for added convenience.

LEISURE FURNITURE is prominent in the 1958 picture—for the ever-more-popular family room and for porch and outdoor living. So smartly styled are these casual pieces that they are being bought for living rooms, dining rooms and bedrooms, too.

CABINETWOODS being admired include walnut, teak, the various fruitwoods and exotic grains. Well-known cabinetwoods appear in new finishes.

The oiled finish or oiled effect is a subtle charmer. In combination with these are such materials as pewter, brass, plastic, slate, glass and cane.

FABRICS often imitate hand-woven Finis have a "fine art" look. Many are treated to be soil-resistant. Plastics and leathers have new textures and colors.

FLOORS are trending in two directions. Some are wearing smooth-surface floor coverings accented with area rugs—a combination found in the most elegant interiors as well as the most practical family rooms.

Others are carpeted wall-to-wall in new textures, tweeds, needlepoint effects, contemporary patterns and "trotted" colors.

ACCESSORIES are likely to exhibit more elegance, scones, mirrors, clocks and pictures with a classical theme. Lamps are enriched. Lighting fixtures often have a hand-crafted look. And there are more works of art—both originals and reproductions.

WALLS wear paint or wallpaper, a matter of personal preference. Papers are being shown in subtle textures and small neat all-over designs that makes pleasant backgrounds for furniture. Bolder patterns that tell a story are usually confined to one wall or a small area. Wallpaper murals are available in all price ranges.

Wall paint is likely to echo the color of the carpet; if white is chosen, it will contain just the hint of a tint, borrowed from the other major color in the room.

Woodwork is painted to match the walls in contemporary rooms; contrasting woodwork is sometimes used for an authentic traditional background.

WINDOWS tend to blend into the wall color, to produce a look of spaciousness and serenity. The ideal treatment is both functional and decorative—controlling light and privacy as well as framing the window or concealing its shortcomings in an attractive way.

—DRIVE SAFELY!

LADIES OF FASHION—Pages of time were turned back to 1902 in Clinton Sunday as the 50th anniversary of that town's Women's Club was celebrated. Many of the members were dressed like the one above. Mrs. Frank Hansen, Manchester, was chairman of the halibout display. Mrs. E. F. Vaughn, of Clinton, is president of the club and Mrs. Jack Lancaster is general chairman of the celebration.

A Fresh Note in Home Decorating

Although furniture is a long-term investment, color is the fashion factor that can be counted upon to change from time to time giving constant freshness to the home.

Monochromatic color schemes are still favorites because they're easy to live with. They have serenity. And they lend themselves to change by the mere switch of accent colors.

This is the scheme in which one hue predominates. Walls, floor, window treatments and large pieces of furniture appear in different shades and tints of this color, with or without a contrasting color in the accessories and smaller pieces.

Popular choice for monochromatic backgrounds: off-white, beige, gray, blue, green, pink, gold, mauve.

Analogous color schemes are attracting increased interest. These employ two or more colors that are neighbors on the color wheel. Blue and green, for example. Pink and orange. Orange and yellow. Blue and violet. Pink and mauve.

Off-white for walls and window treatments makes an effective spring pick-up-for-rooms that are dark or small or crowded. It gives a sense of spaciousness. The white contains a tint of the other major color in the room—to avoid glare.

Gold and white constitute one of the most elegant color schemes of the times. Limiting the choice to two colors, without further accent, suggests formality.

Neutral colors used together are smart: grays, browns, beiges, white and black. These earthy tones are usually accented with small shocks of bright color.

Blues are staging a comeback and threatening to outdo the popular turquoise. Orange tones (turquoise, periwinkle, moon tan, terracotta, burnt orange) are high style. In strong, bright versions these are used only for accents. The pastel apricot makes a pleasant background color.

Olive greens are readily available, especially in fabrics, and have a fresh look when used with other blues and greens. The versatile olive shade has the knack of looking good with almost any color.

Yellow is predicted as the next high-fashion hue. Black and white combinations are fresh for porch and outdoor living schemes.

The Change We've Seen In Furniture

Like Mother's cooking, the home we grew up in and fondly remember improves with age and the passing years.

Around World War I furniture became simpler, but comfort was not accepted as a basic requirement. By the late 30's and early 40's the revolt against stiffness induced the large overuffed sofa—ponderous and difficult to move.

It wasn't until the early 50's that the buying public accepted the idea that furniture could be well-constructed and comfortable and still have clean, light lines.
