... the latest news from Washington of special interest to Michigan ...

A POWER-MAD Egyptian, egged on by the Kremlin, is challenging American interests in the Middle East. Using the "big lie" technique over eleven transmitters of Radio Cairo and six new ones bought from Czechoslovakia, Nasser is broadcasting inflammatory poison through the Nile delta, N. Africa, Ghana and the Sudan. He has fomented revolutions in Syria and Lebanon, a near-revolution in Iraq, and his latest thrust has toppled the government of Iraq, a step toward the democratic Baghdad Pact alliance.

If successful, the Nasser-Khrushchev effort will dupes millions of poverty-stricken illiterates of the Arab world, who yearn for bread and a sense of personal worth, into buying communism. On the day that happens, a giant pendulum will have swung against the free world. No one likes the thought of sending American fighting men to the scorching desert areas, but we must remember that Nasser's activities, even though internally limited, are aggressive in the truest sense. Internal aggression of this type is every bit as dangerous as overthrow by armed force.

In this is written, United States marines are moving into Lebanon, British paratroopers from Cyprus are landing in Jordan, and French troops are heading for the eastern Mediterranean.

In New York, the United Nations is debating the possibility of dispatching a UN force to the Middle East.

In this perilous moment in our history, we can be sure that President Eisenhower did not order troop movements off-the-cuff. The democrats realize all too well the thin edge of danger on which they tread. One slip, one breath of armed forces in this day of atomic and hydrogen weapons, could result in the annihilation of the human race.

The United States is taking a calculated risk to protect American lives and interests and, if we lose, we can pay the price. For the time being is a stalemate in the Middle East, but the danger sequence is too frightening to contemplate. In the meantime, members of Congress of both political parties are rallying around the President in a show of support which I am confident reflects the feeling of all Americans.

THE HOMELEY ONION held the attention of the Senate recently when my bill to outlaw trading in onion futures passed swiftly by voice vote. The delighted to report that producers of the pungent crop, who until now have been victimized by ruthless commodity exchange speculators, can look forward to substantial savings.

For years, perishable onions have spelled trouble for farmers. Violent price swings brought on by a few greedy speculators drove prices down to almost nothing long enough to line the pockets of a few "operators," then shot them up again. Onions simply do not lend themselves to futures trading, and both houses of Congress recognized this in passing the legislation. The Senate amended the measure to include penalties and is confident, after this provision has received House approval, that the President will sign the measure into law.

Interestingly enough, the individual who can claim a major share of credit for pushing through the bill to protect growers of the aromatic bulb is a gentleman with an aromatic name — Mr. Jack Rose of East Lansing, Secretary of the National Onion Association. Onion farmers owe Jack a tremendous debt of gratitude for the long hours of work he put in at the Capitol.

SKULL CAVE ON Mackinac Island is a narrow aperture in solid limestone that widens enough to permit a man to sit upright. The cave is also known as Henry's Hiding Place, for here the fugitive Henry Alexander Henry found refuge in his flight from the Indians after the massacre at Fort Michillimackinac on the mainland during the Pontiac Conspiracy in 1763.

Hare's Traffic Policy Attacked

Lansing — William Palmer, executive secretary of the Michigan Petroleum Institute, spoke out today against the theory that the best way to reduce holiday traffic fatalities is to stay home.

The theory was most recently expressed by Secy. of State James M. Hare, and has drawn criticism from the tourist groups. Palmer said that he was not seeking a dispute with Hare, because Hare was only expressing a thought which had been voiced by other public officials and private citizens alike.

"Americans," Palmer said, "have never been ones to shiver off from an activity simply because there are some dangers involved. If they had there would be no swimming, hunting, sailing, flying or fishing. In all these activities, the answer to danger is careful and wise enjoyment of the facilities and equipment which our modern society places within reach of all of us."

DRIVING AND ECONOMY
Palmer, formerly executive secretary of West Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, said the entire economy of the state could suffer serious injury if the public generally became convinced it was too dangerous to drive on holidays.

"People do not have to wait until the last minute to start an outing, or to return from one. They do not have to drive at break-neck speed. They do not have to clog one or two main routes," Palmer said. "It is more sensible and a lot more fun to take a leisurely trip, to enjoy the scenery along the way, to stop frequently for a refreshing break, to get off the beaten track and see some of the thousands of neglected beauty spots that Michigan offers the traveler."

Palmer urged that business and industry generally follow the example of the petroleum, automobile and insurance industries and support official campaigns to teach the public to make wise use of the automobile, "a peculiarly American mechanism which has broadened the vision and life of our American more than any other invention in history."

The average 14-year-old boy today is five inches taller and 24 pounds heavier than the 14-year-old of 25 years ago, the July Readers Digest reports; and he is the size of a 16-year-old of 25 years ago.

A quart of milk for children and three cups for adults or its equivalent in milk products will take care of daily calcium needs very well, say nutritionists at Michigan State University.

Thirty-six years ago, says the July Reader's Digest, a Missouri power company paid $2750 to have a smokestack built. When it had to be torn down recently, the wrecking company's charge was $13,470.

Are you neglecting yourself?

Many mothers are so busy looking after their families that they often neglect themselves. Are you like that? Do you, for example, give your children plenty of milk but neglect to drink enough yourself. You should drink at least three glasses of milk a day—especially if you're over thirty-five.

Milk, you see, helps rebuild body tissue as they wear out. Helps you feel more vigorous and alert. Milk keeps your skin smooth and free of premature wrinkles. Even gives your hair more sheen. That's why you—feel younger... look younger... when you drink more milk.

A YOUNGSTER WALKED into a drugstore and asked for a job.

"What's your name?" asked the druggist.

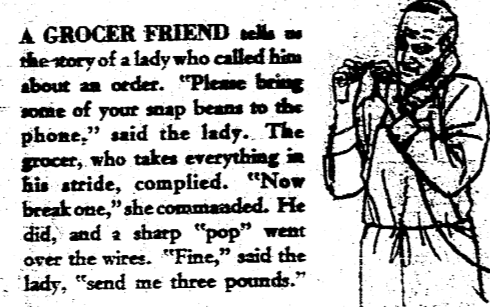

"Alexander Graham Bell," replied the boy.

"I guess that's a pretty well-known name, son."

"It ought to be," said the boy. "I've been delivering groceries in this neighborhood for two years now."

EVEN ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL himself (the inventor, not the delivery boy) couldn't have guessed how important his invention would become to us. The phone plays a part in just about everything you do. Take your vacation, for example. What it means you'll want to be able to relax and enjoy yourself. So take care of all the worries beforehand, phone ahead to make all your reservations or let friends know when you'll arrive. It'll be such a weight off your mind and for such a small cost!

THE REASON we mention this incident is to show that there isn't any end to the telephone's usefulness. Every day someone hits on a new way of saving time and money with the phone.

PARTING SHOT! Drive so that your driver's license will expire before you do.
